THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

NORMAL DEMAND IN GENERAL.

The report of the wholesale and retail men place last week's business as normal for the season, with a fairly good supply of flowers which cleaned up at satisfactory prices. Early asters are about over, while the late varieties are good or bad in localities, depending on weather conditions; the difference where rain has fallen is most marked. New York state asters, late varieties, which have been handled largely in the market, have suffered much from drought, and as yet very few have been received. American Beauty, Russell, Ophelia and Columbia are leaders in the rose line. Columbia, although limited in supply, looks very promising. Easter lilies are coming a little too freely, some of the dealers' storage boxes being well filled with them. Prices, however, hold up pretty well. Roseums are in fair demand. Gladioli are on the wane, some good stock still, but stems are getting shorter. Dahlias are coming along; not much doing as yet, although the sample lots are of good quality. Golden Glow and Smith's advance are the golden chrysanthemums. Cattleyas are very scarce, bringing from $1 to $1.50 each.

SOUTHERN SMILAX.

William Rehder, Wilmington, N. C., spent Labor day in this city visiting his trade. Mr. Rehder is a grower-retailer with 70,000 feet of glass at his country place and a store and conservatory in the city. He also makes a specialty of gathering and shipping southern smilax. This vine favors rather high ground and is mostly found in pine woods. When grown in the open on old fences or small trees in sort of hedge rows, the foliage is small and not so desirable. In the woods, the leaves are larger and a rich glossy green. It grows for the most part on trees up to a height of 20 feet from the ground. Their method of gathering is to cut off at the root and with buckskin gloves, grasp the main stems which are thorny, pull the whole vine down and then cut it up. They do not like to cut much before September 1, not being able to get the negro collectors into the woods on account of moccasin snakes, which thickly infest the vines and tree branches during the summer. Early in September, the snakes get out into the sunny places, prior to hibernating. Smilax does not grow in wet, swampy places and patches are often long distances apart. Old beds are favorite places where it grows luxuriantly. As far as possible they ship the day it is cut, using autos instead of horses now to convey the stock from the woods. Farmers are rapidly coming to the front in the south, the new generation using intensive methods of culture. Potatoes are planted in early March, four feet between the rows, corn is sown in April, when the potatoes are lifted and this space is then given to cow peas. When the corn is ripe, it is stripped of its leaves, which gives light to the peas which are allowed to ripen. This gives three full crops a season.

NOTES.

Edward Reid recently made an auto trip through Chester and Lancaster counties, visiting growers of these localities, where he found crops had suffered from lack of rain. Some growers were closing half their places, others had managed to get coal screenings in addition to their 50 per cent. Half, and in many instances more of the force, were overseas or in other war work. Women were being engaged, particularly in the stores. All were hopeful, however, and were trying to keep going to a level with the buds, protecting them from thorns or other rough usage. The growers, and grade numbers are printed on the upper end of these sheets. This is the ideal way to pack roses, and is certain to become standard in the trade.

Miss Celia Marchentz, daughter of Paul Marchentz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., was married September 1, to N. J. Edwards, of Goldsboro, N. C., at the residence of the bride's parents in this city. The ceremony was simple but beautiful, the decorations in keeping with wartime conditions. After an extended honeymoon, the young couple will reside at Goldsboro.

Florists should find encouragement for future business from the report of the attendance of visitors to Atlantic City, America's greatest summer resort, which last Sunday and over Labor day, broke all records. The restaurants and hotels found it extremely difficult to handle the great crowds, having frequently to close and lock their doors.

The Subway Florist, H. Reverman, with a stand at 60th and Market streets, and a store on 60th above Market, purchased the store property last week for $7,000. Harry is a hustler who has greatly increased his business in the past few years.

John Burton and family spent a portion of last week with Commodore Westcott at his Westtown bungalow on Barnegat bay. Fishing has not been so good this year; probably the "subs" have scared them off.

The Leo Niessen Co. is featuring extra fine asters, wonderful outdoor stock, together with American Beauty roses, Easter lilies and choice cattleyas. The quality of all stock is reported better than usual.

The H. H. Battles Century Flower Shop, which closed July 1 and was to have opened on September 1, has been closed for the duration of the war.

Arthur Niessen has been looking over his dahlia growers recently, and reports he never saw the plants looking better. All the leading varieties will be found in quantity when the season opens about September 12.

E. A. Wallace, a retired florist of Berlin, N. J., has joined the Joseph Heacock Co.'s force. Carl Cortis finds business better than last year, with their first cuts of Columbia very promising.

D. T. Connor is rearranging the heating pipes at the Westcott nurseries, Laurel Hill, so as to conform to the new heating regulations and use but half the greenhouses.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Cut-flower Exchange is painting up to make the store inviting the coming season. A good line of asters, gladioli and roses are features here.

The John Wanamaker greenhouses are to be closed down during the war, so that the employes can engage in war work.

Edward Reid is strong on roses, asters and gladioli, and reports a good summer trade.

K.

New York.

CONDITIONS FAR FROM BRIGHT.

There was no improvement in the condition of business during the past week; in fact, some of the wholesalers thought it the dulllest week of the summer. The state of uncertainty from which the whole trade is suffering is a deterring factor toward any speedy improvement. Briefly stated, in the light of what has already happened, the best that may be hoped for in the future cannot be extravagant prosperity, but we would like to know the worst. The man who remarked that life was just one blankety, blank thing after another, got it right so far as the florists have been concerned for the past year. First, the coal shortage of last winter, then the 50 per cent cut for the coming season, the scarcity of labor, the cutting off of imports and other features, have all contributed to weigh down the business. Now we learn that the head of the Reserve Banks has sent out letters to the bankers advising them to curtail loans to "non-essential" industries. It may be that what a popular editor calls, "The Aviation calamity," in which $4,000,000 has been wasted and the lives of a number of brave men sacrificed has rendered necessary more rigid economy.

September 2.—This being Labor day, there is but little business, the stores closing at noon, but in the general situation there is no prospect of an immediate change for the better. The gladioli seem to be pretty well cut out, or the growers do not think it worth while to send them in at prevailing prices. Many asters continue to arrive, and many sell as low as 25 cents per 100. Dahlias are in considerable supply and going cheap. There is little change in roses; such varieties as Columbia, Francis Scott Key and Mrs. Russell bring the best prices, but do not move swiftly. All the Hadleys we have recently noticed are short and poor. There is a continued scarcity of lily of the valley, and it seems doubtful if the supply can be kept up much longer, on account of the scarcity of pips. The supply of American Beauty roses is limited, and so is the demand, but the best specials go at the rate of $30 per 100. There is a variety of minor stock on the market, both wild and domestic, but it scarcely counts.

GREEKS AFFECTED BY NEW DRAFT.

A treaty was signed at Washington, August 30, Secretary Lansing representing the United States, and Minister Roussos, representing Greece, which brings the Greeks in this country under the provisions of the draft. This will have a noteworthy effect on the retail trade of this city. In Manhattan and the Bronx, there are, in round numbers, 100 retail stores, owned and conducted by Greeks, not including small stands. In a number of instances, the stores are owned by young men without wives or female relatives in this country, who might carry on the business. In justice to the Greeks, it should be stated, that a number from this city are already in the United States Army by enlistment. If an additional large number is taken from the retail trade, the wholesalers will miss them. The Greeks, as a rule, while close buyers, are not as conservative as to quantity, as some other peoples; in other words, they will take chances. Such a disposition is desirable from the wholesalers' viewpoint, particularly in times of surplus, which are now almost chronic conditions in this market.

NOTES.

Heroes' day, September 1, was appropriately observed in the pulpits and parks of this city. The suggestions of Mayor Hylan relating to dropping flowers in specified spots in the parks were observed by many who attended. More than 20,000 persons gathered about the music stand in Prospect park, Brooklyn, to attend the borough's celebration of the day. Park Commissioner John N. Harman presided. In front of the stand a mound was made to resemble the last resting places of the soldier dead in France. It was covered with a blanket of autumn leaves, and about the sides were various kinds of flowers now in season. Hundreds of those who took part in the exercises brought offerings, mostly of cut flowers, and placed them on the mound.

The next meeting of the florists' club will be held in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building, Eighth avenue and 26th street, Monday evening, September 9. As this is the first meeting after a two-months' vacation, and President Totty and others who attended the St. Louis convention will doubtless be there to tell their experience, there should be a good attendance.

John Tarkas, proprietor of the Emerson Flower Shop, 70 West 116th street, was recently notified by the war department that his brother, Nicholas, a member of the 306th Regiment, had been killed in France. He was a native of Greece, 22 years old, and had been in this country six years, working with his brother in the florist business.

Matthew Sampson, Jr., who has been with the New York Cut Flower Co. for 23 years, and for the past seven years manager of the Noe department, has become a member of the latter firm, the name now being the Noe-Sampson department. He was made a director of the New York Cut Flower Co. last July.

Edward Hanft, well and favorably known in the wholesale district, where for the past 14 years he has been with Moore, Hentz & Nash, and later with Hentz & Nash, Inc., has resigned to take charge of the new retail store of Alexander Wandorff, Fifth avenue and 32d street.

William J. Nigro, formerly with H. E. Froment, but now a United States soldier at Camp J. E. Johnson, Jacksonville, Fla., has been in the city on a 10 day furlough.

IMPROVED TRADE ANTICIPATED.

With the good supply of fancy asters that is now on the market, we are looking for business to improve. The stock received now consists of the late New York state flowers of good stem and large blooms. They are the first good asters that have been received this year. Business has been very dull during August, due to the fact that there was very few fancy flowers on the market to encourage people to buy. Gladioli have been poor and roses are mostly short stemmed stock, nothing to attract the customer's eye. Even American Beauties have not been up to the standard, and they develop so fast these warm days that the wholesale houses have been compelled to dispose of them at once, or they would not be worth selling. Good lilies have been having a fair demand all summer and continue to sell from $8 to $12 per 100. Bon Silene roses are seen every day in the retail stores, something rare in this city.

NOTES.

Harry Langhans, of the Empire Flower Shop, left for Camp Forest, at Lytle, Ga., August 28, to take up military duty for Uncle Sam.

Tom Silverblatt left for Camp Lee, Va., August 27. He was manager of the flower stand at the Wm. Penn hotel.

Abe Krongold has opened the new flower stand in the Grand Opera House Arcade.

Carl Voelker is now with the Alpha Floral Co. in East Liberty.

M.

Rochester, N. Y.

BUSINESS FALLS OFF.

Trade during the past week has been dull and transient business has fallen off considerably. Gladioli are still flooding the market. There are few good asters to be seen, the early varieties having gone and the late arrivals not in as yet. Roses are plentiful and the quality is good. Carnations are scarce and poor in quality and the same is true of sweet peas.

NOTES.

The scarcity of men in the park department made it necessary for the city to call on the George T. Boucher force to stage the exhibition of plants in the floral hall at the exposition. Local florists will not make exhibits of designs, bouquets and baskets this year. Geo. T. Boucher will, however, have a group of ferns, palms, etc.

Wm. Pitkin, Jr., has been appointed camp general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Camp Mills, N. Y. He was until June 1 engaged in landscape work in this city.

Henry P. Neun had an interesting display of old-fashioned flowers in his window last week. The arrangement was very attractive.

E. P. Wilson and son, Edwin, have returned from an enjoyable camping trip to Valley Forge and nearby points in the Adirondacks.

Arthur J. Beyers has resigned his position with J. B. Keller's Sons and will move to Erie, where his parents reside.

Visitors: Steve Green and Arthur Zirkman, Philadelphia, Pa.; E. W. Neubrand, Tarrytown, N. Y. CHESTER.

Providence, R. I.

BUSINESS BEYOND COMPLAINT.

Trade the past week has been brisk, especially floral work, which has been heavy. Stock of all kinds is plentiful. Asters are now coming in better and the flowers are large. Sweet peas are over and gladioli are beginning to shorten up. There are some good Liliun giganteum, orchids are making their appearance, and several of the growers are cutting carnations. While they are small, the flower is good and the stem short.

NOTES.

William Wiley, of Macnair's force, is in the 11th regiment, Naval Reserves, at Newport.

John Wood is selling flowers on the street and finds a ready sale for his stock.

Boston is shipping roses and asters to this market, and they find ready sale.

H. A. T.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

SUBSTANTIAL BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT.

The encouraging drop in the temperature, together with a heavy rainfall, the first for a period of over six weeks, improved business conditions to a substantial degree. There was a noticeable picking up of counter trade, while weddings and funeral work moved quite an amount of stock. The weather conditions also revived outdoor flowers to quite an extent, particularly hardy sweet peas, and snapdragons. Gladioli, however, are still of very poor quality in most instances, the dry spell having been too prolonged for them. Asters are showing some improvement. Greenhouse flowers are already much improved in quality, the color of the roses showing up much better.

NOTES.

A number of the growers here are planning to devote several houses to the production of vegetable plants and vegetables this coming season, adding to the space they have given to these foodstuffs during the past year. It is recognized that by so doing, they will not only be aiding the country, and the government in the production of food, but they will also be enabled to more easily obtain labor, fuel, etc., for the operation of their greenhouses.

Miss C. B. Flick is spending the month in this city, as the guest of her niece, Mrs. Mildred Flick-Buchanan. Miss Flick reports the summer trade at the Patten Flower shop in Toledo, Ohio, very satisfactory, and says florists in that city are preparing for a brisk fall demand.

The Flick Floral Co. is installing a new electric vacuum pump in connection with their steam circulating system, thereby decreasing the cost of fuel, as well as aiding the government in conserving coal for war purposes.

A. J. Lanternier & Co. are now operating three trucks in their ever-increasing business. This firm is rebuilding two of the greenhouses at its large range.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are cutting a large crop of summer roses and asters.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C. President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice President; C. E. Kendell, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer.

The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held June, 1918.

No Dutch grown colchicum bulbs are expected this season.

J. C. VAUGHAN, Chicago, returned from the east August 31.

DUTCH exchange has dropped to 50 cents for the guilder, against 51½ recently.

CARL CROPP, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, returned from California August 29.

ATCHISON, KAN.—The Mangelsdorf Seed Co. has increased its capital stock to $500,000, fully paid.

LEONARD H. VAUGHAN, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, was presented with another baby boy, September 4.

ONION SETS.—Quite a percentage of Chicago onion examined so far show fusarium rot, indicating poor keeping quality.

SERGEANT DOUGLAS EARL, son of Howard M. Earl, has been transferred from the 111th regiment to the army candidates' school in France.

THE MacNiff Horticultural Co., New York, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $30,000 by F. P. Lewis, D. McNamara, Jr., and C. W. Zobel.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade September 4 were as follows: Timothy, $8.00 to $9.50 per 100 pounds, no change from last week.

JULIAN BOWEN, son of Lem W. Bowen, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich., will shortly enter the school for field artillery officers at Camp Zachary Taylor, near Louisville, Ky.

NEW YORK.—The trustee in bankruptcy of the Harry A. Bunyard Co., Inc., has made a first and final payment of one and one-half per cent in full of claims. Claims of $100 will net $150.

BEANS in Michigan are damaged considerably by the drought. Only a few local sections have been favored by rain. The final result, however, will be much better than last year's almost total failure.

VISITED CHICAGO: Arthur B. Clark, of the E. B. Clark Seed Co., Milford Conn.; T. C. Fagan, Indianapolis, Ind.; Ed. Goldenstein, Rockford; Alling Woodruff, wife and son, New York, enroute to California.

TOLEDO, O.—Clover made a strong advance August 31, closing at $19.50, a gain of 85 cents on the previous day. Cash timothy averaged 5 cents higher, selling at $4.65. September closed at $4.92½, October $4.90, December $4.90, March $4.97½ and April $4.97½.

RECENT California visitors calling on the seed growers included Howard M. Earl, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; Carl Cropp, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago; Alex. Forbes, Newark, N. J.; G. C. Thompson, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; A. Luck, of S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich.

Seedsmen Classified by United States Gov't.

For convenience in handling the work of seed reporting, it is desirable that a classification of those engaged in the seed business be adopted. The following classification seems to come nearer than any other to meeting the requirements and has been adopted tentatively by the seed reporting service:

(1) SEED DEALERS:

(a) Wholesale Dealers.—(Wholesale seedsmen.) Those who handle field or vegetable seeds as their main line in a wholesale or jobbing way, and who usually dispose of their seeds through periodical price lists or by traveling salesmen.

(b) Mail-Order Seed Dealers.—Those who handle field or vegetable seeds as their main line and dispose of such seeds chiefly to consumers by means of a descriptive catalogue.

(c) Retail Seed Dealers.—Those who handle field or vegetable seeds either as a main line or as a side line, and dispose of such seeds locally to consumers.

(d) Seed Brokers.—(Seed commission men.) Those who act as agents for seed dealers, shippers, growers, or consumers in buying or selling seeds. They are usually advantageously located in important seed markets.

(e) Miscellaneous Seed Dealers.—Those dealers who buy or sell field or vegetable seeds in any other manner than defined above.

(2) SEED SHIPPERS:

(a) Sectional Seed Shippers.—Those who buy seeds of one or more kinds from local shippers and seed farmers in their own locality or nearby localities, and ship such seeds to seed dealers. Sectional shippers are usually advantageously located in sections producing large quantities of the kinds of seeds that they handle.

(b) Local Seed Shippers.—Those located at production points where one or more kinds of seeds are shipped out and who buy such seeds from seed farmers for shipment to sectional shippers or to seed dealers. Local shippers are usually merchants of various kinds who ship seeds as a side line.

(3) SEED GROWERS:

(a) Commercial Seed Growers.—Those who have their seed growing business organized for the production and sale of the seeds grown by them on land operated by themselves or under their supervision, or grown for them by seed farmers.

(b) Seed Farmers.—Those who grow seed on land operated by themselves without conducting a commercial business of selling seed.

(c) Miscellaneous Seed Growers.—Those who are neither commercial seed growers nor seed farmers, but who, in any other way, through ownership or contract, control any acreage devoted to seed production, or who purchase vegetable seed directly from seed farmers.—Seed Reporter.

British Grown Bulbs.

Medals were given at a recent meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society for British-grown bulbs. The competition was not very keen, but the quality was decidedly high. No foreign bulbs could beat—if they could equal—the prize-winning collections shown.

Daffodils, 20 varieties, 20 bulbs of each, any kind of narcissi single bulbs. First—The Donard Nursery Co., Newcastle, County Down, Ireland, who put up a wonderful lot; King Alfreds as large as cricket balls, Lucifer as big as fair-sized Emperor, Frank Miles like Empress, etc. Second—J. R. Pearson & Sons, Lowdham, Notts., who had a nice level clean lot, but could not compete in size with the Irish giants! Third—R. H. Bath, Ltd., Wisbech, with good bulbs of sufficiently large size, but a little rough in appearance.

For a collection of mother bulbs, the Donard Nursery Co. came a very easy first.

For 10 varieties of market daffodils, J. Mallender, Scrooby, Doncaster, was first with a very nice level, well finished lot of bulbs.

Tulips, 20 varieties, Darwin and other late flowering tulips, 20 bulbs of each. First—Geo. Monro, Jr., Spalding, with as fine a lot as we have ever seen, full size and perfectly finished; many of the samples looked like polished mahogany. We believe this exhibit would have made some of our Dutch friends more than a little jealous. Second—The Donard Nursery Co., whose bulbs were excellent in every way, but not quite so regular as the first lot. Third—J. R. Pearson & Sons. The bulbs were as large as any, but lacked the finish of the first and second prize collections.

Twenty varieties early tulips, 20 bulbs of each.—Geo. Monro again scored a first with as good a lot of bulbs as ever came out of the best Dutch nursery.

Although these exhibits are not very attractive to the general public, we believe they have done a lot of good in demonstrating the fact that British growers can easily hold their own in the growing of several kinds of hardy bulbs.

Potato Waste In Dirty Cellars.

The Weekly News Letter of the United States department of agriculture calls attention to the fact that now is the time to clean up potato cellars and that this should not be put off until the harvest, pointing out that the crop promises to be a large one and that there is no excuse for allowing losses by rot in storage. Among the suggestions offered by the department are the following:

Get rid of every bit of vegetable matter in the storage cellar; sweep and brush until it is clean; then give a thorough dose of fungicide, either gas or spray, the quickest and easiest to apply being formaldehyde gas. For each 1,000 cubic feet of space use 10 ounces of formaldehyde and five of potassium permanganate. Pour the formalin over the permanganate in a deep container, and then leave the cellar immediately, because the gas is given off at once. Should it be found that these chemicals are too expensive, the department recommends a Bordeaux mixture of 5-5-50 strength. It may be applied with hand sprayer, pump, or broom; it is effective when thoroughly used and it does not cost much.

While there is no way to estimate the loss due to the neglect and uncleanness in potato storages, it is known to amount to a great deal, not only in spoiled human food but in rotten sacks, and in actual money spent in the labor of handling unmarketable material, and in lowered market value of what is left to put on sale. There never was a time, urges the department, when something to eat was so valuable as now, and when so much effort has been expended in food production. For the same reasons there never was a time when the prevention of this waste was so important. It is expecting too much, says the department, to look for potatoes fit for market from a dirty, ill-ventilated cellar. Time, money, and work spent in growing a crop are wasted if the potatoes are stored where dead potatoes are carrying over the organisms that cause rots. Dry rot attacks newly stored potatoes throughout bruises and wounds and spreads throughout the stored supply.

Tomato Shipping Methods.

Referring to the handling of tomatoes from grower to consumer, W. R. Dewar, Leamington, Ont., in the thirteenth annual report of the Vegetable Growers' Association of Ontario, suggests to growers who have to make long-distance shipments, and have no local market, the use of a pine box, ends 6x9½ inches, ½ inch thick; sides, 6x19 inches, ¾ inch thick (one piece); top and bottom, 9x19 inches, ¾ inch thick (two pieces). These boxes cost $12.50 per 100, not including freight or corrugated paper used on the inside. The other package used is the 11-quart vener basket, popular with nearly all in the trade. While no special grades are advertised, an inspector is employed, who goes among the growers and sees that the packages are put up in good order. There are designated grades, such as what is called the No. 1 tomato, clean, smooth and firm, free from bruise, split, sunburn, and of fair size. No. 2 is clean, firm, smooth, free from bruise, split and sunburn, slightly irregular and smaller than No. 1; and then come the culls. The No. 1 of fair size fills an 11-quart basket with three rows. The packing is done by individual growers under supervision of a company inspector. Later in the season, when the price drops below 50 cents, the No. 2 grade is not used, but is taken to the canning factory.

There is no center packing, as nothing could be gained by it. The company inspector travels among the growers in the morning and afternoon, and about 4 o'clock, when the tomatoes are in, he is on the shipping platform and watches every load that comes in. A government inspector is also there, to prevent fraudulent packing, and there have been instances where a grower has been made to repack his whole load where poor tomatoes had been put in the greater part of the basket, with good ones on top.

Vegetable Markets.

From reports received by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, for the period August 26-September 2, prices of produce continued in a downward direction. In potatoes, some of the leading markets held fairly steady, but Minnesota white stock again declined fully 25 cents, ranging $2.50-$2.75 at Chicago and $2.65 at Kansas City. Virginia Cobblers were slightly weaker at $4.25-$5. Shipping points also inclined toward slightly lower prices. Total shipments declined about 500 cars. Sweet potato prices were also weaker, Virginias declining quite sharply in consuming markets, ranging $4-$6 per barrel at New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. Alabama stock was steady at $2.25-$2.75 per bushel hamper in western markets. Prices declined at Virginia shipping points. New Jersey and New York yellow onions sold lower at prices varying from $2.25-$2.65, with some sales at New York as low as $1.50 per 100 pounds. Western yellows also declined. Cabbage was fairly steady, Colorado being quoted at $1.60 per 100 pounds at shipping points and $3 for jobbing sales at Kansas City.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, September 3.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, 80 cents to $1.00; celery, crate, 35 to 50 cents; head lettuce, 2-dozen 75 cents to $2.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $1.50; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 40 cents to 50 cents.

New York, September 2.—Celery (state), per bunch, 15 to 30 cents; cucumbers, 35 cents to $2.00 per basket; mushrooms, $1.50 to $3.00 per basket; tomatoes, per pound, 3 to 5 cents; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $2.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.00.

Cornuses in England.

Although this beautiful small tree or shrub cannot on the whole be described as an unqualified success in all parts of this country, there are places where Cornus florida pendula thrives exceedingly well. In several Surrey and Sussex gardens, especially where the situation is somewhat elevated, the cultivation of Cornus florida and its varieties gives no difficulty. We know from the way it succeeds in the eastern states of North America, even as far to the north as Boston, Mass., that the tree is very hardy, but there the division between winter and spring is sharply defined. In many gardens in Britain this cornus is excited into growth too early, and its crop of flowers is ruined by the frosts that come later. A position sheltered from the north and east is no doubt best suited for it, otherwise it may be fully exposed to the sun. The late Mr. Chambers of Haslemere, had great success with it. His garden at Grayswood Hill is about 300 feet above sea level, and he used to recommend for this cornus, sandy loam and a situation exposed to full sunshine. Cornus florida is a native of the eastern United States, from Massachusetts to the extreme south. It reaches even the mountains of northern Mexico. According to Prof. Sargent, it is sometimes, though rarely, 40 feet high. With us it is rarely seen more than 15 feet high. What is commonly termed the "flower" is really an involucre of four bracts that surrounds the small, round cluster of true flowers. The "flower" is 3 to 4 inches across, white in the typical form and in the pendulous variety, but bright rosy red in the var. rubra. When seen at their best, which is in late May, there are few more beautiful shrubs than these. Three other species with similarly showy involucres are grown in this country: C. Nuttallii, from the Pacific coast, with bracts even larger than those of C. florida, and creamy white flushed with pink; C. Kousa, from Japan, with narrower bracts, expanding in July (both these seem better fitted for our climate than florida); and C. capitata (Benthania fragifera), only hardy in the mildest counties. Mr. Wilson, during his Chinese explorations, introduced a form of C. Kousa from western Hupeh which seems quite distinct from the old Japanese type in its freer growth and larger "flowers." It is probably growing in several gardens under his number 223, and is a very promising small tree.—London Gardeners' Chronicle.

National Association of Gardeners.

The annual convention of the National Association of Gardeners will occur at Cleveland, September 24-26. The local convention committee, consisting of Herman Knobbe, Walter E. Cook, Frank A. Friedley, M. A. Vinson, R. P. Bryden, Luther Wells and H. P. Rapley, have left nothing undone to make the event a memorable one, and are looking forward to a large attendance, both from distant and nearby points. Business is to be the keynote of this convention, and the subjects selected for discussion, will furnish material for thorough consideration of the gardener's relation to the war, and the conditions to be met during the reconstruction period.

The programme follows:

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24.

Morning—
Registration of members.
Executive meeting.
Afternoon—
Opening of the convention by Chairman Herman Knobbe.
Address of welcome by Mayor Davis.
Reply by M. C. Ebel.
President Weller's address.
Secretary's report. Treasurer's report.
Reports of standing committees.
Reports of special committees. Communications.
Consideration of 1919 meeting place.
Nomination of officers.

Evening.
Illustrated lecture by J. Otto Thilow, Philadelphia, on the "Flora of Hawaii," to which the members of the Cleveland Garden Club and Florist Club are invited.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25.

Morning—
Election of officers. Unfinished business.
Paper by Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass., on "The Gardener and the War." Discussion.
Afternoon—
Visit to Cleveland's private estates and public park system.
Evening—Banquet.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26.

Morning—
Unfinished business—
Paper by M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J., on "The Gardener's Opportunity After the War." Discussion.
Afternoon—
Bowling contest.

CONVENTION ARRANGEMENTS.

The Hotel Hollenden has been selected as the headquarters of the association, where the business sessions, lectures and banquet will take place. Members traveling from a distance should provide for their railroad transportation at an early date to avoid disappointment with last minute arrangements.

DEMAND IS NORMAL.

The past week wound up vacation time and conditions remain normal—funeral work plentiful and general business quiet. Stock is ample and of fair quality. Roses and carnations are in good demand while chrysanthemums are fair sellers. Good outside stock is practically off the market; an abundance of poor quality flowers, annuals and perennials, are all that are to be had.

NOTES.

The census of greenhouses demanded by the government shows 33 firms operating commercial greenhouses. Five of that number will either close up or tear down their houses.

Those florists that compete at the state fair next week are busy preparing their exhibits.

Visitors: A. Claussen, Albert Lea, Minn., and J. Shotwell, Fargo, N. D.

FUNERAL DEMAND VERY GOOD.

This section has passed through the hottest and driest period, and as far as the floral world is concerned, finds itself at the opening of a new season, a little disfigured, perhaps, but "still in the ring." On the whole, business has been good. It is true, more so with funeral work than in any other branch of the trade, and this has kept up splendidly. The supply has been limited throughout the season, but still enough to keep up with the demand, and such flowers as have been on hand, are all the more beautiful by force of contrast with the burnt up and parched condition of the rest of the country. Asters have come in to some extent, but are nothing to brag about, being rather small and insignificant. Gladioli is the only thing that has kept luxurious, and it has served many a purpose. There are some lilies, and a few carnations are being cut from the new stock, but mostly with short stems. Some of the growers are having good success with the Columbia rose, which is giving good satisfaction and promises to become a favorite, both with the grower and the buyer. To meet extra calls, some flowers are being shipped in, asters, carnations and roses. Chrysanthemums are in good shape for the opening up of trade and everybody seems to be very forehanded with these choicest autumn favorites. Other plants and flowers are in good condition, and other conditions being favorable, portend a successful season. The location of the million dollar "powder plant" in this locality has loosed a lot of dollars in the community, which has indirectly helped the florists, for prices are good. But in another way the plant has been a great drawback, making labor scarce and hard to get, and running wages way up yonder to the sky high mark.

NOTES.

The new draft age catches others in the floral business, not before liable and among others are the Geny Brothers. They are of French extraction, but are thorough out and out 100 per cent Americans, and are more than willing to fight their country's battles. Both Oscar Geny and Leon H. Geny have large and interesting families, many of whom are yet of tender years.

Shipments of Paper Whites and Romans are expected, but have not yet come in. All the local florists clubbed together and ordered a carload of lily bulbs from Japan, but were disappointed, but succeeded in getting a carload of Harrisii from Bermuda.

The coal and wood situation has been satisfactorily adjusted, and unless there is an unusually cold season, and there could hardly be two successive winters as severe as the past, the growers in this section, are well prepared to meet the season's demands. M. C. D.

NO WAR CLOSING ORDER.

General Crowder Reassures Washington Representative of Society of American Florists New Draft Will Not Close Industry.

Reports Branded Untrue.

At a special meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, held on the evening of September 10, with more than 100 in attendance, the occasion being full of snap and enthusiasm from start to close, two interesting communications bearing on a subject of vital importance to the trade of the entire country at the present time, received from Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative of the Society of American Florists, were read, as follows:

"Wm. F. Gude, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Schwartz attended our florists' club meeting last night and Charles Grakelow, of whom you have probably heard, made the statement that there is a new ruling from Washington direct from General Crowder that all retail and wholesale florists are in the non-essential class and will either have to get women or men over draft age; also, that any one within the draft age up to 36 years will be in the military draft, and those between the ages of 36 and 45 will have to secure employment in munitions or war work. Have you heard anything of this new ruling? It will mean that 75 per cent of the growers will be put out of business and wrecked. As I told you we are now down to six growers at our large place. Mr. Grakelow says this is up to the draft board entirely and not the labor commission. Have you heard anything about such a ruling and what would you advise? I have no doubt but what you have had a communication of the same nature and advice to one will do for all.

ALEXANDER SCOTT."

Mr. Gude's reply to the above was as follows:

"My dear Mr. Scott:

I have been waiting for some time to get first hand information on this proposition for myself and which I could officially give to the florists of the country. General Crowder is a very busy man, but granted me an interview. I showed him your letter. He read it and said you could have answered it yourself, and that such statements said to come from him are absolutely untrue and that there never was any idea of closing up the florists, nor is there any now. This is absolutely authentic, coming from the lips of General Crowder himself, and this should reassure your men, because they can stay and grow flowers without fear of being forced into war work, except, of course, they may have to go as soldiers. But, whatever comes, the war board has no intention of closing up any industries, and this reaffirms what I have been giving to the trade papers for the past 12 months. Florists should not be unduly exercised over the non-essential question."

Early Closing Approved.

The suggestion of Charles H. Grakelow, relative to concerted action in early closing of flower shops as a local heat and light conservation measure received the endorsement of the club, and the fact that Mr. Grakelow's efforts for the betterment of the business in general is appreciated was attested by the unanimous standing vote he received at the close of his talk.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The fall season for the florist is now opening. What are the prospects for good business? Are flowers in the public mind? Just how these questions should be answered entails considerable thought. One question hinges upon the other—an affirmative answer to the latter would furnish the answer we all would desire for the former.

Supposing that, just now, flowers are not in the public mind—and who is optimistic enough to say they are? It would naturally occur to anyone that the best thing to do would be to exploit them, so that they might command the attention we require. Our publicity committees did this thing just prior to St. Valentine's day this year, with the result that the public sat up and took notice—never before did the florists do so much business for this particular festival. The same course was taken in regard to Mothers' day, and the result was the same—the greatest business ever done in connection with this memorial day. And, when we come to think of it, these days are "made" days—made by publicity, made by exploiting flowers for use on these occasions, made by effort put forth mainly by florists themselves, through proper organizations.

The public mind is most receptive. Any idea which is properly put forward and aggressively pushed is sure of a good reception, provided it of itself is good. The idea which we have all along entertained, that the public would accept proper suggestions tending to a wider and greater use of flowers in the home, being a good one has been kindly received, and, in consequence, we have enjoyed the benefit of a demand which has surprised many of us who have had regard to the depressing influence of these war times. It is highly necessary that the work of our committees which has resulted in so much publicity for our products should be kept up. Their efforts should not be curtailed in the least; they should even be greater than before.

We are nearing a crisis in our national affairs which points to times of greater depression and, therefore, the need of intensive stimulation of demand for flowers and plants. We are confronted with our annual avalanche of chrysanthemums, which this season is expected to be abnormally large. As we all know, this crop is an expensive one to raise, and its value in the aggregate immense. It must be moved, and moved profitably. Our committees are called upon, through publicity channels which they have planned, to assist in the effort which all must put forth to get this crop into the homes of the public, as well as to stimulate the demand for other flowers in season.

The committees can perform their part if the trade will furnish the wherewithal—the amount of money needed to complete the publicity campaign fund of $50,000 which was asked for at the outset. Only $6,000 more is required to insure the completion of the committees' carefully thought out plans for 1918. Already liability is being incurred looking to the consummation of these plans, and every penny of the fund will be needed.

Surely the florists who have not already subscribed will lend their help by sending in at once what contributions they can. Many hundreds of their brethren have already contributed generously, in many cases duplicating subscriptions made earlier in the campaign. This is no class project—retailers, wholesalers, and growers are all benefited.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The business of early September is often disappointing, particularly as frequently happens, there is a period of extremely hot weather. It does not do to become discouraged, however, as it will not be long before a continuous demand will keep the limited force constantly on the go. The matter of help is going to be a serious problem the coming season, particularly in the larger stores. The solution is the employment of women, who, after they ac-small cost, and will be found profitable both from the sale of flowers from stock, and the taking of orders for the roots to be delivered in the spring. Almost any of the large growers will furnish flowers at reduced rates for exhibition purposes, charging the discount to publicity. The card announcing that orders are being taken for any of the varieties for spring delivery, must be conspicuously displayed. All publicity features of this kind are sure to bring in returns; in fact, no week during the busy season should be allowed to pass without a seasonable feature of some description. These events should be well thought out and arranged for in advance so that the stock will be on hand and the proper window and store cards ready to put in place.

Very few florists recognize the great selling value of show card announcements used in connection with displays of goods in store or window. People will frequently stop to see what the card or cards read, who would otherwise pass the window unnoticed. Just a price card is often sufficient to start things, while a reduction shows immediate results; a 25-cent drop on a $1.50 fern had the effect, one shopkeeper said recently, in cleaning out a window full in a couple of days, which had stood for some time stationary.

Always have a few small made-up baskets or bouquets on hand to sell, or where occasion warrants, to present to customers. The tiny colonial bouquet in a fringed bouquet paper, is just the thing to hand to a lady who has left a good order or, perhaps, has called to pay a bill. A flower must also be given to all the little ones who accompany customers. The small well filled tumbler basket, standing on the counter or card writing desk, is very apt to take the customer's fancy, and become an added item of the order.

Have you tried the bird's nest fern? This is, as yet, almost a novelty, but is fast coming into use as a satisfactory house plant. It is unique in that it is salable in all sizes from the baby two-inch up to the large eight-inch pot. It's broad, light green, glossy foliage is very striking.

Some delinquents may have returned by this time. Give them an earnest appeal, mailed in a plain envelope. It will often do better than a messenger whose object is quite likely to be guessed and is told that Mr. Smith is not in.

Only a few thousand dollars is now required to take the S. A. F. publicity fund over the top to its $50,000 goal. Get in quick with your "ten dollar William" or more. Identify yourself with this movement. Secretary Young will send you at once all the advertising matter to which you are entitled. Get the beautiful sign, "Say It With Flowers." It will bring wonderful returns. Do it today. The address is, 1170 Broadway, New York.

Flower Shop Labor Problem.

As long as there is a responsible head remaining to take command, it is quite possible to keep up the work of the flower shop and continue the business in the main at least, as usual. Members of the craft from all over the country, in response to their patriotic feeling, and taking their places as called in the ranks, have greatly depleted the working forces of the industry. The retail shops have given at least half their active men, while in many cases, only those well advanced in years remain. These places must be filled if the business is to be kept going and the quire the practical knowledge, will be found of great assistance in every department.

The decorative features of the inside of the store should always receive earnest attention. The well dressed shop always gives a good impression, implying that orders left will be well executed. With abundant supply of all outdoor flowers, foliage and grasses, such as hydrangeas, gladioli, hardy asters, oak and pine branches, golden privet sprays, with eulalia and other grassy plumes, there is inexpensive material in quantity that can be used, and also at times sold to good advantage.

There are some of the hardy asters in shades of blue, which add a life in color combinations that is particularly pleasing. With their loose spray formation, they are very effective with pink roses, rubrum lilies, and light pink tints of gladioli. They are all affected by draughts, but certain varieties that last much longer than others are quite extensively grown in some localities.

The fall or opening of the season circular, or card, should go out about September 23. Some of the trade find it good business to have at this time a dahlia show, making an invitation to call and see the display a feature of their message. Such an exhibition, staging quite an assortment of varieties, can be given at comparatively shop open to receive its brave and loyal men on their return.

This industry is, perhaps, fortunate in that it furnishes congenial employment with pleasant surroundings for women. While the great majority of employes in the shops all over the country have heretofore been men, yet quite a number have used women, as bookkeepers or salesladies, and in other branches have found them valued assistants. In all the large cities and communities, there are stores owned or conducted by women, which are in the main quite as successfully managed as those of the same grade operated by men.

Here, then, is the solution of the problem—employ women. They are equally as diligent, as intelligent and even more faithful than the majority of the sterner sex. They are quick to learn, and soon acquire the knowledge of stock and prices necessary to enable them to wait on customers. Young women of any special training, particularly bookkeepers, stenographers, and those of good schooling, have been in great demand in offices, banks and business houses, there not being nearly enough to take the place of the young men called to the colors. Those of middle age, however, without such training, are not to be despised; in fact, preferred, they being what are known as settled, whose thoughts and minds are more easily concentrated on the business, and who still have many years of usefulness before them. They must be encouraged by good salaries, which is always an incentive to bring out one's best endeavors.

Prices are to be higher the coming season. They must be, with the tremendous labor demand with unheard of prices being paid from the lowest grades upward. There will be a good demand for flowers which people will expect to find higher in price and the trend will, when the books are balanced, have nothing to show for his season's work.

With an organized and dependable working force, and the establishing of a higher range of prices that will guarantee an income, under economic management, sufficient to carry on the business, there should be little, if any, worry about the future.

Store Openings.

This is the season of the fall store openings, when, with the new goods of the latest styles, the shops are given their best settings. It is the practice with many to bring in the florist and have him, with his plants, flowers and decorative art, add a finishing touch to the display. To do this work satisfactorily, the decorator must be prepared with the necessary accessories. The most essential of these are folding lattice screens, pedestals in all sizes, pot covers with inside tins, tall floor cut-flower vases and others, not easily overturned, for the tops of cases.

Space in all stores is valuable; there is seldom room for any grouping. There are, however, vantage points on the floor, to which the addition of specimen palms gives good decorative effect. All valuable plants should be placed in baskets, with tins that will hold water, as the decorations are generally for from three days to a week. A tall, slender palm, if placed in rather a large basket, can be made very effective by the addition of smaller palms, ferns and vines. These, taken out of the pots, wrapped in cheesecloth and packed closely with moss, will, when watered, last without much attention. Oak leaf branches, placed in a fibre jar tied to the back of a palm, will give a bushy effect, the decorative feature of which is helped with hydrangea heads. For the tops of cases, pot covers with inside tins filled with sphagnum and water, are better and more solid than vases, and look very effective when filled with oak sprays, hydrangeas, tritomas, hardy aster sprays filled in much the same way are conspicuous when tied well up on columns. Southern smilax is, of course, one of the best of decorative greens, but the oak branches make a very good substitute and when colored later on, work in splendidly with the smilax. Wherever possible, they should be in water, which adds considerably to their life.

Vases of dahlias here and there on low or counter cases, where they do not interfere, give a touch of color that is well worth while.

Many merchants would use such examples of the florist's art at this time if its efficiency was presented to them by energetic "get-there" salesmen.

Sphagnum and Clump Moss.

The material for mossing designs and baskets is an important feature of the stock of the retail florist. If there is ample room; a supply of sphagnum sufficient for the needs of the season can be laid in early in the fall. In its various sized bales, it is convenient to handle and can be kept under cover almost indefinitely. Before a bale is taken from stock, the bin at the side or under the mossing bench should be swept clean; then as it is refilled the new material should be "teased" out, or pulled apart, taking out all roots, sticks and other objectionable materials. It should be dampened and kept moist, as it is then not nearly so friable and much easier to use in mossing up designs.

Fresh green clump moss is preferred by many florists, for the reason that it will take up and hold the moisture better than the sphagnum and is a trifle easier to make up, offering less resistance to the wire or sticks of the stemmed flowers. Clump moss is much heavier than sphagnum and in large designs that have to be packed in comparatively light boxes, is objectionable on this account. Wreaths and other forms, when mossed ahead, are much better done with sphagnum, as the fresh green moss gets very hard and dry if kept any length of time.

Modern Flower Shop Methods.

Paper by A. Lange, read at a meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, September 5, 1918.

The retail florist's business requires undivided attention. New ideas and inspirations are necessary to the maintenance of a successful flower shop; customers demand new creations, superior service and alert and courteous salespeople. One of the greatest assets is specialty of plateau baskets, was manager. These were usually arranged in six or eight sections, each of different flowers. One day, I mentioned the beautiful baskets I had seen in this window to Mr. Farrell, and I am leaving what he said in reply to your imagination.

The retail business is to quite an extent at present, and will be, for the practically doubled in price within the past two years. In regard to corsage bouquets and other flowers, where the sale amounts to less than $1, there should be an extra charge of 10 cents for the box, and if delivered, a charge of 10 cents for cartage. Flowers sent out of town by express or parcel post on Saturdays, are as a rule, not delivered until Monday, and it is wise to notify persons for whom they are intended by wire, the charges of course to be paid by the person ordering the shipment.

Roslyn, Pa., Growers.

Adolph Farenwald is a loyal citizen, and when the special appeal of the food administration was made last season for vegetables, he determined to help out, and began last fall by running a combination of vegetables and cut flowers. A large house devoted to sweet peas was planted with lettuce which bordered the sweet peas on either side of the beds. Beets and radishes as well as parsley were also planted. The stock came along nicely and Mr. Farenwald was delighted with the experiment; the first pickings were tried out at his own table and pronounced delicious. Then he called with samples on his near-by grocer friends, who admired the products but were not eager to buy. The lettuce had to come into competition with the southern outdoor product, which, while not so crisp and tender as the greenhouse grown stock, heads up better and does not break so easily in handling. His stock was, much of it, ready by the holidays, but try as he could nobody would buy it. He is now done with vegetables and will hereafter stick to the legitimate.

Mr. Farenwald is a noted rose grower. Mrs. Shawyer is the queen here. He has settled on this variety after a very discouraging experience with mildew the first two years. He finally was able to overcome this tendency. The plants even at the low temperature, at times during the past season, when it was difficult to keep the frost out, show scarcely any traces of blight. He has 14,000 Shawyers from two to five years old. Plenty of water and a the neat arrangements of stock throughout the store, keeping baskets, wreaths, jardinières and novelties clean so as always to be presentable to customers, while flowers, the most important item, should at all times be artistically arranged in neat vases, the faded foliage removed and the stems clean.

The retail branch of the trade has made wonderful progress during the past 10 years and must continue to maintain its importance or it will be classed among the so-called non-essential industries and florists must comply with the various government orders and respond to campaigns for carrying on war work.

Let us also consider our immediate business problems. The wholesaler has for many years received orders from acquaintances, or persons, who, should they be refused by him, would naturally patronize the retailer. This business, taken by the commission man, has been termed as "red violet", and I believe that an understanding could be maintained so that the wholesaler would turn these orders to the retailer, perhaps on a commission basis, or as might otherwise be arranged. Some of the out-of-town florists send orders for delivery in the city to the commission houses, whereas the retailer should rightfully receive such business.

My experience in the florist business extends over a period of 35 years, starting with James Farrell in 1883, who was the originator of the loose arrangement of flowers in bouquets and baskets, the style up to that time having been similar to that employed in making up the colonial bouquet of the present day. At that time, the stiffer the arrangement, the better they pleased. I recall at one time looking into the store of Hovey & Co. on Wahash avenue, when Frank Benthey, who made a duration of the war, conducted by women and we must give them great credit for the way in which they handle the situation.

In the matter of advertising, the appropriation for this purpose depends upon gross receipts. Of the total sales, five per cent should be set aside for high class publicity, and usually, for quick results, the best paper in town should carry your message, the effectiveness augmented by a cut of what you feature at the time.

In regard to expenses which have increased tremendously, we well know the situation with boxes, twine, etc., little more heat is what, in a general way, is required. The ventilators in the rose houses had not been raised from the time the cold spell had set in early in December until the warm days of early spring. Bank the fires through the day and catch all the sun heat possible had been the practice here.

Liberty is seen at this establishment in good form. This is a variety which Mr. Farenwald says is coming back; in his estimation, it is better in every way than Richmond; also pays better than Hadley, as most growers do that variety. Several houses are given to Cecile Brunner, which he finds returns very well.

Edward Towill, whose place adjoins that of Mr. Farenwald, is another rose specialist. Ophelia and Sunburst are his principal standards. Next year, however, the entire place is to be planted with Mrs. Stotesbury, his new pink seedling. This is unquestionably a good variety, a very vigorous grower and free as Killarney. The parentage is Joseph Hill x Maryland seedling x Milady. The shape of flower is much the same as Mrs. Shawyer, but a longer bud of a good bright pink. Another promising seedling being tried out by a number of growers, is Golden Gem. This is a seedling of Harry Kirk and Lady Hillingdon. It has a stouter stem than Hillingdon, as good a color and is very free, apparently the best yellow rose in sight. This is the home of Milady which has done so well in the west.

Victor Groschens, whose large ranges are close by, is another rose specialist who has made a great success with Mrs. Russell and intends to devote his whole place to it. All stock is grown in ground beds, raised about one foot, with cement borders. The spacing of the beds and walks is ideal. The walk is 14 inches, the base of the cement wall is five inches thick for four inches in height, then set back three inches, and from there is two inches thick to the top. On this receding ledge rests the single heating pipe, either side of the walk. The beds are four feet in width. Mr. Groschens had found good demand for all the Russells he can cut.

K.

Smilax.

John G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., is a smilax specialist, who has grown this graceful vine in quantity for a number of years. It is planted on benches about 15 inches above the floor, underneath which are heating pipes. Much better root action and growth is obtained in this way, than when set out in ground beds. Four good crops are generally obtained, and some favorable seasons, a portion of the fifth.

The plants are kept in for the second year, at the end of which time the tables are almost a solid mass of roots. Much to his surprise, he had discovered smilax to be quite hardy as this refuse, thrown out and used to fill up a roadway, had the succeeding summer, thrown up vigorous shoots, and covered the ground with its foliage.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Taking the Buds.

This is a part of the work that needs the closest attention at this time. Most of the buds on the early varieties have already been taken and are now beginning to be of good size. Some of the more backward plants have yet to be attended to; do not neglect these, but give them attention as soon as large enough to handle so as to make sure of an even batch of blooms in their proper season. Not all of the plants of any variety will set their buds so that they can all be taken at the same time; some of them will be several days apart, it being necessary to go over the plants two or three times before getting all the buds. A good plan is to make it a part of the routine work to attend to the disbudding on each batch of plants at least once every three days until all the buds are taken. The early part of September is a busy time in regard to taking buds. Varieties that are in season the latter part of October, together with most of the midseason sorts will be forming their buds and must receive attention to obtain the best results.

The term alluded to as "taking the bud," often puzzles the inexperienced grower of chrysanthemums. It applies to selecting the bud to be left to form the flowers. Plants being grown for cut blooms having had the side shoots regularly removed during their season of growth, will, at certain periods, harden up the wood and form a cluster of buds or shoots at the top of their growth. Some varieties will do this two or three times during their season of growth, according to their strength. Extra strong, early propagated and early planted stock sometimes buds up three or four times during the season, forming a center bud surrounded by side growths. Up until August the grower's purpose is to remove the center bud and reserve the strongest side growth to go on into growth, but after the beginning of this month, these conditions are just reversed, the main object then being to select or leave the center bud to go on to form the flower. Very few of any buds other than the very early varieties, like Smith's Advance and Golden Glow and a few of the fancy exhibition sorts are selected before August 20. After this date, provided the plants have been properly cared for, buds can be taken as they appear.

This brings us down to the present time. From now on through September all buds should be taken as soon as they can be handled without bruising. The midseason sorts will be ready first, followed by the late varieties later in the month. First be sure the center bud is in good condition, then remove those at each side of it and continue down the stem until all side buds and growths are removed. It is always best to start at the top of the plant and work down, rather than commence at the bottom and work up. Then, if by any chance the center bud is accidentally broken, one of the side buds can be left to make the flower. Extra care should be taken, because if the center bud is now destroyed any side shoot or bud will produce an inferior flower. After the plant is disbudded, all its strength is thrown into the development of the bud at its top. It therefore becomes necessary to watch closely the plants' requirements. Do not allow them to become dry at the roots or allow the suckers at the stool to overgrow and sap the strength from the plant before removing them. Another very important matter is to attend regularly to the spraying with insecticide to guard against the aphids working into the buds and ruining them.

FEEDING THE PLANTS.

After the buds are taken, the plants will be greatly benefited by an application of liquid manure every eight or 10 days, according to their needs. The question of feeding depends greatly upon the purpose for which the blooms are intended. The expert grower, whose principal object is to turn out blooms of enormous size for exhibition, lays his plans at the commencement of the plant's growing season, providing them with a rich compost to start out in, and gradually encouraging them by stimulation with such commercial fertilizers as he considers is best for the purpose he has in view. In other words, size of bloom is what he is after, and accordingly pushes his plants to the limit to obtain it. This high pressure cultivation makes the blooms very susceptible to adverse conditions at time of blooming, and very often during periods of extreme heat, when the petals are unfolding, a great many of them spoil unless they are very carefully handled. The grower of blooms for commercial cut flower purposes cannot afford to take such long chances with his stock; his principal requirement is for blooms of good keeping qualities that will stand handling two or three times before being offered to the customers. Therefore, to him, blooms of good average size, of fine color and keeping qualities are very much more valuable than extra large blooms that do not keep as well.

Commercial stock that has been given liberal treatment as regards soil fertility and mulching, and which is now in a good, healthy, growing condition, will not need any great amount of additional feeding. An occasional watering of liquid cow manure about every eight days, to aid in the development of the buds, will be of benefit to them. This should be made by putting a bushel of fresh cow manure in a barrel of water, allowing it to stand about 48 hours before applying it to the beds. Do not water when the soil is dry, but water with clear water first, allowing two or three hours to elapse before watering with the manure liquid.

The most particular pointers for every chrysanthemum grower to bear in mind in the care of his plants at the present time, is to follow up closely the work of taking the buds, make sure that the plants are securely supported and free of insects, and to keep up the close attention of the routine work such as watering, airing, etc.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Imported Plants for Christmas Replaced.

Paper by James McKenna, Montreal, Que., read at the twenty-first annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, Ottawa, Ont., August 13, 1918.

I have been asked to prepare notes on plants for Christmas to take the place of Belgian azaleas. When I accepted I thought it possible to offer something of practical utility at this time, but I feel what I have prepared will fall short of your expectations and only have the effect of opening the question for discussion from which I hope to learn something myself.

Among the plants we usually grow for Christmas I feel that the cyclamen takes first place as a high-priced plant for a gift, so more effort ought to be applied to produce plants that will sell for $5 or more. The poinsettia comes next, which ought to be grown into specimens of, say, three plants in a seven-inch, three-quarter pot, bearing six to nine bracts on each pot, and not more than 12 or 20 inches high. These plants ought to sell from $3 to $5 each. Flat dishes and half-pots suitable for tables are always in demand, selling from $1 to $2 each. The begonias of the Lorraine type, with careful handling, can be grown into specimens to sell from $3 to $10 each, with trimming. In the Begonia semperflorens group the variety Chatelaine is also very useful. Cuttings struck during the late spring can be grown to sell from $1 to $2 at Christmas. The primula family comes next, of which the obconica is the best, and can be cheaply grown into plants to sell from $1 to $3 at the holiday season. Among the berried plants the Solanum capsicastrum is the most popular and can be profitably grown for 25 cents each in five-inch pots. They can also be grown to sell in an eight-inch, three-quarter pot for $2.

The ardisia, if well grown, is very handsome, but, taking so long to grow into good specimens, will not bring a profitable price in any quantity. Hyacinths are also a useful plant and sell well if in the proper condition. Five bulbs in a six-inch, three-quarter pot ought to bring $2; of course, the French grown bulbs are required. There are some scarlet geraniums being grown this year for Christmas, with what results time will tell; and I think, if suitable red varieties are chosen and given the necessary attention, a sufficient quantity of bloom ought to be had on them to meet the demand for low-priced plants.

To supply the requirements of the high-class florists' trade at Christmas, baskets will be more in evidence than ever, and the grower must be prepared to supply suitable plants as accessories to the blooming stock. Nephrolepis in three and four-inch pots and pteris in two and one-half and three-inch pots are indispensable. Dracenas, crotons, marantas, etc., also poinsettias in three-inch pots, ought to be prepared in quantity.

This is about all I have to say on the subject allotted to me, and if I have given any pointers which will assist a single member in meeting his financial demands, and provoke the discussion that the subject deserves, I will be amply paid for the little effort I have taken in writing these few lines.

Prosperity Coming.

The president of the National City Bank of New York predicts a period of great prosperity at the close of the war; the most genuine and widespread prosperity ever known, and if it is well balanced and harmonious it will be indefinitely self-sustaining. Meantime, he urges patience and admonishes us to remember always that the present conditions are abnormal and temporary and to plan ceaselessly to get our business back to a normal basis.

"The United States will have a heavy national indebtedness," he is quoted by the Economist as saying, "requiring large tax revenues, but this indebtedness will be widely distributed among our own people, who will therefore receive the proceeds of the taxation back into their own pockets. Industrially the country will be more effectively equipped and its productive capacity greater than ever before; therefore the country need not seriously feel the increased taxation. Undoubtedly the period after the war will afford great opportunities for American capital and enterprise, and, of course, this means for American industries and American mechanics and wage workers."

Childs Among The Redwoods.

The accompanying illustration shows John Lewis Childs, of Floral Park, N. Y., in company with James A. Brown, of the Brown Bulb and Berry Ranch, Capitola, Calif., and the latter's two sons, resting beneath the Giant, the largest redwood tree in that section, and located within six miles of the Brown ranch. As one of the giants in the plant trade, the photograph of Mr. Childs taken in connection with this giant of the forest is interesting. The tree, 75 feet in circumference, is at present 310 feet in height, 75 feet having been broken off many years ago and is still lying on the ground. There are many other trees in this grove almost as large, according to Mr. Brown. He adds: "We are pretty well over the freesia season, but are still making some shipments, and although we have some bulbs left we are cleaning up as well as in any previous year, regardless of the fact that the crop was unusually heavy. We feel that we should do something of a patriotic nature, and in addition to flower seeds and bulbs we are preparing to increase our acreage of vegetable seeds if possible."

Ass'n of American Cemetery Sup'ts.

The thirty-second annual convention of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents was held at Rochester, N. Y., September 11-13, with headquarters at the Powers hotel. The meeting was well attended, and the programme was well filled with papers upon subjects of timely interest. After the opening session was called to order the delegates were welcomed to the city by the mayor, and the address of President Rudd was listened to with attention. The morning session closed with the reports of the secretary-treasurer, reading of communications and the appointment of committees. The feature planned for the afternoon was an auto trip for inspection of the Holy Sepulchre and Riverside cemeteries, thence to the aster fields of James Vick's Sons. The entertainment committee's programme also included a drive through the city, followed by a visit to Brown Bros' nurseries at Brighton, N. Y., for luncheon, an inspection of Mount Hope cemetery and a tour of the park system.

Included in the papers were the following interesting topics: "The Cemetery Crematorium" (illustrated), by Hugo Erichsen, Detroit, Mich.; "Cemetery Gardening" (with views), by Henry S. Adams, Forest Hills cemetery, Jamaica Plain, Mass.; "Bird Lore and Sanctuaries," by Edwin R. Reiber, Webster, N. Y.; "Shrubs and Herba-shus Stuff," by John Dunbar, Rochester park system; "Cemetery Laws," by Hon. Eugene J. Dwyer, Rochester; "Accidents in Cemeteries," by Hon. C. W. Phillips, deputy compensation commissioner, Rochester; "Cemetery Landmarks," by Wm. F. Landes, Crown Hill cemetery, Indianapolis, Ind.; "Surfacing Avenues to Meet Modern Conditions of Travel," by James M. Driscoll, Hollywood cemetery, Brookline, Mass.; "The Superintendent of a Smaller Cemetery," by Ernest C. Schulz, Ilion, N. Y., and an address by W. H. Druckenmiller, of Pomfret Manor cemetery, Sunbury, Pa.

PRESIDENT RUDD'S ADDRESS.

Standing here in this beautiful and peaceful city of Rochester at the opening of this, our thirty-second annual convention, there comes to me, and must come to the hearts of all of you, blotting out for the moment all thoughts of our own petty affairs, the black cloud from devastated Belgium, from ruined Serbia and from bleeding France. It is right and proper that we should pause and give heed to this cataclysm which has destroyed half the world across the waters—to our part in it—what we are doing and what we are to do for the protection of our smaller helpless sister nations and the relief of our Canadian brothers and our Allies in Europe under the bloody burden they have borne so long and so steadfastly.

One hundred and forty years ago, in a declaration which rang throughout the world, our fathers stood for the right of every man to life, to liberty and to the pursuit of happiness—and we fought, bled and conquered for these rights. Eighty years later, we entered again and fought to a finish, one of the great wars in the world's history for these same world principles.

Today we are in the midst of a war surpassing beyond measure in horror and frightfulness anything known or dreamed of since the beginning of time—and in this war, too, we are fighting for these same glorious principles declared in 1776. We are fighting that every humblest man on this broad earth, every woman and every little child shall have his life safe to him so long as he does no harm to his fellow, shall have his liberty guaranteed to him by the compact and agreement of all his brothers, and his right to seek happiness in his own way, unquestioned and unhindered.

I see today here among us the rebirth of the old American spirit and the building upon it of a new America—different and greater—nobler by far than all that has gone before. I see selfishness and greed and money worship dropping from us. I see a vast flood of patriotism rising from the depths within us, slow, sure, steady, restless as the flood tides of all the oceans of the earth, and that tide shall sweep on until it overwhelms and destroys this outlaw pirate horde—until Kaiserism shall be known in this world no more; and then shall we restore to the German people themselves the right to life and to liberty and to the pursuit of happiness which has been taken from them by their masters in the attempt to enslave the whole world.

I know, my brothers, that I may speak for you who are here, and for those who are not here, in pledging to our nation's great leader, the understanding man in the whole world today, ourselves, all that we have and all that we are, to the prosecution of this war to its final triumphant finish, and we pledge to our brothers of the north and to our brothers of the Antipodes and to the broken peoples of Europe, that we shall stand shoulder to shoulder with them; that we shall not turn back, we shall not falter, nor swerve from the true course, till this work is done.

But, my friends, though the end is sure the way is to be long and dark. Sorrows and heartaches are in store for us all. Disasters and setbacks are certain. Unthought-of vital problems will confront us at every turn. Many of our younger men are to leave us for the fighting—some, perhaps, not to come back to us again—but we older men have our own good fight to make—our own soldierly work to do. If these, our young men, are to fight at the front, successfully and unhampered, it is for us to see that there is no faltering, no failure at the rear. There will be no medals and no decorations and no plaudits of men for us; but here is our work, and it must be carried through with all the strength and steadfastness of purpose that is given to us.

The successful and economical carrying forward of all business enterprises at home is only a degree less important than the winning of battles abroad, and to this end we must take stock of ourselves and the enterprises placed under our charge. No chain is stronger than its weakest link, and our business chains must be scrutinized and tested, link by link, over and over again. Wise economies must be practiced everywhere, at all times. New and better methods must be studied and adopted. New difficulties and dangers must be anticipated and prepared for. The inevitable constantly increasing expense of operation must be met. Prices must be increased, not arbitrarily nor unjustly, but fairly and as conditions properly demand. The business concern that can and does continue to operate under prices prevailing in former years, acquires no merit, but simply confesses to all the world that former prices were exorbitant.

Many—perhaps all of us—are performing services at prices less than the costs of rendering them, sometimes with full knowledge of the fact, but with a conservative dislike to change long standing conditions; at other times from a careless neglect to ascertain what such services actually cost. The old plan of continuing to do things in a certain way because we always have done so, must be thrown overboard. The only acceptable reason for doing things in a certain way is because we have proved beyond a question that that way is the one best way. We are all to go home and study costs and keep on studying costs, till the war is over. Then, it is to be hoped, we shall have so formed that habit that it will abide with us till the end of our business lives.

One word more. Now is surely coming the test of the adequacy of our perpetual care protection. Let us hope that the edifices which we have reared and have so admired may not prove houses of cards. Should they fall under the stress of this storm, then we must clear away the ruins and rebuild on a better foundation, and in structure so strong that future storms can never possibly shake them.

We will now proceed to the work for which we are met here today.

Civilian Britain's War Duties.

Chancellor Bonar Law told recently of requirements to be followed by civilian Great Britain, especially as to the financial situation, that every assistance may be lent to winning the war. He said: "Lives must be lived more simply; personal household expenses must be reduced to a minimum; all surplus earnings over expenditures must be invested in war bonds. Subscriptions must be 25,000,000 sterling weekly." Chancellor Law is confident that patriotism of the nation will make the rationing of money unnecessary.

Writing Retail Ads.

PLAN SEASON'S CAMPAIGN EARLY.

When the hot months come, and the books showing the past year's business have been totaled and balanced, the florist has plenty of time on his hands for thought of what he can do next season. The advertising enthusiast figures up how much business his appropriation for the past year has brought him, for how much of the increase in his business publicity was responsible, and whether he shall spend more or less on advertising during the months to come. The man who is skeptical of the ability of advertising to do much for him and his business, calculates how well he has done without using much of it, and how much money he could have saved if he had used less. For there are still many in the retail business who maintain that, however great may be the results others derive from it, advertising does not pay in their own cases.

It cannot be denied that some businesses are built up and maintained on a prosperous basis without advertising expenditure. It cannot be denied, at the same time, that advertising has worked marvels in establishing some new concerns, in resuscitating some old ones, and in enlarging firms already exceedingly successful.

PLAN CAREFULLY AND THOROUGHLY.

The most important consideration in the decision of the argument pro and con, is that if a trial of retail advertising is to be made at all, it should be made with thoroughness and judgment. Therefore, plans should be laid carefully and deliberately, and sufficiently in advance to enable the advertiser to employ and co-operate all methods to the utmost advantage.

There is not, of course, the necessity of such early preparation in the case of the retail florist that there is in that of the national advertiser, who often makes plans a year in advance and writes copy three to six months ahead of time. The national advertiser must do this to allow time for the making and distribution of half-tones and electroplates from which his copy is printed, to maintain uniformity of schedule in various parts of the country, and to catch the magazines whose advertising forms close a month or six weeks ahead of their date of publication.

PREPARING COPY IN ADVANCE.

The local advertiser will, however, find it profitable to lay out his advertising schedule a month in advance, and write copy about two weeks in advance of publication. By following this method, you are enabled to co-ordinate newspaper publicity, window displays, circularization, etc., combining these various means in order to obtain the greatest results. An early start affords you time to think what you will feature at a given date, to order far enough ahead to obviate delays and mishaps, and to secure the assistance of newspaper and printer in various ways. These ways include the manufacture of cuts—the extent and advantage to which these may be employed will be shown in a later article of this series—the correction and alteration of copy, the printing of circulars or posters, etc.

HOW MUCH TO SPEND.

Probably no question vexes the intending advertiser who undertakes to formulate his plans in advance, more than does the query, "How much shall I spend?"

If you have discussed the point with other advertisers, you have reached the conclusion, perhaps, that there are as many ways of computing the size of one's appropriation as there are advertisers. Beware of the man who lays down a hard and fast rule. The amount an advertiser should spend on newspaper advertising depends upon the nature of his business and of his clientele, upon how much he spends in other forms of publicity, such as circulars, folders, posters, etc., upon his location—city, suburban, or rural, downtown or residential, and upon the size and the length of establishment of his business.

During the year 1916, retail merchants of the city of Chicago spent $8,000,000 in advertising in seven newspapers of that city. The percentage of income spent on advertising in the case of these retail merchants located in the same city varied considerably. The leading florists of the city varied widely in the amount and percentage of their expenditures.

One of the members of a widely known firm of florists in the city of Cleveland recently fixed the amount of advertising appropriation, based on his own experience and policy, at eight and one-half per cent of the gross receipts. To his firm this is evidently profitable, though to many other florists it will appear an excessive expenditure.

THREE PER CENT OF TOTAL SALES.

A wide canvass of retail merchants as a whole shows that a good policy is to appropriate an amount for advertising equal to three per cent of the preceding year's sales. Thus, if you closed your books June 30, and found sales for the 12 months previous to have been approximately $10,000, you will do well to figure on spending $300 in advertising during the present year. That is, if you have done as much business during the year just past as you have in any previous year. If, however, sales fell off last year, and you face the necessity of taking steps to build up your trade to equal the maximum, the amount of your appropriation should be increased to five per cent of your last year's sales. Suppose your sales of $10,000 last year were $4,000 behind your best year. During the coming year you spend five per cent of $10,000, or $500, on advertising. If you succeed in reaching the maximum of $14,000 this year, you will have spent but three and a half per cent of the year's sales. If you surpass previous records and have total sales of $16,500, you will have spent only the regular three per cent on advertising. This percentage covers all forms of advertising. Three-fourths, or 75 per cent of this, is appropriated to newspaper advertising and the remaining 25 per cent to circulars, folders, window displays, etc.

In dividing up the appropriation, calculation should be made of the special days, such as Christmas, New Year's, Easter, Mothers' day, etc., and an ample proportion of the amount to be devoted to newspaper space allotted for these occasions, the remainder to be spent in regular advertisements. Consideration of this division beforehand will obviate the necessity of either skimping or overrunning the appropriation at an awkward time.

San Francisco.

TRADE CONDITIONS GREATLY IMPROVED.

Business was very much improved here during the week just past. Nearly all the stores have been more or less busy on funeral work. The supply of large numbers of outdoor flowers is being gradually diminished. With few exceptions, sweet peas are practically out of the market and no more are looked for until the winter-flowering Spencers appear again. There has been a marked falling off in the rose supply also, although there is plenty of stock to go around. There are no American Beauties to mention coming into the market. Russell is out of stock also. Ophelia, Hadley and Shawyer are the three leaders with a limited supply of white roses. Ulrich Brunner is still hanging on. While the stem is all that could be desired, the flowers are getting smaller every day. However, it is the best fancy rose we have to offer. There is still an ample cut of Cecile Brunner, and practically none of it goes to waste. Carnations are in oversupply as usual, with very little demand. The quality of the stock being offered is also very mediocre. The first Princess of Wales violets of the season made their appearance during the week. The supply is limited and cleans up readily. The Lillium rubrum that are coming in are of the finest possible quality. They are in excellent demand at $1.50 per dozen. Very few albums were grown in this vicinity this season. The supply of gladioli is still keeping up. Some fine stock is arriving and meets with a steady demand. Chrysanthemums are increasing in quantity every day. Never before have the stores made such displays so early in the season of the "queen of autumn." In former years, most of this stock was sent to distant points at this date, but owing to the great uncertainty of express facilities now prevailing, growers are not risking their stock in long distance shipments, but are sending it to this market. In yellow, we have Crocus and Monrovia as leaders, while Crystal Gem is the only white offered. The flowers are getting a little larger as the season advances and the stock is very clean. Gardenias are still plentiful, and in the absence of orchids, are good sellers. A few labiata were noted during the week and sold at once. Some fine lily of the valley is also coming to the market, but in limited quantities only. Dahlias are very plentiful and cheap. Many of the varieties being offered at present are poor keepers. There is a great assortment of color and grades. They are not much used, however, except in basket work. Zinnias are in steady supply and move fairly well. The cut of asters is now at its height. There are great quantities coming in daily. All grades are to be had and all sorts of prices are being paid, varying from day to day. Celosias and begonias are the principal pot plants noted, with an occasional store showing azaleas. Boston ferns are in large supply and move rapidly. Very few cyclamens have been seen as yet. There are plenty of greens and other decorative stock, including a fine supply of Adiantum Williamsii.

NOTES.

Many of the old guard among the nurserymen and florists in this state will learn with deep regret of the death of James O'Neill, at Haywards, last week. Mr. O'Neill was 91 years of age and had been a resident of this state for over 60 years. He was one of our pioneer nurserymen, and has been often called the "Father of the California fruit industry," as he was probably the first grower of fruit trees on a commercial scale. He was a splendid old gentleman and was widely known and respected. He had retired from active business many years ago.

The E. W. McLellan Co., of which J. A. Axel is manager, is beginning to receive some good Russell roses from the firm's greenhouses at Burlingame. This stock has been very hard to get for quite a long time and the supply coming in is in brisk demand. The usual heavy cut from this firm's greenhouses will be available this season, together with the stock of American Beauties, which the company is growing at its branch range across the bay.

According to Angelo J. Rossi, manager of the coming dahlia show, all available space has been applied for. Many novel features are to be introduced by him this season, one of which will be a large exhibit of birds by the California Canary Association. Great interest is being manifested by the trade in the coming show, and it is already a foregone conclusion that it will be a great success in every way.

According to Frank R. Mills, of Palo Alto, trade has been good this summer with him. He is now cutting heavily of a nice grade of asters and expects to be shipping chrysanthemums at an early date. All his carnation houses are looking in great condition. He will be cutting Cattleya labiata next month. He expects the trade in nursery stock to be brisk and is preparing to handle a large number of trees and shrubs.

Eric James, of Elmhurst, is supplying the trade with some splendid stock of Nephrolepis Harrisii. He has a large supply of his usually splendid stock of cyclamens coming along for the holiday trade. His great concern at present is the fuel supply, but he reports that he has at last arranged for an adequate supply. He says out-of-town shipments have increased largely of late.

Percy Ellings, superintendent of the Lynch Nursery Co. at Menlo Park, says his firm will soon be in with a large cut of early chrysanthemums. He is trying out all of last year's novelties with the idea of determining their value as commercial varieties as grown here in cloth houses. He has several boxes of winter-flowering snapdragons, all looking to be in the finest condition.

John Aitken, of Menlo Park, who as a member of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society, and a large exhibitor at its shows, is spending a few days in this city preparatory to joining the army. He wants to serve Uncle Sam, and if he cannot enlist in this city, will go to Canada and join the forces there. We all hope he may be returned safely to our midst after the war.

William Kettlewell, of San Mateo, was a visitor this week to attend the meeting of the California Dahlia Society. As a member of the exhibition committee, he is one of the greatest supporters the society has. For many years he has been one of our leading growers and hybridizers of this flower. He will be a large exhibitor at the coming show.

One of the Japanese growers down the peninsula is in with a fine cut of Chrysanthemums Chrysolora and Early Rose. The former is very fine, and the Early Rose stock is well colored. This is the earliest date that these varieties have ever been received in this market. They are in excellent demand at good prices.

The American Florist Shop, in Polk street, which is owned and managed by Charles Stappenbeck, has had a very busy week with funerals and decorations. Mr. Stappenbeck keeps a very large stock of flowers and plants, and his store always presents a pleasing appearance.

Kenneth S. Murray, of Redwood City, will shortly be in with a fine cut of roses. He has a splendid stand of his new colored freasias coming along. These were very popular with his customers last season, and he has succeeded in working up a large stock of flowering bulbs for this winter's cutting.

H. Plath is bringing in extra good begonias so early in the season. His stock of Primula obconica is in fine shape and he is shipping large lots every week. His palm houses are all thrifty and clean, and he has an enormous stock from which to fill orders.

E. Lombardi, proprietor of the Anchor Floral Co., at 2001 Sutter street, has been making fine displays of chrysanthemums of late. He says funeral trade has been good with him. He is of the opinion that fall business is going to be excellent.

John M. Daly, past president of the Menlo Park Horticultural Society, was united in marriage in this city last Sunday to Miss Bertha Lounsberry. They have our sincere wishes for a happy wedded life.

Milton Tonini, of the Bay Counties Seed Co., has received a fine lot of boxwoods at his new nursery on Franklin street. He reports advance orders for fruit trees as being ahead of last season.

G. N.

TORRINGTON, CONN.—R. C. Hart, well known as a gladiolus and dahlia specialist, died recently, aged 71 years.

LIMA, O.—A party consisting of John Rieman, Oliver Steinkamp and others, visited the establishment of Rolf Zetlitz recently.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—John White, who was a prominent florist of this city, retiring a few years ago, died August 26, aged 77 years.

WILDWOOD, PA.—The employees of the McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, enjoyed a corn roast at the home of Wm. Nigel, September 3.

MADBURY, N. H.—Lieutenant Robert Holmes, son of Eber Holmes, is reported well on the road to recovery from wounds received in France.

CAZENOVIA, N. Y.—The Cazenovia Greenhouses, operated by Mrs. H. Burden, will be closed during the winter at considerable loss, due to coal shortage.

OBITUARY.

William F. Dreer.

William F. Dreer, president of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., died at Woodstock Vt., September 8, at 8:30 p. m. Mr. Dreer was active in business for nearly 50 years, and was still the guiding hand of the firm up to two years ago, when his health began to fail.

His father, Henry A. Dreer, the founder, died in 1873. Since that time, and before, William F. Dreer has had the responsibility of directing the affairs of a fast increasing seed, plant and bulb business, which is now entering upon its eightieth year, being established in 1838 and incorporated in 1892. His early training began directly upon leaving school at 18, when he was sent to Germany and served with one of the largest seed firms, thereafter going to Paris and continuing until qualified to handle and direct the affairs of an increasing business of many details.

In 1892 the firm was incorporated, J. D. Eisele, vice-president, and C. A. Strohle, director, assuming the responsibility of the plant department in full. Under this management that department grew to great proportions, well known to the trade. Mr. Eisele has been with the firm since 1876, thus serving a lifetime, hard and sincere. Mr. Tull, treasurer, has been with the house over 30 years, and is responsible for the management of the office.

J. Otto Thilow, secretary, came to the house in 1884. George D. Clark, director, who is in charge of the flower and bulb department, has been with the firm since 1895. George A. Strohle, director, has given 35 years of service in the plant department. Charles H. Mackubin, director, in charge of the vegetable and agricultural seeds, is also manager of the advertising department. He has been with the house 20 years.

William F. Dreer was always in close touch with the business, even up to two years ago, when he began to fail in health. He went to Woodstock in July, but shortly after arriving there he was stricken with acute Bright's disease. He died after much suffering. He will be buried, September 11, at Woodstock. Messrs. Eisele, Tull and Thilow will attend the funeral.

Odelle Edward Lansing.

Odelle Edward Lansing, for 25 years assistant chief botanist at the Field Museum at Chicago, was found dead at his home, September 10, circumstances indicating suicide from inhaling gas. He suffered an injury to his head several weeks ago in a fall, and relatives believe this may have caused temporary insanity, which led to the act. Professor Lansing was well known as an author and artist, his pen and ink sketches of flowers having been viewed by thousands who visited the museum, and in collaboration with Dr. Millsap, had nearly completed a book, entitled, "The Flora of Illinois." The deceased was 51 years of age. He came to Chicago when eight years of age, from his birthplace, Albany, N. Y.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Richard Higgins, for many years a florist in this city, with range and flower store on Academy avenue, died August 27, aged 47 years.

ELMIRA, N. Y.—The trade in this city is discouraged. Very few have secured their fuel supply, most of which is going to munition plants, and who are paying women workers $28 per week or more.

MICHIGAN wild ferns for florists' use are a poor crop this season.

THE sale of wild migratory game birds is forbidden throughout the United States by a new federal law.

THE supply of farm and garden tools on sale in Great Britain appears to be considerably smaller than last year with the domestic demand appreciably heavier than in 1917.

Lilies and Water.

Do not overwater the growing Lilium giganteum plants. The leaves feel brittle when right. A few experiments will teach the grower how to tell when water is really needed.

COMMITTEE ON PRODUCTION COST.

Following a discussion on present day cost of production the president was empowered to appoint a committee to collect statistics along these lines, in order that a production cost basis might be worked out, as a means of educating the grower to the prices he should receive for his product in order to make a living and to put his establishment on a proper plane as a business enterprise. I will appoint a committee, and draft them if necessary, but first of all, I am going to call for volunteers. If we can get a few active men in every state, who will be willing to make a record of cost statistics in their own line, and permit them to be used, it will render the work much easier.

Some of our very best cut flower growing establishments, and many of our retail establishments at the present time, are collecting, or have collected, such data. These statistics, of course, rightfully belong to the man or parties who compiled them, possibly with the expenditure of quite a little money and labor, and they may rightfully say "what we have collected is ours; let the 'other fellow' look out for himself." While this idea might prevail in normal times, these times are very abnormal, and every man is "his brother's keeper," to the extent of helping in some way to keep the "Ship of Business" afloat, while the boys are "Over There."

It will be necessary in order to get a comprehensive idea, as I see it, to collect statistics from every state. Cost of fertilizer differs radically in different sections of the country, as does labor, coal, etc., and other items that enter into the business. This phase of knowing the cost of a crop is not a new proposition in other lines, although florists, save in rare cases, have no knowledge of what it costs to produce a crop, and this is the first element of any successful business.

How many florists in different states will agree to collect statistics along these lines, and how many will agree to contribute statistics, they have already collected, on this most important subject?

I trust volunteers from every state will answer this, and then I will appoint a central committee, who will make suggestions just how the different work can be carried out.

Brother florists, if you really want to see our business brought to its proper legitimate plane, give us your aid in this movement, which as one florist in St. Louis, remarked to me, was the most vital subject he had ever heard brought up at any florists' convention.

CHAS. H. TOTTY, Pres't.

Gude Family Active War Workers.

The untiring efforts of William F. Gude, Washington, D. C., in the interests of the trade, both as representative of the Society of American Florists at the national capital and as president of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, his splendid work in the coal conference which resulted in a modified ruling by the fuel administration in favor of the craft, as well as his unremitting watchfulness in the interests of all branches of the business and his achievements in combating unfair legislation, embargoes, etc., are too well known and appreciated to require further mention. It is not, therefore, surprising that we find the other members of the Gude family conspicuous in various kinds of war work.

Mr. Gude's eldest daughter, 20 years of age, is replacing two persons, having released the stenographer of the Gude Bros. Co. for war work, and substitutes in the public schools as a teacher. In addition, she acts as her father's private chauffeur on all occasions in the District of Columbia. Louise W. C. Gude, the second daughter, 17 years old, has entered upon a course of training in one of the capital's leading hospitals. Both young ladies are also active in Red Cross work. The youngest daughter, who was 8 years old August 29, is an enthusiastic worker in the sale of War Savings Stamps, and up to the present time has succeeded in disposing of several hundred dollars worth all by herself. Incidentally, on her birthday she finished knitting a sweater for a soldier on which no one was permitted to work but herself, and she is very proud of the fact that it was finished on her birthday and without assistance. Ernest F. Gude, who enlisted in the regular army October 8, 1917, has merited promotion to the rank of sergeant. He was 21 years of age in July. The other son, Granville, who is 15 years old, wants to get into the flying service as soon as he can, and in the meantime is taking care of an automobile truck, thereby releasing a chauffeur for the army.

Adolph Gude's interesting family are equally active. His son-in-law, Charles De Shields, is a lieutenant in the aviation corps, stationed at Little Silver, N. J., at present. Mrs. Marie De Shields, the eldest daughter, is prominent in Red Cross work. Lieut. Adolph Gude, the eldest son, is an advanced instructor in aviation and is now stationed at Houston, Tex. Two other sons, Edwin and Edgar, who have just reached the age of 19, have been in the navy for more than a year and are now yeomen, first class, stationed at Radio, Va., as wireless operators.

In addition to members of the Gude family, 21 of the firm's employees are wearing the uniforms of the army or navy, on land, sea, or "over there." William F. and Adolph Gude are doing their utmost to keep a nice, interesting florists' business alive and up to as high a standard as the exigencies of the war permit.

TRADE CONDITIONS UNCHANGED.

While the supply of roses still was very plentiful during the week, gladioli and asters shortened up to such an extent that prices went up. Local business showed little improvement over the week previous.

NOTES.

The regular florists' club meeting was held September 5, with a very good attendance. One of the main topics of discussion was the organizing of a state florists' association and the probable results to be derived therefrom. President Kennedy and C. C. Pollworth gave a good account of the proceedings at the recent S. A. F. convention, which according to reports, was ahead of expectations.

Chas. Nitz, who for many years past had charge of the chrysanthemum section at the C. C. Pollworth Co.'s Wauwatosa plant, and produced the goods, has severed his connections with this firm, due to rheumatism. At the same time, a rose section foreman left, thus making things rather perplexing for Superintendent Kennedy for a time.

Mr. and Mrs. O. W. O'Leary, September 8, announced the engagement of their daughter, Hazel Marie, to Laurence Pollworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Pollworth. Young Pollworth left September 9, for Camp Meigs, Washington, D. C., for duty in the quartermaster's corps.

While at work in the greenhouse, Wm. R. Schroeder, of the Schroeder Floral Co., had the misfortune to hurt one of his knee caps, which necessitated medical attention for a short time. He can get around now with the aid of a cane.

The Holton & Hunkel force was busy all day Sunday last getting their exhibition plants in shape for the state fair. Their Humboldt avenue range never was in such fine shape all around as at this time.

Walter, eldest son of Gust Baerman, was called to the colors, August 30. This is the third boy out of that family who has answered the call. He also was active in his father's business.

SAVE COAL! Grow the New Improved Primula Malacoides

Of all the many varieties and strains of Primula on the market now there is not one of them compares, even favorably, with the Rohrer Primula Malacoides. Years of patience and hard labor have developed this one to perfection, both in growth and size of plant, color and production of bloom. A season, such as this, when coal is scarce and expensive, it is one of the most profitable, economical and popular plants for you to grow. The colors are most beautiful shades of Rose Pink, Light Lavender and Snow White. A cool temperature, 40 to 45 degrees, produces the best results. For September and October, the very:

BUSINESS IS IMPROVING.

Business is better this week than it has been for sometime, and a gradual improvement may be expected from now on. The out-of-town demand for stock the past week has been surprisingly good and the city trade has shown a new lease of life. Chrysanthemums are becoming quite a factor in the market, notwithstanding that Golden Glow and Smith's Advance are the only two varieties offered. So far this season no California chrysanthemums have made their appearance to compete with the local stock, and it is not likely that the future supply, owing to existing conditions, will be large enough, if any, to seriously affect the home-grown flowers. American Beauty roses are in good demand and continue to clean up nicely each day at satisfactory prices. Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia are quite plentiful, but are moving nicely, and there is no surplus in either of these two varieties offered. Champ Weiland, Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty and Midway are reaching the market in exceptionally fine condition, and are in good supply. Sunburst are in fair supply and a limited number of My Maryland and Mrs. George Shawyer are available. Mrs. Aaron Ward, Killarney Brilliant, Killarnev, White Killarney, Double White Killarney, Montrose, Hearst and Richmond comprise the other offerings in roses. Carnations are reaching the market in large supply and are improving in quality with time. Gladioli are to be had in quantity, and the same holds true for asters, although the receipts of both are not anywhere near as heavy as they have been. Orchids are still on the short side, and there does not appear to be any too much lily of the valley. Lilies are good property and at times are scarce. Water lilies, calendulas, snapdragons and other miscellaneous stock is to be had, and give the retail florist a chance to vary his window displays at a small cost. The cold weather caused a sudden shortening up of the stock, with the result that out-of-town wholesale houses found it necessary to draw on this market for their supply. Greens are in good supply, especially fancy smilax.

NOTES.

Jack Byers, who is with the American troops in France, writes that he met Louis Ancrola going into the front line trenches recently just as he was leaving them. Both of the young men were employed in the local wholesale market and have gone over the top several times.

Albert Koehler of the American Bulb Co. has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his father whose death occurred last week.

Charles Thomas Johnson, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Johnson, 2242 W. 109th street, Morgan Park, has been promoted to first lieutenant, field artillery, United States army. Lieutenant Johnson was the first selected man to leave Morgan Park for Camp Grant, entering the 332nd field artillery in September, 1917. From private he rose to sergeant and was selected for the third officers' training camp, receiving his commission as second lieutenant June 1, 1918. At a recent examination Lieutenant Johnson was posted as being awarded the highest number of points. He is stationed at Camp Ft. Sill. Before entering the service, Tom, as he is known among his friends, was connected with the Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association. His friends there are delighted with the progress he has made since entering the service.

At Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s greenhouses at Morton Grove everything is in fine shape notwithstanding the scarcity of help and particularly noticeable is the splendid supply of crotons, cyclamens and rubber plants. Their pot chrysanthemums are in excellent condition and are attracting much favorable attention from all the visitors. August Poehlmann's son, Roland, who is now running the steam shovel will again attend school at Urbana entering upon his third year as one of Professor Dörner's students.

One of the most elaborate ceremonies ever connected with the unfurling of a service flag was held by the residents in the neighborhood of Maple Square and Waveland avenue, Saturday evening, September 7. One of the fifty stars in the flag was for Miss Anna Wattman, a nurse. She is a sister of Miss Ruth Wattman, of the Bassett & Washburn office force.

Mrs. Chas. W. McKellar, who cut her left hand severely in an electric washing machine recently, first mention of which was made in our last issue, is recovering and has had about 15 stitches removed. She considers herself lucky that none of the bones were fractured.

C. L. Washburn reports that Bassett & Washburn had an unusually heavy call for stock September 7 from out-of-town points which he attributes to the general shortening up of stock owing to the cool weather.

President Rudd, of the Association of American Cemetery Superintendents, and wife left Tuesday for Rochester, N. Y., where they will attend the annual meeting of the association, September 11-14.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Hotel Randolph, September 5. President Lautenschlager in the chair. E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., occupied the vice-president's place in the absence of O. J. Friedman. In the absence of Allie Zech, who had not returned from his auto tour, E. A. Ollinger officiated as secretary pro tem. The meeting was well attended, much interest being evident in the discussion of retailers' problems, scheduled for the evening. A paper on "Modern Flower Shop Methods", by A. Lange, was read, also another unsigned communication along similar lines. Mr. Lange's paper will be found elsewhere in this issue. A lively discussion followed the reading of the papers, George Asmus, Andrew Chronis, George Weiland, J. C. Craig, Duncan Robertson, T. E. Waters, E. G. Hill, C. W. Johnson, W. J. Keimel, Otto H. Amling, J. E. Pollworth, F. S. Webb and others participating. It was the general consensus of opinion that greater co-operation is needed in all our trade lines, with closer attention to credits and better prices for the stock. A knowledge of the cost of production was considered vital and Duncan Robertson said there is much room for improvement in the grading of stock, suggesting that this work can be done at the greenhouses rather than the salesrooms to the advantage of the florists in the reduced handling.

E. G. Hill thought the wholesalers were sometimes at fault in promoting the interests of untrustworthy beginners without means, against established retail men who pay their bills, often doing this on the plea that it is better to take a chance than let the stock go to waste, with the result that the irresponsible novice, having no intention to pay for the stock, undersells

Providence, R. I.

DEMAND CONTINUES VERY GOOD.

A heavy demand characterized the past week, floral work continuing to keep the stores busy. Stock has been plentiful. Asters are of good quality, and while gladioli are about over, a few make their appearance daily. Carnations continue to improve, and from appearances, chrysanthemums will soon be in evidence. The store windows have been kept filled with plants during the summer, and now with the advent of cooler weather, flowers will take their wonted place.

NOTES.

Ernest K. Thomas, secretary of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, has called attention to the classes of special interest to amateurs and small growers at the exhibition of the society to be held at the Narragansett hotel in this city, September 12-13.

The stock of the floral department at the store of the Shepard Co., conducted by M. Engel, was sold at auction last week.

FALL TRADE OPENS.

Early fall trade has started and business looks very encouraging. Patrons are returning from their summer homes, and plant orders are beginning to arrive. All retailers have started to freshen up and remodel their stores and arrange them with varieties of foliage plants. Roses are seen in quantities and the new crop is looking good. Chrysanthemums have begun to arrive. The first are Golden Glow and October Frost and they sell readily. Shipments of gladioli are arriving each day and clean up easily at a fair figure. Asters never were in better condition. The scarcity of lily of the valley and sweet peas has caused a large demand for swainsona for use in wedding bouquets.

NOTES.

From Thomas Roland's range at Revere, daily shipments of Ophelia and Ward roses and Golden Glow chrysanthemums are being received. From his Nahant houses he is sending a large assortment of crotons, dracaenas and ferns.

Large shipments of Amaryllis Belladonna spikes with from eight to 10 blossoms on each, a beautiful shell pink with a rich fragrance, are being received in the market twice a week from the Duncan estate at Arlington.

A. M. Davenport reports that he has 5,000 chrysanthemum plants for the trade in excellent condition, and the first will be ready to ship the latter part of September. He also has a good assortment of ferns and rubber plants.

Thomas F. Galvin's two stores report a good summer trade and are now well stocked up with fall plants. He has added to his delivery equipment a new and attractive Atlas car.

B. A. Snyder & Co., always hustling, have developed a large trade and the grade of flowers they handle are among the best arriving in this city.

Welch Bros. Co. reports a very successful business, and their out-of-town orders are arriving better than anticipated.

Wm. Nicholson of Framingham, is shipping October Frost chrysanthemums and carnations.

Wm. Phelps, of Lexington, has started cutting delphiniums and Easter lilies.

IMPROVED MARKET LOOKED FOR.

With the fine supply of asters and gladioli that is arriving on the local market, trade should show a vast improvement within the next few weeks. Several heavy rains the past week have done much for the outdoor grown stock, and the cooler weather has brought greenhouse flowers up to a high standard for this season of the year. Roses especially are showing up better, with deeper color, and longer stems. Carnations are increasing in quantity, and are improving slowly in quality. The quantity of dahlias on the market is very negligible. Chrysanthemums, Golden Glow, and Smith's Advance, are attracting a great deal of attention and are used largely in decorative work.

NOTES.

Another greenhouse has been erected by the New Haven Floral Co. which is 232 feet in length, and will be devoted to the growing of blooming plants. This firm will also grow a large number of vegetable plants for winter and spring, after the chrysanthemum season is over.

TRADE CONTINUES SATISFACTORY.

Business is good. All during last week the demand for stock in the market was active and steady and cleaned up everything in good shape. This week's market started off as well. Shipping business is good. Roses are much more plentiful. With the coming of cool weather, the cut began to harden up nicely and gave the blooms a chance to stand shipping well. The carnation cut is increasing in size and now they are an important factor in the week's business. Asters are very plentiful and are excellent in quality. Gladioli are still in a good supply. Easter lilies are not as plentiful as they were but still a fair quantity is available. Some excellent dahlias may be had. Chrysanthemums are coming into the market. Cosmos is now a regular offering. New wild smilax is in the market and is of a high quality.

NOTES.

Mrs. Dora C. Jones, wife of C. J. Jones, died last Friday after a brief illness. Mr. Jones has the sympathy of his friends in his bereavement over his loss.

E. G. Gillett has been having some choice asters and gladioli from the north. They have been selling very readily.

Frank & Sons, of Portland, Ind., are getting some excellent cuts of roses through by parcel post.

C. E. Critchell has been handling many fine asters from the north and New York state.

L. H. Kyrk and wife celebrated their thirty-third wedding anniversary, September 9.

The Bloomhurst Floral Co. is cutting excellent roses at this time.

Although the fall season has not yet fairly begun, there is much activity about the nursery and range of Bobbink & Atkins. Their large local trade always makes work and out-of-town orders keep coming in. There is a great and noteworthy variety of stock at this place, hardy herbaceous plants being always prominent. There is, of course, the usual fine stock of conifers and deciduous trees and shrubs. An exceptionally fine stock of Ficus elastica was recently noticed. Until a recent visit, we had little idea of the extent to which this firm has gone into the growing of garden roses. Some distance from their original nursery and offices, they have another nursery largely devoted to rose growing. They have there almost 15 acres of hybrid teas, all of their own budding and all in fine condition.

The Doswell Floral Co. had the decorations for the booths at Robison park for Old Soldiers' day, September 8, consisting of large baskets of hydrangeas and gladioli, and a banking of many palms and ferns.

A. J. Lanternier & Co. have just purchased a new delivery truck, for their ever-increasing business. They have just received a large consignment of baskets and novelties.

The Red Cross auction will be held at the Court House September 10-14, the florists donating many hundreds of dollars worth of cut flowers and plants.

GOOD STOCK AND TRADE INCREASES.

Business during the past week showed considerable improvement, with stock of better quality helping considerably. Gladioli are diminishing in supply and the few being received are bringing good returns. The weather of the past few weeks has greatly improved all outdoor stock. Asters are now coming in very good and meet with ready sale. Many are as large as chrysanthemums and with long stems. Roses are in demand but receipts are principally in the shorter grades. Ophelia, Pink and White Killarneys, Sunburst and Columbia are the leaders. The last named seems to be a very good variety indeed and is much in demand. American Beauty is selling at better prices than at any time during the summer, and when good stock is offered there is no difficulty in making quick disposal. Some carnations of the new crop are coming in but do not meet with particular favor. Dahlias, which are expected at any time now, will be very welcome.

NOTES.

Earl Hunkel, of the cut flower department of the McCallum Co., has been ordered by his draft board to secure an essential position. He expects to go to the airplane factory at Swissvale. C. C. Phillips will be connected with the cut flower department during his absence.

The retail florists' association has had some very interesting meetings recently. At the last gathering the feature was a very instructive talk on "Costs", by Mr. Gibson. Those who fail to attend are missing much that is of value.

NOTES.

A local florist who has an exceptionally good opportunity to observe the trend of the jewelry business at this time makes the following comment: "If people can afford to buy diamonds, they can afford to and will continue to buy flowers. I saw a woman buying $1,300 worth of diamonds a few days ago. I saw another purchase $130 worth. People may talk about the high cost of living at the present time, but there are many who are receiving double the wages they previously earned, and if the florists do not work out their end of the business and get their share, they are not properly looking after their interests. People who buy diamonds will also buy flowers."

Roy Wilcox, of J. F. Wilcox & Sons, Council Bluffs, has enlisted in the Rhæe Auto School at Kansas City, Mo., where he is now taking technical training for the army. This leaves four of the Wilcox boys at home to take care of the business, but some of these expect to be called for service.

The Jewish holidays brought a good demand to the local florists, the event being widely celebrated in this city with special services in the churches and entertainments in the homes. It is reported that more flowers were sold than on any similar occasion.

GENERAL OUTLOOK ENCOURAGING.

The life of the gladioli season, which seemed about at an end two weeks ago, has been lengthened by copious rains, and there are still fine cuttings on display. Asters, also, on the point of being burned up, have been giving a new lease, and are now plentiful and of fine quality, being a great asset to florists at this period of naturally limited variety of stock. Roses are also very good. The few offerings of chrysanthemums are not arousing much interest at existing high prices. A bountiful crop is now assured. Carnations are coming in slowly, but are small and of short stem. There is a scarcity of pot plants. Business is good, the larger stores being enthusiastic over present trade and the outlook for the future. In less degree than growers, stores are handicapped by short help, and girls are being broken in to take the place of young men claimed by the draft. The fuel situation is brighter. Growers have been able to acquire a supply for some time ahead. The recent government order prohibiting the shipping of Ohio coal for steam use into Michigan, is making available a large extra quantity of steam sizes throughout this territory.

NOTE.

Two local growers had fine exhibits at the recent Ohio state fair, each winning a large number of prizes. The Fifth Avenue Floral Company received 30 ribbons, 17 of which were firsts. Among the large number of premiums secured by the Indianapolis Floral Company, was first on the best collection of 50 plants. This year's amateur exhibit was unusually good, especially in plants.

DEMAND GENERALLY QUIET.

With the exception of a few busy days, trade during the past week was dull. The exposition and horse show failed to stimulate the demand as was the case last year, although a few of the stores had orders for baskets with horse show colors. Roses are very scarce and only a few in the choice varieties are available. Gladioli are still arriving in large numbers. Asters are selling well but the prices are low. The fall crop of carnations is coming in with quality improving. With a scarcity of flowering plants, baskets of cut stock are being used.

NOTES.

Miss Bensen has taken the position of bookkeeper at the H. E. Wilson store, succeeding Miss Harriet Conway who became Mrs. William Ringwood, of Pittsburgh, Pa., September 5.

George Kramer made his usual fine display at the peristyle at the exposition and at the entrances to the floral hall. The arrangements, however, were not as elaborate as last year.

H. E. Wilson arranged several good fall opening decorations for leading stores during the past week.

Chas. Sharp has been on the sick list for several days.

Minnesota State Fair.

The flower and plant exhibition in connection with the Minnesota state fair this year, staged in the Horticultural building, was one of the finest in the history of the fair association. Premiums to the amount of $1,390 were offered and the individual exhibits were noteworthy for the high quality of stock both in plants and cut flowers. St. Paul and Minneapolis were the principal contestants for the awards. August Swanson acted in the capacity of judge and rendered excellent service, the staging being in the capable hands of Professor LeRoy Cady, superintendent of horticulture.

In the class for original designs, were represented a Liberty Bell and two service flags—patriotism, first, last and all the time. Among the table decorations some novel ideas were seen and keen rivalry displayed in the entries.

In all classes, Holm & Olson, St. Paul, took 38 firsts and four seconds out of 42 entries.

Prizes were awarded as follows:

DEMAND AND SUPPLY BOTH LIGHT.

Business the past week has not come up to expectations, the demand being very light. There has, however, been no great overstocks, plenty of short new crop roses, but not any too many of the higher grades. Maryland is one of the best pinks, and Ophelia is coming a good color as is Russell. There are very fair American Beauties, which the cool nights help to improve. Asters are the most plentiful flower, but are distinctly on the wane, and will be succeeded the coming week by the dahlia, which recent rains and cooler weather have greatly improved. Some very good stock is now being offered. Gladioli are still in the running, late plantings furnishing excellent flowers. Larkspurs and blue eupatoriums are the best flowers in their color. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are now seen in all the stocks but most of the flowers are undersize, probably too many grown to a plant. Plenty of Easter lilies are seen—how they will be missed later on after the chrysanthemums go out. Cattleyas are still very scarce, selling at record prices.

EARLY CLOSING.

Anticipating the depletion of the forces in cut flower stores, there is a movement on foot looking to early closing of all shops at six p. m., so as to conserve light during the winter months. This is being agitated by Chas. H. Grakelow, with the idea, that if the trade shows a disposition to assist the government they will, or may, fare better in the classification of the coming draft. The central stores of the retail districts are not averse to this, but those with shops in the business centers of the residence districts say 50 per cent of their business is done after six p. m. when the streets are full of people, who, employed during the day, do their shopping at night, or step in while going to and from places of amusement. Early closing to the class of stores would mean a great hardship, putting many of them out of business. If this were a rule affecting all branches of trade it would compel those engaged during the day to make their purchases at the noon hour in the large department stores.

NOTES.

Chas. D. Ball, one of the oldest palm growers in the country, and one of the most successful, is especially proud of his war stock, which although grown with half his usual working force, is in every particular quite up to the pre-war period. Kentia Belmoreana and Fosteriana are seen in all sizes from seed bed up to 12-inch pot specimens, single and made up. With the exception of early August shipments, his stock subject to many regular and advance orders, is sufficient to fill all the houses, which considering the labor and fuel difficulties, is certainly an achievement. Chas. D. Jr., who has a college degree in chemistry, is now in France in the chemical warfare service laboratories doing his bit in fighting the Hun.

Nelson T. Geiger, on 13th street above Walnut, keeps up a very effective window display, which although business is light these days, amply re-

Jack Duetscher, now a sergeant of the military police, was home for a few days the past week. He is looking well and expects to "go over" in a week or two.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., have a water lily display in one of their large windows, which attracts great attention. Flowers are received daily.

The common blue eupatorium, which can be cut now with stems over a foot in length, is a good outside cut flower, it being a beautiful shade.

WITH THE WHOLESALEERS.

Carl Cortis, when he has finished the coat of white, will have the Jos. Heacock Co.'s store in splendid order for the season's business. The stock of roses at Roelefs never looked better. Labor troubles, for the present at least, have been overcome. Palm stocks are moving at an increasing rate to get deliveries made while the weather permits.

Edward Reid is glad to see the government taking such energetic measures to win the war. He is an active member of the home guard and while always on the job and keeping his business to the front, stands ready at any moment for military service.

"Not a great deal doing the past week," was the report at the Leo Nielsen Co.'s market. The supply of flowers was also light. It is expected that dahlias will be handled in quantities from now on, and will give an added impetus to trade.

"From the way orders are coming in," said Paul Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., "the retailers all over the country must be anticipating good business for the coming season, as we are unusually busy at this time."

Easter lilies, roses and gladioli are features with the Berger Bros. Business was quiet the past week.

HOLIDAY HELPS BUSINESS.

There was an improvement in business during the latter part of the past week, due in a way to the celebration of the Jewish New Year, September 7. A much better quality of tea roses is now arriving, and they go fairly well, but there is a flood of short stock that is hard to move. A fair quality of new crop carnations is now on the market and they sell at 75 cents and $1 per 100. There is yet a surplus of asters, and the best go cheap. There is little change in the orchid and lily of the valley situation. The crop of Cattleya gigas is off and the smaller varieties go at about $1 per flower. There is a slow but steady increase in the supply of chrysanthemums.

September 9.—There is a good supply of stock on the market this morning and a fair amount of business. Prices on special roses are stiffening. The best carnations are now factors at $1.50 and $2.00 per 100. Cattleya labiata is the only orchid on the market in any considerable quantity, wholesale prices ranging at the rate of 50 cents to $1 per flower. The new draft continues to be viewed as a serious proposition for all branches of the trade.

NOTES.

Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the war industries board, has recently written an article for a woman's magazine on "Wartime Thrift." Before Mr. Baruch was called to his present position, he is said to have made an enormous fortune in Wall street speculation. Like a number of other men of his class, he wants the florist industry put out of business. There is nothing new in what he writes; in one form or another, it has all been previously said or written, but we copy one extract:

"I can illustrate by a comparatively small industry which is almost wholly in the field of luxury. We have in the United States about 20,000 men who work in greenhouses. These 20,000 men are almost all engaged in raising hothouse flowers. (A few are engaged in raising early hothouse vegetables.) Now if we go on consuming hothouse flowers, this 20,000 of man power will not be available for war work. But if we will put intelligence and the spirit of patriotism into thought on the subject, we shall stop using these luxuries which we can get along without, and this 20,000 man power will be released, to go out on the farms and raise wheat for our soldiers, or to go into the factories and make shells, guns, airplanes, and the like." We fail to understand why a man occupying the high position of Mr. Baruch, should single out the florist industry for attack. Granted that it is in the field of luxury, there is no other luxury that affords so much unalloyed pleasure with no remorse or after regrets as the use of flowers: "The banquet has its hour, its feverish hour of mirth and song and wine," but the flowers on the board do not intoxicate or provoke revelry. They are mute appeals to man's better nature. A business of war that possibly Mr. Baruch has overlooked, is the nursing back to health—in many instances but a small measure of it—the thousands of maimed bodies and temporarily disordered minds that have passed through the hell of war. The ladies of the National League for Women's Service, by their distribution of flowers in the base hospitals, have abundantly proved that flowers can be more than a luxury. And these flowers are the freewill offerings of the florists and the good ladies who distribute them. When the chairman of the war industries board can convince the people of this country that the enormous waste and extravagance in the expenditure of money that has been going on in other ways has been stopped, he will be in a better position to criticize the use of flowers.

Though the business embarrassment of Alexander McConnel is a matter for regret, it is gratifying to note that his assets will be ample to pay all that he owes, and that the present condition has been brought about by events over which he had no control. In all the talk that is heard of large fortunes being made through the war, there is no record of any of them being made by florists, but on the other hand, they are enduring a fair share of its hardships. Near to the oldest of the retail florists of this city, Alexander McConnel has had a long and honorable career. As a citizen, business man and as a personal friend, he has won the respect and esteem of thousands of people in this city and elsewhere, which will not be weakened by temporary adversity.

Albert Schanzer, who was well and favorably known in the retail trade of this city as a designer and decorator, is now in the American army in France. His last work before leaving for camp was with the Van Praag Floral Co., of Fifth avenue and 40th street, and Mr. Rossow of that company has recently received a letter telling of his safe arrival "over there."

The Colonial Florist, Broadway and 157th street, is a heavy buyer in the wholesale district and has frequent sale days when he makes a specialty of pushing some particular line.

M. Andreopoulos, one of the "Garden Florists" of 2556 and 2883 Broadway, left for a United States army camp, September 3, having been called in the selective draft.

Traendly & Schenck are now handling fine stock of the Mock, Ophelia, My Maryland and other roses.

A. F. F.

New York Florists' Club.

The club met in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building on the evening of September 9, President Schenck in the chair. This was the first meeting after a vacation of two months, and there was a good attendance. President Schenck, in opening the meeting, expressed his gratification of such a representative gathering of all branches of the trade. He requested those present to speak to the absent ones when opportunities occurred, requesting them to keep up their interest and attend regularly.

A noteworthy feature of the meeting was the presence of Mrs. J. Clark Curtin and Mrs. Edward McVicker, of the National League for Women's Service. These ladies have been active in the work of collecting flowers in the wholesale district and distributing them among the sick and wounded soldiers who are in the government hospitals located in this city and vicinity. Mrs. Curtin was first introduced and made an extended address, relating many touching incidents which had occurred in the course of their many visits for the purpose of distributing the flowers donated by the florists. a number of letters which had been received from soldiers, expressing warmly their thanks for the floral gifts. Mrs. McVicker, who is president of the League for Women's Service, next made an address of thanks to the club, and concluded by presenting a service flag containing 15 stars for members in the service, reminding the members that it was something to be highly prized.

Another important and interesting feature of the meeting was the address, with many stereotyped views, of F. R. Newbold. The views were from the battle front and were graphic portrayals of the devastation of war, a country shot to pieces, so to speak—ruined buildings, farms and orchards. A standing vote of thanks was tendered the ladies and Mr. Newbold.

President Totty and ex-President Vincent of the S. A. F., and Joseph A. Manda gave talks on the recent convention. Edward Hanft, New York, was proposed for membership. A letter was read from Prof. White, calling attention to the meeting of the Horticultural societies and floral clubs at the state fair at Syracuse on the afternoon of September 11. A letter was also read from J. P. Jones, an assistant director for the Fourth Liberty Loan, relating to the club's co-operation.

The floral exhibits were creditable. John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y., represented by L. S. Hendricks, exhibited 21 vases of gladioli. Prominent varieties were Mrs. Francis King, Scribe, a handsome mottled pink; Rosy Spray, pink; Fascination, salmon pink; and the well known America and Europa—awarded a silver medal. John Scheepers & Co., New York, exhibited "giant everbearing raspberry," La France; preliminary certificate; also, vase of Gladioli Acedanthera. Vote of thanks. George Schlager, Brooklyn, N. Y., exhibited Catleya Moire, Silver medal. Charles H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J., exhibited their new pink rose, Premier. The committee pronounced it promising and will see it again. Richard Vincent Jr. & Sons, White Marsh, Md., exhibited a vase of Dahlia King of the Autumn; also vase of Dahlia Futurity. Vote of thanks. Highly commended.

TRADE CONTINUES QUIET.

Trade in general is still slow, with now and then a gentle spurt, caused by some big funeral. Routine business is very poor, but with the seasonable weather we have been having it should show some improvement. Stock of all kinds has been easily equal to the demand. Asters have been very plentiful, but not of extra good quality. Carnations are coming in, but in small quantities and poor stock. Roses are plentiful, Columbia and Russell leading in quality. Lilies are plentiful, with a fair call. Chrysanthemums arrive in occasional shipments, but the local cut has not yet shown on the market. Outdoor stock is still arriving in small quantities, and within a week dahlias should make a bid for the limelight. Smilax is scarce. In other greens, the market is well supplied.

NOTES.

The publicity committee is arranging to have the various charitable organizations make all of their requests for donations of flowers to a central committee of the publicity committee, who have received the hearty commendation and co-operation of the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A. and K. of C. organizations. The idea is that any florist being approached for a donation of flowers for these organizations refer them to the publicity committee, who will ascertain from headquarters if the request is bona fide, and will then arrange to get the flowers for the person requesting them. It is not the intention to confine this to the organization mentioned, but to all requests for flowers. If all retail florists co-operate, it will work out fine, and at the end of a year will save all of us something.

Leo, Von Graffen, who has been with the Windler Wholesale Floral Co. a number of years, expects to work on one of the new munitions works being built here. Before being with the Windler Co., he was a structural iron worker.

Walter Weber, who was very sick during convention week, is feeling fine again and has a big time in store for the members of the florist club at their next meeting, which will be held at the H. J. Weber & Sons place.

In the coming registration, about 50 per cent of the florists' club membership will have to register. No doubt it will take a number of the regulars for the army.

J. J. W.

Washington, D. C.

J. E. Baker, now in France in the military service of the United States, in a letter to his former employer, a prominent local florist, says: "The florist business here is nothing compared to what I saw at your store. All funeral wreaths and designs are made of wax and other artificial flowers. One never sees designs made of fresh flowers. They have a very large rose that looks something like the American Beauty, while the lily of the valley is as common as the daisies back home. While on the Belgian frontier, I saw an English Tommy reading a Washington paper, and when he had finished looking at it, he let me have it. Among other things that interested me, was your advertisement. I cut it out to send to you to show how far it had traveled."

Robert Hilton Lacey, son of R. J. Lacey, well-known florist of Anacostia, writes that he has been slightly wounded, his helmet saving his life, but he will have a scar to show that he met a Hun bullet. He is in the hospital, but expects to be back on the firing line soon. He adds: "The best treatment I have received in France has come from the Red Cross, and they do everything in their power for the soldiers. Do not pay any attention to the stories about graft in the Red Cross. It has done too much for us to let any such rumors hurt them in our eyes."

Rochester Exposition Flower Show.

The flower show at the Industrial Exposition proved, as usual, to be an attractive feature. The pillars and side walls were draped with evergreen, making an excellent background for the exhibits. At the right entrance was a heart-shaped bed of blood-red asters, Heart of France, exhibited by James Vick's Sons which made a striking picture. Next to this was another display by the same firm consisting of phlox, gaillardias, buddleias, helianthus, larkspur, cornflowers, etc., also a fine collection of annuals, cosmos, salpiglossis, poppies and daisies. A large American flag, in which 6,000 asters were used, was at all times surrounded by an admiring crowd.

George T. Boucher's display consisted of crotons, ferns, palms, etc., arranged around one side of the hall. He also showed numerous vases of gladioli and asters. The park department exhibit of ferns, palms and tropical plants, together with groups of tuberous rooted begonias, Begonia Vernon, gloxinias, etc., was also very effective. Arthur Newborn displayed his customary collection of baskets, bunches, etc., which were well staged.

Hart & Vick featured an oval bed of white asters, edged with ferns. They also showed wonderful specimens of celosias and numerous vases of gladioli, gaillardias, asters and helianthus. Jacob Thomann & Sons had a good offering of gladioli, celosias, solanums and tritomas. L. J. Bryant, of Newark, N. Y., had an excellent showing of gladioli, among the outstanding being Liebesfuer, Goliath, Schwaben, Rochester White, Mrs. Pendleton and Mrs. King.

At the horse show, Hart & Vick furnished the floral effects. The plain jumps were made of arbor vitae, with high baskets of hydrangeas and red and pink gladioli on each side. At the raised "hunter jumps" were beds of pink and white asters flanking the sides. An aeroplane from the United States aviation school flew over the field and dropped bouquets which added to the scene.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C. President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held June, 1919.

D. J. BUSHNELL, St. Louis, Mo., is visiting his old home in Berkshire county, Mass.

THIS year's production of onion seed, from official report, is double that of 1917.

ONE French steamer has been delayed. French bulbs may not come in till early October.

GREAT BRITAIN is said to have prohibited the importation of sweet pea and nasturtium seeds.

A. H. SMITH, of the S. F. Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, is spending his vacation in New Mexico.

CALIFORNIA retailers are said to be offering mostly retail seed packets on a basis of 10 cents each and over.

LIEUT. JACK EARL, son of Howard M. Earl, of Philadelphia, Pa., has been mentioned in cables for bravery at Frismette.

PRESIDENT WILSON, in a proclamation September 2, fixed $2.20 as the minimum price for the 1919 wheat crop at primary markets.

LATE advices from Italy indicate that the seed crops, both flower and vegetable, have suffered severely from unfavorable weather conditions.

WE are in receipt of the proceedings at the thirty-sixth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, held at Chicago, June 18-20.

THE government seed distribution has been reduced from $3 million to 40 million packets. Regular distributions will be made of vegetable seeds, but flower seeds will be distributed only on request.

ONE California seed grower paid early in the season over forty thousand dollars for cotton sheets to be used in drying seeds. Such a lot of sheets three years ago would have cost only about ten thousand dollars. At this writing the value of the same stock is about sixty thousand dollars.

EDWARD S. LEONARD, secretary of the S. F. Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, has the sincere sympathy of a wide circle of friends in the death of his wife, September 5. Mrs. Leonard was operated upon for appendicitis some six weeks ago and it was felt until near the end that youth and a good constitution would carry her safely through the ordeal. Two children survive.

VISITED CHICAGO: Howard M. Earl, of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and Alex Forbes, Newark, N. J., returning from California; A. J. Brown and wife, Grand Rapids, Mich.; C. S. Clark, Wakeman, O., and family, enroute to Milwaukee, Wis., by auto; N. B. Keeney, LeRoy, N. Y.; George C. Thompson, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.; Joseph Schilder, Chillicothe, O.; John W. Tracy, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

American Seed Trade Association.

President F. W. Bolgiano has announced the appointment of special committees as follows:

Legislative—J. M. Lupton, chairman; Chas. D. Boyles, Geo. S. Green, Watson S. Woodruff and John Smith.

War Service—John L. Hunt, Howard M. Earl, C. C. Massie, Kirby B. White and W. G. Scarlett.

Standardizing Field Seeds—C. C. Massie, chairman; H. G. Hastings, W. D. Ross, August Mangelsdorf and C. R. Reed, supplemented by Leonard H. Vaughan, Adolph Corneli, A. J. Brown and Geo. D. Clark.

Postal Laws—W. F. Therkildson, chairman; E. C. Dungan, Luther A. Breck, F. C. Stokes and Edgar Gregory.

Experiment Stations—L. L. Olds, chairman; H. A. Simmers and H. L. Holmes.

Resolutions—C. N. Keeney, chairman; J. P. Coon and Chas. Hollenbach. Customs and Tariffs—J. C. Vaughan, chairman; E. L. Page, Alex. Forbes, A. Lee Don, F. B. King, A. E. Reynolds and Lem W. Bowen.

Oriental Farm Labor—Waldo Rohmert, chairman; E. O. Pieper, L. W. Wheeler, Frank Leckenby and R. P. Steckler.

Bodger's Novelties.

In a pamphlet recently issued, calling attention to their new asters, zinnias and cosmos of the 1918 crop, John Bodger & Sons Co., Los Angeles, Calif., present illustrations from photographs showing the natural size of several of their introductions. Bodger's Giant zinnias, as shown with a diameter of six inches, give evidence of being an exceptionally fine strain, while another of equal attractiveness is the new Double Giant Picotee, described as being a remarkable and distinct class, first produced by the above firm in 1916 from flesh color, with each petal distinctly tipped with dark chocolate. From this variety during the past season have been produced flowers of striking appearance, all tipped with various shades of dark, resembling picotee carnations, orange, flesh, lemon, pink and cerise. The new double giant quilled zinnia, Bronze King, also a very handsome flower, is said to be quite distinct, the blooms large and full, bronze in color, and the petals all quilled.

Of the new asters, Bodger's Mammoth Non-Lateral Branching is referred to as quite a distinct class. The plants grow about two feet high, with a low branching habit, the flowers of full and immense size, borne on non-lateral stems. The petals are curled and incurved, giving the appearance of a cross between Ostrich Feather and Plain Branching, which makes them very attractive. American Beauty, purple, which was raised and selected from the American Beauty Carmine Rose, was a Bodger introduction last year, and, in addition to other good qualities, is made all the more valuable by the difference in color. American Beauty Carmine Rose, a grand variety which has, it is said, proved to be all that was claimed for it, has large, full flowers with incurved petals, on stout stems from 15 to 20 inches in length, with a longer flowering season than any other aster.

Among the offerings in new double-crested cosmos are: Pink Beauty, soft pink; Crimson King, dark crimson; White Queen, pure white; The Bride, very delicate pink, and White Lady, pure white, outer petals fringed and unusually pretty. As described, these are what are commonly called double, but are not fully double, being double crested, having double centers and a row of petals around the base of the flower, which makes them effective. They are also shy seeders.

FERTILIZER demand during the past year has been heavy in nearly all sections, except in certain potato growing districts where their use decreased somewhat owing to lower market prices for the crop and inadequate transportation facilities.

THE monthly crop report, for August, of the United States department of agriculture, forecasts the condition of the bean crop in six states as indicating a yield of 19,487,000 bushels, as compared with 19,791,000 bushels on the corresponding date in 1917.

TOLEDO, O.,—Clover made a 25 to 35 cent advance September 7, closing at $19.65, gaining 15 cents for the week. Cash timothy was steady, selling at $4.70. September closed at $5.00, October $4.95, December $4.95, March $5.05 and April $5.05.

REPORTS on the winter wheat crop by the United States department of agriculture, from a forecast made August 1, indicate a yield of 15.3 bushels per acre as compared with the 10-year average of 15.7 bushels. The total estimated yield is 555,725,000 bushels.

THE potato patch of King George in front of Buckingham Palace, London, promises to be a great success.

HIGHTSTOWN, N. J.—About 1,800 helpers will be needed to assist the potato growers in this vicinity to harvest 18,000 acres now ready to be dug.

CHICAGO.—As a result of being caught stealing onions from the farm of Clarence Van Arco on Harlan road, Francisco Amedo received two bullets in the shoulder.

WAR gardens planted by the children of the United States are estimated to have saved 50,000 cars for the use of the railroads and added $50,000,000 to the value of crops.

CHICAGO high school pupils, numbering more than 20,000, are at work in the fields harvesting crops, and will continue at their labors until all vegetables and grains are under cover.

A FARM for every returning soldier after the war, made possible by reclamation of 150,000,000 acres of land, is a plan of the Department of the Interior, living wages to be paid by the government to apply against a first payment.

Food worth $15,500,000 from approximately 100,000 acres was produced in Indiana by city and country gardeners this year, according to a survey completed by the Purdue University staff. The value of last year's products was $5,500,000.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, September 10.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, 80 cents to $1.00; celery, crate, 35 to 50 cents; head lettuce, 2-dozen 75 cents to $2.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $1.50; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 40 cents to 50 cents.

New York, September 9.—Celery (state), per bunch, 15 to 50 cents; cucumbers, 50 cents to $1.50 per basket; mushrooms, $1.50 to $3.00 per basket; tomatoes, per carrier, 50 cents to $1.50; lettuce, per package, 25 cents to $1.25; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.00.

Vegetable Markets.

With a lighter movement prices ruled firmer with a tendency to recover and gains were noticed in the more important lines during the period September 3-9. The moderate declines of the preceding week in potato quotations improved somewhat, although the markets were irregular. Minnesota stock ranged $2.45-$2.50 at Chicago, an increase of 15 cents. New Jersey Giants ruled steady at $2.60-$3 per 100 pounds, but strengthened slightly at Philadelphia, Baltimore and southern markets. California shipping points declined unevenly. Sweet potatoes made a good recovery especially in eastern markets. The general range of Big Stem Jerseys for jobbing sales was $6.75-$7.50 per barrel, while at Chicago and several midwestern markets prices ranged from $7.25-$8.25 per barrel. Alabama stock was steady and Virginia again declined at shipping points. Onion prices were generally in a downward direction although the markets as a whole averaged fairly steady. Eastern yellows ranged from $2.25-$2.65, but were weaker at New York. Western yellows were firm at Chicago at $2.65-$2.80, and weaker in Kansas City and Pittsburgh. During the week, eastern cabbage markets declined. Danish seed stock lost fully $15 at Rochester, N. Y., and general declines occurred in consuming markets. Total shipments increased nearly 200 cars.

Burpee's New Cannery.

The management of the seed farms of the W. Atlee Burpee Co., Philadelphia, Pa., is installing a plant for the canning of tomatoes, located in one of the buildings on what formerly was the Malone farm, about two miles west of Doylestown, the structure having been altered and concrete floors and new timbers put in to accommodate the machinery, according to the Doylestown Daily Democrat.

The plant, which has been equipped with the latest modern machinery, will be used to can the by-product (or pulp) of the many acres of tomatoes, which are gathered for seed. The pulp formerly was either thrown away or used for fertilizer, and the cannery does away with the old system which allowed the pulp to ferment, causing a foul odor at the time of the year when the work was in progress.

The canning process is very simple. The machinery gathers up the tomatoes, and they are passed through the revolving screen where they are washed, and then sorted on a table, sent to a centrifugal pulper which separates the seeds and skin from the pulp, and are dropped into a 1000-gallon copper coiled vat where the pulp is boiled down to about half its original content, and drawn out to the filling machine, fed to the cap machine where to the cap, where they pass through several jets of live steam to kill any bacteria and to heat the cans.

The cans used at present are enamel lined, gallon size, and the product will be used for catsup, and highgrade canned tomatoes according to quality. On account of the different varieties of tomatoes grown for seed, particular care will have to be exercised to do each variety separately.

The daily capacity of the plant is 7500 gallons. The filler can be set for 26 cans per minute, but it is thought the average will be about 10 to 13 a minute.

F. F. Rockwell, manager of the Burpee farms, has had his force of men working day and night in order to get the plant ready in time for this season's canning. Mowry Ross has had charge of installing the machinery.

Fatal Comparison.

Election Agent—"That was a good long speech our candidate made on the farming question, wasn't it?"

Farmer—"Oh, aye, it wasn't bad; but a couple o' nights good rain 'ud 'a done a sight more good."—British Farm and Home.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., President; J. Edward Mon, Morrisville, Pa., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-four annual convention will be held at Chicago in 1919.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. H. Perkins, of Jackson & Perkins, Newark, N. Y.

The white pine blister rust has been completely eradicated in 68 out of 71 localities where outbreaks have been located in the past six years, through efforts of the United States department of agriculture and state authorities.

STARK CITY, LA.—At a meeting of the Wm. P. Stark Nurseries, Inc., recently, the name was changed to Neesho Nurseries Co., the officers being as follows: J. J. Hazen, president and general manager; C. E. Buehner, vice-president and treasurer; P. M. Ransom, secretary.

Gardeners' Convention Postponed.

Acting on the recommendation of some of its members, the executive committee of the National Association of Gardeners has voted to postpone its annual convention, which was planned to be held in Cleveland, O., September 24-26, in order that the association may comply with the recent request issued by the director of the railroads to avoid all unnecessary travel and respond to the general appeal to invest in War Savings Stamps by investing the savings of convention expenses, and to hold the convention in Cleveland at the conclusion of the war.

In postponing the annual national meeting for the duration of the war, the executive board urges that gardeners' local conferences be frequently held to discuss ways and means by which the gardeners can aid in speeding the war.

In announcing the convention's postponement, President Robert Weeks instructed that the secretary and treasurer publish their financial reports at the close of the fiscal year, December 1, and that the secretary also publish a report of the association's activities, including its service bureau and the work of the various committees during the year.

M. C. EBEL, Sec'y.

Arnold Arboretum Lecture.

At a meeting of the New York Florists' Club, to be held in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building in that city, October 14, the feature will be an illustrated lecture on "The Arnold Arboretum, the World's Greatest Tree Museum," by Edward I. Farrington, Weymouth Heights, Mass. The speaker will go through the Arboretum from end to end, showing pictures of the different groups of trees and shrubs as they are found along the way, picking out the most interesting and describing them, as well as telling something of their history and the cultivation required. Through his articles which have appeared in the leading horticultural publications and newspapers, Mr. Farrington is well known and his lecture on this interesting subject should prove a treat to all who hear him.

Birds' Place in City Parks.

Besides the enjoyment of having birds present in parks, there is the economic value of having them as enemies of plant pests. They help to police the parks by reducing the insects that feed on foliage and are peculiarly important because the beauty and utility of parks largely depend on preserving the vegetation. Such changes as may be made to attract birds to parks may also enhance the beauty or interest of the park itself, as in fountains and martin houses and other artistic nest boxes. Feeding stations may have slightly designs and be worked in as part of other park structures, and their presence adds not alone to the benefit of the birds, but to the pleasure and interest of thousands of lovers of nature. They are particularly pleasing to children and instill the lessons of bird protection as opposed to the practices of bird destruction sometimes indulged in.

The value of such stations is attested by Theodore Wirth, superintendent of Parks, Minneapolis, Minn. He says:

"For the past five or six years we have maintained a number of feeding stations in various parts of our park system, with very satisfactory results. I give a list of the birds which stay with us over winter. The permanent winter birds found in the vicinity of our parks are the chickadee, bluejay, white-breasted nuthatch, downy and hairy woodpeckers, and screech-owl; winter visitors, the redpoll, tree sparrow, and junco; irregular winter visitors, the evening grosbeak, Bohemian waxwing, and snow bunting. It is safe to say that a large number of these species are staying in the parks on account of the food supplied them. The feeding of the wild birds in the parks is a great success and will be continued."

Summer food should also be supplied in the form of berry-bearing shrubs, and the fall planting of these should be arranged for during the summer season. Those interested should send to Washington for Department of Agriculture Bulletin 715, "Attracting Birds to Public and Semi-Public Reservations."

Park Presidio Dahlia Show.

The second annual dahlia show of the Park Presidio Association was held at San Francisco, Calif., August 24-25. It was the first show of the season and was largely attended. Pelicano, Rossi & Co., of San Francisco, made a very comprehensive display of Dahlia Dr. Harry Tevis and several other new seedlings not yet in commerce. This exhibit was not for competition, and was awarded honorable mention. F. C. Burns, of San Rafael, Calif., made a fine display of all his new varieties, which showed great cultural perfection. This exhibit also received honorable mention. Pride of California, Richard Lohrman's sensational red, was largely in evidence and splendidly grown. Golden Gate park also made an attractive display which was for exhibition purposes only. Following is a list of the awards:

Parcel Post Solves Shipping Trouble.

Shipping Expense Reduced and Special Delivery Feature Eliminates Delay.

Packing and Wrapping Important.

The parcel post offers to solve—in fact, has solved—the problem of the successful shipping of cut flowers to all parts of the country that have heretofore been possible to reach only by express. This new service was at first thought to be impractical, mainly on account of the limitations in size and weight of packages. When the width and girth of a box was raised to 72 inches and the weight to the third zone (a distance of 600 miles) to an allowance of 20 pounds many shipments were thus rendered possible. The greatest advantage, however, was the special delivery feature, which, after train schedules were known, enabled shippers to make any train desired by having the packages in the depot a short time before the scheduled time for departure. An order of 100 pounds, packed in five boxes of 20 pounds each, covered by the special and other necessary postage, is nearly always carried on fast train time without delay, at much less expense than when sent by express.

The accompanying illustration is of a package made ready for this service by the Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia, Pa. Corrugated strawboard boxes are used exclusively. These are lined inside, more or less heavily, depending on the severity of the weather, with newspapers, finishing next the flowers with a white sheet of a sort of parchment paper. Roses are now all received from the growers in wrapped or banded bundles of 25 flowers. This avoids handling and consequent bruising of the flowers and greatly facilitates the work of packing and unpacking. These are all shipped in the original packages, being bound in or tied with a series of tape stitches through the bottom of the box. Carnations in bunches and other flowers are also fastened in the same way. With a large bagging needle, this is easily and quickly done, and thus secured there can be no possible shifting of the contents. The edges of the side linings are then folded over the top, making a complete protection.

In warm weather broken ice is used in the boxes; in fact, even in winter, where they are packed rather closely and have a long journey before them, a little ice placed either in the center in an enclosure made with two strips nailed across, using tin washers on the outside of the box, or at times the ice is shaken in amongst crumpled newspaper over the stems. If the journey is a long one, oiled paper is used as the first box lining. The many thicknesses of paper in the box appear sufficient to absorb the water from the ice as it melts. Heavy thicknesses of paper outside and inside the box in hot weather act to both keep out the heat and conserve the action of the ice.

Outside layers of newspapers are placed on a sheet of stout brown fibre paper that will stand all ordinary handling. This paper is quickly gauged to an inch by the experienced wrapper, so that it will fold evenly with no bulky corners or projections to catch or tear with rough handling. The box is then tied with a light manilla rope, large enough so that it will not cut the paper.

The printed stickers, large address label and inscriptions are important. With these conspicuous distinguishing marks in blue and red, there is no question as to the contents of the box and the necessity for immediate delivery. The special and other stamps are always placed under the special delivery label, which is deep blue in color, with white letters, as is the notice "Do Not Crush—Cut Flowers—Perishable—This Side Up," and on the large white address label are in red, while "Handle With Care" is in white on a red label. The tag envelope contains the invoice, with the parcel post and tax, which cannot be ascertained until after the box is tied up and weighed. A separate slip, showing these charges for each box, is filed with the cashier who furnishes the stamps.

The rapid deliveries made in this way are much appreciated by out-of-town customers, many of whom, under the old system, had been obliged to cancel regular orders and do the best they could with local supplies.

The weights and prices for postage are as follows: 50 pounds to all zones; 70 in first and second zones. Postage, first two zones—1 cent pound plus 4 cents; third zone, 3 cents pound plus 4 cents; fourth zone, 4 cents pound plus 3 cents; add 1 cent revenue for every 10 cents of postage. A 10-cent special delivery stamp insures immediate delivery on arrival at destination. Postal maps showing zones from all central points are furnished free on request by the department at Washington.

Government Expert Tells of Possibilities

The coming carrier is the parcel post, in fact, it has already arrived, and to the extent of its present limitations, is giving a service on all first class mail routes that can scarcely be improved upon.

Mark J. Mullin, who has grown up with this service since its introduction in January, 1913, delivered an address before the Philadelphia Florists' club, at its May meeting, giving a short history of this progressive movement and the plans of the department for its enlargement. It was made possible by the great success of the rural free delivery, which was established in 1896. This branch of the service employs 44,000 carriers, who cover daily routes aggregating 2,000,000 miles. They enable farmers to get the daily papers, and thus keep up with the news. They furnish means of education through the correspondence schools to men who could not have acquired it in any other way.

Eleven pounds was the parcel post weight limit at first. This later rose to 20, and is now 70 pounds, with a length and girth package measure of 84 inches. This weight is for first and second zones. Other zones are limited to 50 pounds. C. O. D. packages for perishable articles such as cut flowers are not accepted for delivery beyond the second zone, as they might be refused. Insurance on packages includes only safe arrival at destination, but with no time limit. Recovery could be made if error or carelessness in the service was proven, in which case the employee at fault would have to pay. Carrying charges are being gradually reduced, as it is found possible. The business is growing faster almost than the department can keep up with it. Owing to the great congestion on the railroad lines, particularly during the past winter, the parcel post service was obliged to handle much of the business of the express companies who placed one embargo after another, refusing for days at a time all light packages which then came to them. All were accepted for parcel post delivery, nothing at any time being refused. If it had not been for this new department, the business of the country would have at such times been brought to a standstill.

AUTO SERVICE.

A new auto service is now being introduced. There are at present autos that leave Philadelphia at 3:30 a. m., go through Baltimore, and reach Washington 8:30 p. m. A similar service leaves Washington for Philadelphia. They traverse a part of the country away from railway stations, reaching fourth class post offices, small villages and farmers along the way. Schedules showing time of arrival at adjacent villages are furnished, so that the farmer can have his shipments ready and hang out his call card. The packages are weighed, and stamps furnished, all of which is a great convenience, which by the great increase in the business is apparently being much appreciated.

Many shorter routes have been established, as from Oxford to Philadelphia, farm products being collected in the morning and delivered to consumers in Philadelphia the same afternoon. All superfluous handling and middle profits are thus avoided. The danger of bad accounts was also done away with by the C. O. D. feature. New auto routes are constantly being surveyed. If roads are satisfactory and there is business enough in sight, a new car is put in operation.

It developed at the meeting, that a Philadelphia-Dovlestown route, would be of great service to florists. Mr. Mullin said he would have it surveyed immediately, and if conditions were found favorable, it would be at once put in operation. There were a number of such routes now in existence, although this auxiliary service, using for the most part one and one-half ton trucks, was only established January 1 last. There is a route to New York, another to Atlantic City, and before long it is expected to traverse the entire state of Pennsylvania from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh.

Foliage in Design Work.

General effectiveness is what counts most in all floral arrangements. While the order is being considered, much stress is oftentimes laid on the flowers to be used, their quality, length of stem, quantity, etc., the final words generally taking the form of the promise, that "it will receive our personal attention and will surely be something handsome." "Just leave it to us—we are sure you will be pleased with it", is another and better expression, as it opens the way to whatever is found most advantageous at the time. Many persons, when they order, specify all roses, but when they see a piece finished, a crescent wreath, for instance, of galax, with a large, well arranged center of white, yellow or pink roses, covering about one-third, the balance of the form rounded out perfectly with the bronze foliage, they admire and accept it as being more artistic and are willing to pay the same price as for the all flower design, which would have taken twice as much stock.

There is nothing new or novel to most of the trade about the use of galax leaves in design work, but the "artists" were very chary about taking hold of them at first. In the early days of their struggle for recognition prizes were offered in the advertising columns of THE AMERICAN FLORIST by those interested in their introduction, for the best methods of arranging them. Cut flowers were comparatively scarce in those early days, so that the economy, as well as the novelty of the galax gradually brought them to the front, which place they still hold with many of the trade. Prepared magnolia leaves have made a strong bid for popularity on account of their lasting qualities. Made up wreaths or other designs of the prepared magnolia will keep indefinitely, which makes them especially valuable for stock to be made up in advance of any rush period.

PACKING AND WRAPPING FOR PARCEL POST.

Box Properly Tied and Labeled for Shipment by the Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Mr. Mullin urged all who used the service to communicate with their local central office, on any matter that pleased or displeased them, as the government was very anxious to make this the best department of its kind in the world. Plans for the betterment of the service in any particular line of business, such as weight and sizes of packages as are used by florists, if presented by a number of men or an association, would receive most careful consideration.

The prepared sago palm leaves, now so generally used, were quite a while in getting an entree. The first specimens had a very artificial look, with their varnishy painted surfaces, but by experience and gradually learning the requirements of the trade, the treatment is such that the leaf is now so almost perfect in its imitation that it is difficult to tell them apart when made up. The prepared leaf can be had in much larger sizes than that ordinarily cut from the greenhouse.

There are still a number of artists who taboo anything of an artificial nature; leucothoe sprays and galax, in both green and bronze, and the fresh green magnolia leaves form the foundation of most of their work. Well made wreaths of any of the above fresh materials, and there is an art in their making, will, with the addition of almost any flower, work up from a pleasing to a most elegant and artistic design.

There are a number of ferns that are useful; an all adiantum wreath of cuneatum, farleyense, or the Glory fern is very satisfactory when decked with flowers. Cyrtomium falcatum, in its glossy leaf appearance, is rich looking and dresses up beautifully. There is much good material to be obtained from the highly colored foliage of such plants as the croton, pandanus, dracena, Begonia Rex and other like plants. A wreath of croton leaves is especially showy and attractive. Sprays or branches also give color and distinction to the base of any large design. Pandanus Veitchii crowns, or plants cut off from three to four-inch pots, are conspicuous in form and color for large wreaths. Dracena Sanderii, with its spray like stems or branches, gives much the same effect. The smaller leaves of the Rex begonias are very rich looking, while there is nothing better to add an air of dainty elegance, than cut stems of Cocus Weddelliana.

Woods foliage, such as the laurel, pin oak and pine, are especially useful and could be made much more of than is the usual practice. A well made wreath of fresh laurel is effective in itself, as is also that of the green oak leaves, the latter in the fall of the year, when they acquire their glorious sunset tints, being especially suitable for the funeral of an elderly person. Ivy leaves are also not to be forgotten, as a well made wreath of leaves and short stocky sprays is very attractive. The addition of violets, pansies, irises or other purple flowers and good quality purple ribbon, make this very appropriate for the person of three score years and ten or over.

As a rule foliage, especially of the distinctive kind, is not given the importance it deserves. Considering the expense and its effectiveness, as against the same value of cut flowers, the foliage will be found the most economical as well as better, in striking effects produced. In a large cluster of almost any kind of flowers, a spray or two of crotons, a Pandanus Veitchii head or crown, a begonia leaf or two or other foliage of this character, will relieve the sameness and take the place of more expensive stock, particularly when flowers are scarce and high. Cibotium fronds make an elegant backing for a select spray, as do large fronds of Pteris argyrea, whose silvery foliage works in beautifully with flowers of any color.

A great advantage with foliage is that it can be kept in stock for quite a long time, while the life of cut flowers is so short. As a window piece for show purposes, work of this character is much less expensive than if made of all cut flowers. It is, I believe, more effective, and when the flowers are gone much of the foliage can be used over again. Small plants of ferns, pandanus, begonias, cocus, etc., by having the soil washed from the roots, and wrapped with a little sphagnum, are more easily handled and will keep much longer than if cut off. There is also an originality about arranging flowers in this way that gives character and distinction, making them particularly noticeable in a general collection, where they stand out and attract attention on account of these unique features.

What Is Advertising?

Advertising is the power of an idea multiplied. But how multiplied? By its continued use it becomes a force, more or less unconscious, yet at the same time, growing in its purpose so that when the article or material you desire is needed, the manufacturer or dealer's name who handles or makes the object comes to you instantly. When you can create this thought in the public mind you are advertising in the true sense, and also getting proper results from the efforts made.

Publicity and advertising go hand in hand, and therefore the advertiser who thinks in terms of publicity, enters into a channel of broad business thoughts, as without advertising, business is merely moving with the tide, but in these days of strenuous efforts we must move faster if we expect to keep up with the new stride now necessary to assist in doing our share, so that the returns to United States revenue coffers will put the florist business on the level to which it is justly entitled.

To those progressive florists, who pause and reflect before entering into an advertising campaign, whether it be large or small, I say, go to it now stronger than ever, regardless of the thought of not being able to get flowers enough to sell. If you create the demand for flowers, you will find material to sell.

Be progressive and optimistic in your thoughts and actions, and the rest comes easy. Also, in these days of strife, we must learn the new curriculum and use instead of the three R's: in the days of old, the three C's: cool, calm and collected, and being in this mood, and using the modern weapon "Advertising" to help your business, flowers ought to be in greater demand than ever, providing you stick to it. Make up your mind this season to try it out and stick to it persistently and success will crown your efforts.

By using our slogan, "Say it with flowers," whenever and wherever possible, on all advertising of every character, whether stationary, newspapers or otherwise, the accumulateness will bring you the desired effect.

THE CARNATION.

Planting In Permanent Quarters.

It is now time that all the carnation plants were in their permanent quarters, and any planting still to be done, should be finished up without further delay. The plants do not derive any benefit from being left in the field after September 1; on the contrary, just as soon as the nights begin to get cooler, factor connected with these plants at the present time is to make sure that the soil in the benches is in the proper condition, which means that the surface should be level and even, so that when watering all parts will take the water freely. We always like to get to the point with our newly planted carnation beds where the soil takes the water freely. The plants then respond with a rapid, vigorous growth. A good plan is to examine the soil to see if it is in the same condition underneath as on given another topping, but do not carry it to the extreme. Go over the plants and nip back the shoots that have begun to stretch out so that the plants will be of uniform size. Another very important part of the work just now is to get the plants into the rings or supports so that the branches do not lay on the soil to get diseased and rot.

Do not neglect the spraying with nicotine to check the appearance of aphids. They increase very rapidly and quickly infest the plants, unless the spraying is attended to regularly.

the wood commences to get hard and woody, and the longer they are left outside, so much longer they will be to recover after planting inside. Also, when the planting is done very late, it takes the plants half the winter to get into full production.

It is best to follow slightly different methods in planting at this time than those advised for July or early August planting. Do not shade as heavy—just enough to break the direct rays of the sun and prevent serious wilting, is all that is necessary. The slower root action also means extra care in watering so as not to flood the soil and cause it to become sour. The best plan is to water sparingly at the start, then when the roots show that they are starting out again, give a more thorough watering. Less syringing should also be given; on very few days will it be found necessary to give more than one syringing, which ought to be done between 9 a. m. and noon to give the atmosphere a chance to become reasonably dry before night.

It will be necessary to be more particular to guard against draughts until the freshly planted plants become established. Keep the doors and side ventilators closed for a week or so directly after planting. Very few carnation growers now advocate side ventilation for their houses, having found out by experience that the plants do best without it, especially when the top ventilation is ample.

Follow the same plan of keeping the soil open by frequent scratching of the surface as practiced with early planted stock. This will also keep a check on the weeds. The plants which have been inside a month or more are now becoming well established. A very important the surface. Some soils appear to be damp enough on the surface, while underneath it may be very dry. This makes a wet collar around the stem of the plants, causing stem-rot.

It is yet too early to let the plants come into bloom. Slow growing varieties with the habit of Rosette or Matchless should not be topped back after this date, but with the quick growers that have fine foliage, unless they are plenty large enough and there is a demand for the flowers, they still can be Easter Lilies.

Paper by William C. Hall, Montreal, Quebec, read at the twenty-first annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, Ottawa, Ont., August 12-16, 1918.

Whenever I see an Easter lily, I shall always be reminded of the spring of 1918, and of the hard work we had to bring our lilies into bloom for that occasion, but when the holiday was passed, we had the satisfaction of knowing that we had flowered and disposed of all our stock at good prices, although not at any greater profit than at other seasons. The thought came to us that if the great war should cease, and peace come this year, we would double our planting of lilies for next Easter. At that time, though, the war looked as if it might go on for several years, and at the present time, taking all conditions into consideration, we think it possible that peace might come. We think it possible, but dare not think it probable. We would increase our growing of these plants, for, if peace should be declared, we believe that the following Easter season would be the greatest ever known. It is not for me to explain why it would be so, but from the lily point of view, the common sense of the grower says so.

But fate is against us. The necessities of war decree that no bulbs be shipped to us from Japan. This order may be modified, but it must be modified at once so that the Japanese may have time to get the bulbs ready for shipment. It is true that we may get the Harrisii bulbs from Bermuda, but at the best of times they were of very doubtful value, being so full of disease, and now with the import of Japanese bulbs prohibited, Bermuda will be scoured for stock, and we may be sure of getting all kinds of bulbs that will not be fit for forcing.

Then there is the question of fuel. This was serious last year, and it will be much harder to obtain coal this season. Perhaps we will have no lilies for next Easter. Can we do without them? We have got along very well without the Belgian plants, such as the azalea for Christmas, but I am afraid that we will miss the lily at Easter.

We have always grown Lilium giganteum for this holiday. It makes a very stout and sturdy plant, the foliage is dense and handsome, and gives a goodly number of flowers of very good substance. It will stand hard forcing and can be held back for a long time while in bud, but the giganteum variety needs a lot of room, and possibly that is why the big growers plant multiflorum, which is not so heavily leaved. The Formosa lily is a grand lily for the florist who retails his own stock; its flowering season covers several weeks, as the flowers do not open all at once. While the giganteum shows some disease, we have entirely discarded the Bermuda lily (Lilium Harrisii) on this account.

Where an extra fine lily is wanted, you must plant a large sized bulb, but these latter take longer to force into flower. I am sure that a 10 to 11 giganteum will take two weeks longer to bloom than the 7 to 9 size. A few years back we could get good bulbs of 7 to 9 size that gave us six to 12 flowers, but a 10 to 11-inch bulb is now required to produce such a large number of flowers. The 7 to 9-inch is a popular size, as they average three to six flowers when they are good. The 6 to 7 size is very useful for boxing to grow on for cutting purposes only.

To produce really good lilies for the Easter market, a temperature of at least 60° must be maintained. In starting the bulbs, a temperature of 65° is necessary. A great many lilies are ruined by not starting the bulbs in a warm place, and in allowing the temperature to drop to 50° and lower shortly after a growth has been made, resulting in those very dwarf plants that we very often see offered. Over-watering will have the same effect. The giganteums need heat, well maintained. When the buds are well formed and bent down, they will stand retarding. Some of the young buds will be lost in holding them back, but more are lost when extra heavy forcing is resorted to.

Lilies like a fairly heavy soil. We use old carnation soil with a little old cow manure added. We plant in 6-inch standard pots. A few grown in 5-inch pots come in handy for shipping, but our best lilies are grown in 6-inch. Lilies need careful watering and the atmosphere of the house should be very moist at all times. We syringe at least once a week with a weak solution of nicotine. We discard all plants promptly that show signs of disease, and figure on losing 10 to 20 per cent that way.

In order to get fine shapely plants with dark green foliage, we keep moving the plants, giving them more and more room, and this is where the wholesale growers get ahead of us from the profit point of view. They plant in 5-inch pots and place them practically pot to pot, and the plants stay that way until marketed. The best are sold as pot plants, and the rest are cut. The big growers are not so particular about the foliage being perfect right down to the top, and they receive just as much per bloom as the small grower who gives his plants some room and who consequently has less bloom per square foot.

Decatur, Ill.

Henry Gerstenkorn, florist and landscape gardener, has formed a partnership under the name of Henry Gerstenkorn & Co., with H. Mueller, of the H. Mueller Manufacturing Co., one of the largest brass goods firms in the United States with branches at Port Huron, Mich., and in Canada. The florist business, which has grown to nearly double its original proportions under Mr. Gerstenkorn's able direction, has been removed to a 12-acre tract, offering much needed room, and will be known as the South Side Drive Nursery. It is situated on rural route No. 6. A contract has been let for additional houses, but due to shortage of material, these may not be built this fall. The labor shortage is also a matter of concern. Mrs. Gerstenkorn, who has been of inestimable assistance to her husband, has, we regret to learn, lost her eyesight completely.

TRADE CONTINUES TO SHOW IMPROVEMENT.

Business is improving each day and everywhere rapid strides are being made to make this season one of our best, considering the condition of our country. All lines of the trade are working together, trying to keep the business intact, with the growers closing parts of their greenhouses and limited to 50 per cent of coal supply and retail stores employing ladies to fill the places of the men. Therefore it is all the more important that everyone should put his shoulder to the wheel and cooperate. The heavy frost the past week has ruined the outdoor flowers, causing quite a shortage at the market and the advance in prices is very noticeable. Carnations are arriving better each day and $2 a hundred is a good price. Chrysanthemums are good, selling for $1.50 and $2 a dozen. Asters are on the wane and $1 a hundred is a good price. There is a large demand for cosmos and coreopsis, and these clean up easily each day. Clematis paniculata sells well at 50 cents a bunch and is very attractive arranged in baskets and vases.

NOTES.

Carbone Inc. had two very attractive window displays the past week. Large crotons and aspleniums and shallow bowls arranged with nerines, grown by Thomas Roland, in one, and in the other Amaryllis belladonna, light blue delphiniums and Humboldtii bouvardia in artistic baskets and vases.

Welch Bros. Co. has remodeled its store on Devonshire street and enlarged the salesroom. Business at this house has been excellent, and if it continues, will go ahead of last year.

Houghton & Gorney continue to have very attractive windows. Mr. Gorney is away on a vacation and the buying is being done by Ernest Whitney. The firm reports business good.

The dahlia and gladioli exhibition at Horticultural hall is attracting a great deal of attention and some new and rare specimens are being shown for the first time.

At Penn's store on Tremont street there was an attractive display of dahlias and crotons. Business has been very good the past week.

LIMITED SUPPLY AND FAIR SALES.

The demand for all flowers has been fair with a limited supply. Roses are good and with the exception of one or two days the receipts have been sufficient to meet requirements. Asters are now varied, both as to supply and quality, several heavy rains having a bad effect. Gladioli, hardy hydrangeas, cosmos, calceolarias and snapdragons are filling in to good advantage in the sale of boxes. There has been a good call for funeral work. Weddings and social events are thought of but seldom seen.

NOTES.

The trade in this city was pleasantly surprised September 12, when Joseph Streit and his family paid a visit to their old home here. It is needless to say Joe used his portion of gas in his car, for the first day he visited all of his friends from Palmer's downtown to Charlie Sandiford's and many times at Charlie Neubeck's. He visited his "old home" at Anderson's on Elmwood avenue and made a personal inspection of each valve and tap, benches, etc., and was satisfied that he did a good job and that they are holding up well. Joe will be found on McClellan avenue, Detroit, for another year.

The political bee likes flowers. The late W. F. Kasting was a nationally known official, W. A. Adams has been in the game and now S. A. Anderson has the republican nomination for county treasurer, which is about equivalent to election in Erie county. He will be a good man in the office, insuring a business administration.

W. J. Palmer & Son had a good wedding order last week at the summer home of one of this city's "400." Outdoor flowers were used in quantity. Mr. Palmer and his family are at Lake Muskoka, where they will remain until about September 20.

The display of roses and other flowers at Delaware, South and Humboldt parks have been finer this year than ever before and great praise is due Messrs. Elbers and Fitzwilliams.

L. H. Neubeck is receiving some fine gladioli from his greenhouses at Williamsville. Chas. Sandiford is also showing fine stock of this flower.

William Sievers, the enterprising florist of Genesee street, has his new store about completed.

BISON.

CLEVELAND, O.—The Jos. M. Stern Co., florists' supplies, has moved to more commodious quarters at 223 Huron road.

COLUMBUS, O.—The Rock Floral Co. has discontinued business, the stock being purchased by Joseph Katona of Oentangy Park.

Milwaukee.

TRADE CONDITIONS IMPROVE.

The local demand has shown considerable activity, and with the shortening up of good stock conditions were more satisfactory all around the past week. The nights have been cool and an oversupply of good cut flowers will not be likely for some time to come.

NOTES.

Frank Sylvester, who for the past few years has rendered valuable services at the J. M. Fox & Son (Inc.) cut flower department, and whose parents still are in the florists' business in Oconomowoc, Wis., has resigned and will enter a more essential profession. Being in draft age, he thought it advisable to make the change voluntarily.

S. A. Anderson, Buffalo, N. Y.
Republican Nominee for County Treasurer.

The Hummel & Co.'s greenhouses, shed, tools, etc., located at 54th and Pabst avenue, have been purchased by Rud. Preuss & Sons, who are wrecking the place at this time, preparatory to adding them to their North Milwaukee range next spring. Hummel & Co. will continue their store at Reservoir and Third streets.

The A. F. Kellner Co., who had the decorations for the fall openings at Gimbel Bros. and T. A. Chapman Co., claim that hooverizing among the department stores is very pronounced this fall.

News of the death of Arthur H. Schroeder will be found in this week's obituary column.

GOOD STOCK MOVES FREELY.

Trade has been very good the past week. Flowers are of much better quality, and when the customer can get good stock, there is always good business. Asters are coming in large quantities and are of very good quality. The longer stemmed flowers are very much in demand at good prices and the short stems are sold for funeral work. The first dahlias reached the market this week. They are the finest we have ever seen and are very much sought. From now on, daily shipments are expected. This city has been a good market for the dahlias, and most all of the stores have beautiful displays while they are in season. American Beauties are more in demand than at any time this season. There is no large amount being received and prices have advanced. Specials are selling at $4 per dozen. Lilies are only coming in limited numbers and clean up well each day at $15 per 100. The quality is very good. Some small gladioli are now coming and have a good call at fair prices. Greens of all kinds are very plentiful. There are a few orchids on the market, but they meet with very little demand.

NOTES.

Each week at the luncheon of the retail florists' association there is always some interesting topic. September 10 Mr. Gibson talked on the "costs" of the retail florist. He gave some facts which many florists did not know and which are amazing. He keeps a complete record of everything that goes into an order, and by his special system he can tell exactly how much profit there is on every sale. There is something different at each meeting, and all florists should attend. They will reap many benefits.

Geo. McCallum left September 15 for Municipal pier, Chicago, where he will complete his military training. He enlisted in the naval reserves last May.

The flower shop in the Grand Opera house reports they are doing a very nice business for a new location.

Ziegert & Co., of the East End, had an order for a blanket of lavender asters recently.

Edw. Blind, of West View, is cutting heavy on lilies and Ophelia roses.

Al. Lorch has purchased a new auto truck.

Morris County Gardeners.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society is doing business at the same old stand. Conditions with all are the same as are general throughout the country. Many of the younger members are at the front and some are in the training camps, and those of us at home are enthusiastically doing our bit. "Win The War" is our slogan, and then, we hope for better and happier times. Win we must.

We will have no annual flower show this year. All our patrons, as well as ourselves, are working directly for Uncle Sam. Last year, we gave all our proceeds of the flower show to the Morristown and Madison Chapters of the Red Cross—something over $700. This year the money will go to them before it gets to us as a society. At our November meeting, we will have a patriotic display of flowers, fruits and vegetables in an adjoining hall, just as a reminder that we are in existence—no entrance fee, no competition, just an evidence of a patriotic spirit.

We had a grand exhibit from the school gardens in Madison, September 7. There were 80 classes, well filled, and high grade. Ribbons, red, white and blue, were donated by our society. Arthur Herrington, superintendent of the gardens, deserves great credit, as also do the children.

BUSINESS SHOWS MARKED IMPROVEMENT.

Cool, crisp weather has quickened the pulse of the fall trade materially and business has taken on a new aspect. The sale of ferns and palms for indoor use has commenced and counter trade shows an increase. Asters have deteriorated, the frost of last week having affected them and roses have been at a premium it being hard to secure enough to take care of the demand. Carnations are improving and the demand is increasing. There are some sweet peas arriving but the quality is poor. Harrisii lilies are excellent.

Joseph Werdein, formerly with E. Wilson, is now engaged in war work at the Symington ammunition plant.

Edwin P. Wilson and wife have returned from an enjoyable motor trip. Henry Murrell, of Irondequoit, is cutting excellent carnations.

J. B. Keller Sons have purchased a new delivery truck.

CHESTER.

Wisconsin State Fair Flower Show.

The Wisconsin state fair, held during the week of September 9, was, from the florists' standpoint, a success in one way and a failure from another. Due to a moderate appropriation from the fair board, the Horticultural building was transformed from a mere hall to a place which was in keeping with the purposes it was intended for. The ceiling and sides were ornamented with wild smilax, the center of the building was occupied by a water fountain containing goldfish, while at the further ends were two large apple trees adorned with large tempting fruits. Four neat, white pergolas were placed around to good effect, one being taken by a ladies' orchestra of five, who helped to give the whole the right effect. Three large, made-up baskets of evergreen, ornamented with American flags, gave the overhead finishing touches.

While the display of plants was about equal to that of 1917, the interest taken in the cut flower and design classes was not what it should have been. We cannot understand why the local retailers do not take more interest in this project, if only from the standpoint of publicity. There are few occasions where that can be so thoroughly obtained at so small a cost. Nic Zweifel, Milwaukee; James E. Mathewson, Sheboygan, and A. Martini, Lake Geneva, judged the professional classes, while James Livingstone acted in a like capacity for the amateurs. Premiums were awarded as follows:

OBITUARY.

The Late William F. Dreer.

In the death of William F. Dreer, September 8, at his summer home in Woodstock, Vt., as recorded in our last week's issue, page 397, there passed the head of the house of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., which business was founded in 1842. Succeeding to the management on the death of his father, which occurred in 1873, and president of the company since its incorporation in 1892, Mr. Dreer had by untiring energy, together with the assistance of earnest and skillful heads of departments, carried the business forward and so increased its importance that it is now one of the largest in its great diversity of stock, not only in this country, but in the world.

Wm. F. Dreer was born in Philadelphia, November 11, 1849. His father had been raised a cabinetmaker, but on the advice of a friend decided to engage in the seed business, and with a partner opened a small store in 1838 at 59 Chestnut street. In 1842 he bought out his partner and continued the business under his own name. The present location, 714 Chestnut street, was taken in 1863, and the adjoining property added some 10 years ago. Desiring that his son, William, should acquire a thorough knowledge of the business, he sent him for a year's experience with Bernari & Sons, Germany, and a like term with Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co., Paris, France, which experience was of great use to him in later years. As the business grew plants were added to seedlings in greenhouses in West Philadelphia were soon found to be too small and the present extensive grounds at Riverton, N. J., were purchased, which, with the immense ranges of glass and similar additions at their Riverview extension, made this one of the largest horticultural establishments and the name of Dreer a household word throughout the country.

William F. Dreer was always to the front in all craft activities. He was a life member of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, and for three years its treasurer. His firm was always a large exhibitor at world's fairs, S. A. F. trade exhibitions, local shows, and in every way has been foremost in advancing the interests of horticulture. He also took an interest in social affairs, being a trustee of the German, later called the Lankaran, hospital for 25 years. Of late years Mr. Dreer spent his winters in California, where he also looked after the large seed interests of the firm. He was married in 1885 to Miss Anna Williams, who, with an adopted daughter, Mrs. H. M. Hessenbruch, survive him; also three sisters, Miss Augusta Dreer, Mrs. Tower and Mrs. Greble.

The funeral and interment were held September 11 at Woodstock, being attended by all his heads of departments: J. D. Eisele, vice-president; Herbert C. Tull, secretary-treasurer; J. Otto Thilow, store manager; George D. Clark, of the seed and bulb section, and Chas. H. McKubbin, of the vegetable and advertising departments.

Mr. Dreer retired from active management in the business two years ago. It will be continued on the lines as laid out by him and the present directors, each of whom is a specialist in his department.

Arthur H. Schroeder.

Arthur H. Schroeder, associated in business with his brother, William R. Schroeder, well known as a carnation specialist, Milwaukee, Wis., died September 9, aged 35 years. Although not a florist by profession, he devoted all of his time to the greenhouses since the inception of the Schroeder Floral Co., successors to the Mueller & Schroeder

Co., about seven years ago, and the results were most gratifying. On September 9, in the afternoon, while at work, he complained of not feeling well and retired to the shed for a rest, where he was found a little later sleeping the eternal sleep, caused by heart failure. He is survived by several sisters and brothers, with whom he made his home at 774 Sixth street. Interment was at Forest Home cemetery.

Wisconsin State Florists' Association.

Realizing that under the present strenuous conditions co-operation by means of organizing is far better than competition, 45 florists answered the call sent out by a committee of the Milwaukee Florists' Club to attend a meeting September 10, at Blatz hotel, in that city, to organize a Wisconsin State Florists' Association. Due to the fact that it was state fair week most of the outsiders availed themselves of the reduced railroad fares to be on hand for a double purpose. It might be stated that several outsiders wrote that, due to the shortage of help and other difficulties, they were sorry that they could not attend and take an active part. President Kennedy and other officials of the local club were asked to officiate until regular officers had been elected. H. V. Hunkel, who had worked out a constitution and by-laws, read the same, after which they were taken up singly and accepted or revised. While the most paragraphs were accepted as read, several of them brought out a most lively discussion, which proved that there was a real life behind the whole project, which, without doubt, will bear good fruit in the near future.

The election of officers, which was very spirited, and by no means a landslide for any one candidate, concluded with the following results: C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, president; James E. Mathewson, Sheboygan, vice-president; Gust J. Rusch, Milwaukee, treasurer; H. J. Seal, Milwaukee, secretary. Directors: R. D. Haentze, Fond du Lac, three years; Fred Rentschler, Madison, two years; Wm. Zimmermann, Milwaukee, one year. It was also voted to hold the annual meeting on Tuesday during state fair week in Milwaukee; also, one other meeting in one of the small cities upon invitation. The following is a list of those present, most of whom agreed to join:

J. H. Boelter, Appleton.
A. J. Brown, Ripon.
R. A. Brux, Racine.
Tom Greibler, Milwaukee.
R. D. Haentze, Fond du Lac.

Personal.

Invitations are out for the wedding of John Furrow and Miss Emily Hughes, of Guthrie, Okla., September 23. The happy young couple will spend their honeymoon in Chicago, where they will be the guests of C. L. Washburn and wife at Hinsdale.

Coal Profiteering.

Philadelphia, Pa., September 12.—Announcement was made today that the Logan Coal Company of this city has been directed by the fuel administration to pay $25,000 to the Red Cross as a fine for alleged profiteering. In addition, the company is required to give to the Red Cross all its profits between September 15 and October 1, refund to all purchasers of smelting coal the difference between the government price and the prices which it charged and deliver to a state institution, with which it made a two year contract, coal at the government price set prior to its conviction by the fuel administration for profiteering, regardless of any increase in price that may come during the life of the contract.

Christmas Buying.

It is an important matter in commerce and sentiment that the Council of National Defense has decided not stringently to restrict Christmas buying in 1918. Through co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, by the intervention of which the business world, the Association of Commerce participating, has presented the true factors and merits of the problem, the Council of National Defense has decided that by the terms of the agreement between the government and business, "if faithfully and loyally put into effect throughout the country there will be made possible a continuance of the holiday custom without endangering the national interests thereby."

By conditions of the understanding, unnecessary loss will not be suffered by countless interests, and a time-hallowed practice, no less precious in war, will be conserved and in a sense legitimized within the boundaries of moderation, indulged under restrictions imposed by the stern economies of the times and the patriotic employment of national wealth.

National Publicity for Flowers.

It is pleasing to note that our Washington representative, W. F. Gude, has, as the result of a personal interview with General Crowder, been able to set at rest the widely circulated rumor that the florists' business was to be classed as non-essential, and, further, to convey to us the assurance of the General that there has been no idea of so classing it. This assurance carries with it the endorsement of our own views, and the views of all right-minded people, that the products of the florist are most essential in these times of gloom and unrest. But the general public, somehow, has absorbed the idea that flowers are, or ought to be, tabooed, and we are almost daily called upon to contravert this idea expressed in some form or other. How are the florists to disabuse the public mind of this idea, which is to a very considerable extent undermining their business? Individually our craftsmen can do practically nothing. Collectively they can do, and are doing a lot. Every contributor to our publicity campaign fund is helping in an organized effort to educate the public mind to the fact that flowers are even more of a necessity in times of war than in times of peace—there are more uses for them.

The great, good-natured American public is quick to absorb ideas built upon sentiment, provided such ideas are presented in the right way. Our committees have realized this, and, consequently, have met with success in the publicity work which they have accomplished since the beginning of the year, work made possible by the liberal contributions of men in the trade whose broad-mindedness has taken them out of their own surroundings and enabled them to see things as they are. These men are staunch supporters of our publicity campaign, their subscriptions for the major part extending over a period of four years—and many have duplicated and triplicated their subscriptions as they have noticed the excellent results.

It is scarcely credible that with the good results of our work before the trade there can yet remain so many florists who can solace themselves with what they, perhaps, like to term "reasonable doubt", and withhold their support from this work in consequence. And what a little they are asked to do! Ten cents a day, even, set apart for this fund would make a yearly subscription of no mean order. Very many subscribe less, and their contributions are greatly esteemed by the committees. We are in immediate need of about $6,000 to complete our $50,000 fund for this year. The committees have gone as far as it was possible to go with the funds at their disposal, but it is urgently necessary that they go this little bit further. No matter where you are located, Mr. Nonsubscriber, your business is helped. There is nothing local about this movement—it is national in every sense of the word. Helping this work is helping yourself. If you doubt it, write this office and we will cheerfully explain.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Flowers Replace Candy.

There are a number of florists in Washington, D. C., who are of the opinion that the campaign being carried on by the United States food administration for the conservation of sugar is increasing the demand for cut flowers and pot plants. Various societies are preaching against the use of candy, as a wartime saving, and urge the giving of flowers instead of candy as gifts. Even with this assistance available, the florists, however, seem to be rather slow to take advantage of the opportunity thus offered them for pushing their lines. It needs little more than the bringing to the attention of the people in each community to bring about the change in purchases from candy to flowers.

THE AMERICAN FLORIST correspondent at the capital recently came across a card which stated "The Boys 'Over There' Need Sugar—Will You Conserve to Aid Them? The Next Time You Desire to Present Her With a Token of Your Esteem, Make It Flowers, Instead of Candy." He would like to suggest, as a part of a national campaign for the substitution of flowers for candy, as a conservation measure, the inclusion in every advertisement used by florists of some reference to the campaign, and offers the following for ad purposes:

"Candy is always an acceptable gift, but do you realize that each pound of candy means the consumption of sugar sorely needed by our boys 'over there'? 'Say It With Flowers,' instead. The substitution of flowers for candy means the conservation of sugar. Our sugar supply is dwindling to the extent of limiting individual supply to two pounds per person per month. When you want to make a gift in keeping with wartime economies, give flowers."

STOCK IS IN SHORT SUPPLY.

Stock in general is in short supply this week and some of the dealers are experiencing considerable trouble in filling all their orders in full on certain items. The cold weather had much to do with the sudden shortage of stock and it is expected that a few warm days will relieve the situation considerably. Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia are cleaning up early every day at very satisfactory prices, which holds good for roses in general which are exceedingly scarce compared to two weeks ago. American Beauty roses are in fair supply, but there is no surplus to speak of, although there is plenty to go around if one is willing to pay a reasonable price. Gladioli are in fair supply, but the receipts are considerably smaller with a good demand for what are arriving. Asters are none too plentiful and command a good price. Dahlias are seen in limited quantities, but find ready buyers. Carnations are selling better this week and have improved wonderfully in quality during the cold spell. Orchids are in short supply and in brisk demand at $12 per dozen. Chrysanthemums are arriving in larger numbers but are moving fast at good prices. Snapdragons are to be had in limited supply. Lilies are somewhat scarce and will probably be all through the chrysanthemum season for several of the leading growers have decided to cut down their planting until the bulk of this stock has been moved. Lily of the valley is in fair supply and while there is no great shortage no orders are being left unfilled. Water lilies are still a factor in the market. Calendulas and other miscellaneous stock is to be had but the receipts of outdoor flowers not already mentioned have fallen off to a large extent. An early frost, according to some of the dealers, would probably find the greatest shortage of stock ever experienced in this market at this time of the season.

NOTES.

Peter Reinberg was renominated president of the county board on the democratic ticket at the primaries September 11. He received more votes than all his opponents combined, which was a most agreeable surprise not only to himself but his large circle of friends throughout the county.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a magnificent supply of American Beauty roses in addition to all other seasonable stock including choice lilies. Orchids are in exceedingly brisk demand at this establishment and are commanding high prices.

A. Kinyon and wife, of South Bend, Ind., were welcome visitors this week. Mr. Kinyon returned home after seeing Mrs. Kinyon safely aboard a train bound for Greeley, Colo., where she will spend the winter.

Mrs. Horton, of the Bassett & Washburn office force, is again on duty after enjoying a well-earned vacation.

George Schumer, son of Peter Schumer, well known grower of Evanston, and a member of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, was the first man from there that was wounded in France. He is at Camp Stewart, Va., recovering from shrapnel wounds, which hit him on the head and back. He was under fire 70 days before he was wounded and claims to have killed at least three of the enemy before they got him. His friends here hope for a permanent and speedy recovery.

Fred Hoerber is more than pleased with the conditions of the stock at Hoerber Bros.' greenhouses at Des Plaines now in charge of his brother, John Hoerber. He visited the range last week when he gave it a thorough inspection and was particularly enthusiastic over the roses which never were in such excellent shape as now.

One of the local dailies announced September 16 that Pat O'Malley, who has been a Clark street saloonkeeper for 30 years, will open a loop flower shop. He has signed a lease for a store and will build greenhouses at once. Mr. O'Malley is out of the city at present, so the writer was unable to verify the above information.

Wietor Bros. are cutting more heavily in roses so far this month which are noted splendid Killarney Brilliant and Sunburst. American Beauty roses are included in the shipments but find such a ready demand that there is hardly any surplus.

August Albert, with H. W. Buckbee, Wockford, spent several days here this week on business. He reports trade as good and that his firm will have its usual supply of chrysanthemums amounting to 17,000 to cut from this season.

Kyle & Foerster are well pleased with trade so far this month which compares most favorably with that of last year. Their regular offerings consist of a complete line of stock in all the new and standard kinds.

D. E. Freres has been giving the Grossberg-Tyler-Finnermann Co. a lift off and on during the past two weeks and his friends all agree that he has lost none of his ability in conducting a wholesale establishment.

George Kaspar, of the Batavia Greenhouse Co., received word from his brother, William J. Kaspar, who is in the quartermaster's department at Jacksonville, Fla., that he has been promoted to corporal.

Percy Jones, Inc., is experiencing an exceedingly brisk demand for cut flowers from out-of-town points this week which has been taken good care of notwithstanding the general scarcity of stock.

Leo Koropp, son of the well-known manager of the Ohio Floral Co., was gassed in France recently and is confined to one of the American hospitals over there, where he is slowly recovering.

Zech & Mann are handling a fine supply of roses in all the leading varieties, including Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia. Asters and gladioli are still quite an item here and clean up early.

A. Lange decorated General Pershing's portrait for the birthday parade of school children at the War Exposition, September 13, and showed a duplicate of the picture in his store window.

George Poehlmann, manager of the packing department at Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s wholesale store, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of a granddaughter this week.

Allan Gerhling, formerly with Bassett & Washburn, who is with Co. G, 122nd Infantry, now stationed at Camp Green, N. C., writes that he has been promoted to corporal.

The Central Trust Company of Illinois, receiver for William Langhout, bankrupt, announces that $3,200 was realized from the sale of the stock advertised in THE AMERICAN FLORIST last week by Samuel L. Winternitz & Co., auctioneers. The highest individual bid was $1,500 for the entire list offered, which was $1,000 less than asked, so $700 more was realized at the sale than expected.

W. N. Rudd has returned from the cemetery superintendents' convention at Rochester, N. Y., and reports a very interesting meeting.

Vaughan's Seed Store is still busy shipping freesia, calla, narcissus and lily bulbs.

Chicago Liberty Loan Committees.

The Chicago and Cook county florists' and allied trades have organized for the Fourth Liberty Loan. The selling forces in the coming drive will be concentrated into two main organizations, the business men's squadron, which will cover all lines of industries, and the ward or district organization, which will sell the bonds from house to house in the residential sections. This is an excellent plan, as it will enable all florists and allied trade interests, employers, as well as employees, to subscribe for the new bonds through our own trade organization.

Our industry has been assigned to the "Rainbow" or Trades Division, and will be known as Division 19-B, the florist trade being the second most important industry in this division. The City of Chicago and suburbs, including entire Cook county, will be divided into districts.

The Fourth Liberty Loan campaign will be carried on under the direction of an executive committee consisting of the chairman and vice-chairman of our trade, and the captain of each district. A representative will also be appointed for each wholesale establishment and allied trades concern.

Headquarters of the trade will be established at the wholesale house of the E. C. Amling Company, 175 North Wabash avenue, Chicago.

The following organization will conduct the work in this campaign: F. Lautenschlager, chairman; George Wienhoeber, vice-chairman; Miss Pederson, secretary.

Chicago Loop District — August Lange, captain; Miss Jean Raske, John Mangel and George Wienhoeber.

Chicago North Side District.—Wm. Wienhoeber, captain; Mrs. Clody, Alfred Fischer, Fred Meyer, Mrs. W. T. Hilliar and Alfred Marine.

Chicago South Side District.—Arthur Weatherwax, captain; Wm. La Grotta, Chas. Samuelson, W. J. Smyth, and George Walther.

Chicago West Side District.—George Asmus, captain; C. Frauenfelder, C. B. Le Mer, Miss Anna G. Sawyer, Chas. Stewart, Chas. Fisk and Jos. Sikuta.

Chicago Greek Florists.—John Mangel, captain; Andrew Chronis.

Chicago North-West Side District.—Paul Klingsporn, captain; W. B. Wallace, Miss O. A. Tonner, J. E. Pollworth, and Samuel Pearce.

Chicago-Rogers Park District (growers only).—Nic Wieter, captain.

Chicago South-West Side District, including Morgan Park, Blue Island, Roseland and Washington Heights.—C. W. Johnson, captain; L. Lau and H. E. Kirkpatrick.

Evanston District, including Niles Center, Gross Point, Wilmette, Kenilworth, Winnetka and Glencoe.—Geo. C. Weiland, captain; Fred Stielow, Albert Lies, Joseph Schoos, M. Anglesburg and Frank Felke.

Park Ridge and Niles (Ill.) District.—Edward Meuret, captain.

Desplaines and Mount Prospect District.—Harry Blewitt, captain; John Frickett.

Oak Park, River Forest and Forest Park District.—A. H. Schneider, captain.

Maywood District (including Melrose Park and Hillside).—Paul Weiss, captain; Henry Wehrmann and Ernst Amling.

DEMAND SHOWS SLIGHT GAIN.

Business has not brightened up very much, but it shows some improvement. The weather is typically autumn, and with a continuance, should show a good improvement in business. Flowers arriving on the market have been equal to the demand, but in no case any oversupply. Asters are about at the end of their season, and the cut coming in now is of inferior quality. Gladioli still arrive in good supply and quality. They remain a staple and are a great help-out to the retailer. In roses, Russell, Ophelia and Columbia are the leaders and some very nice stock is coming into this market. In other varieties the supply is equal to the demand, although the quality is not of the best. Lily of the valley is seen only occasionally. Lilies are plentiful with a light call. Dahlias are very slow in coming in this year, undoubtedly due to the exceedingly hot summer. With the exception of smilax, the market is well supplied with greens.

NOTES.

The florists' club held its September meeting last week at H. J. Weber & Sons, Nursery, Mo. The following officers were installed: A. H. Hummert, president; J. J. Beneke, vice-president; J. J. Windler, secretary; Wm. C. Smith, treasurer, and trustee for term of three years, Alex. Lurie. The outgoing president, L. Jules Bourdet, made a rousing speech of thanks and hopefulness to the members for their splendid support and enthusiasm during the four years he held office. The newly elected trustee, Alex. Lurie, in the name of the club, presented Mr. Bourdet with a beautiful watch as a remembrance of their good will, to which Mr. Bourdet responded feelingly. Mr. Hummert as the first official act as president, presented to the club a service flag, with 49 stars representing the contribution to Uncle Sam's forces of the florist trade in St. Louis. The trustees reported that they had audited the books of the treasurer and secretary of the club, and also announced that the next meeting of the club would be held at W. A. Rowe's Denny road plant. It was also voted to buy some Liberty Bonds of the next issue. The various convention committees made reports, which all proved very interesting. The matter of publicity received quite a lot of consideration and was discussed informally by a number of the members. At the close of the meeting Mr. Weber invited the club to a "Hoover" lunch, consisting of "slack" for slackers, chestnuts for the old jokers, grass sandwiches for the fastidious, and water for the camels. Mr. Weber's keen sense of humor was enjoyed by all, and they voted him to be the same hale fellow well met. After this diversion, Mr. Weber served a real lunch with refreshments, which everyone enjoyed so much more, and will be remembered by all for a long time.

Joseph Hauser says he lost most of his violet plants this summer on account of the dry weather. He is now beginning to cut his single red dahlia, which finds a ready market.

The county carnation growers say they have planted more white carnations in proportion this year on account of the continued shortage in white last season.

GOOD BUSINESS AT FAIR PRICES.

Business is good. Receipts are fairly heavy and are cleaning up fairly well. Prices are good. The supply of roses is larger than it has been for some time. They are mostly of a good quality and are finding an excellent market. Asters are very plentiful and practically all that have been coming into the market during the past fortnight are of a good quality. Carnations are fairly plentiful and are selling well. Some choice gladioli may be had. They are proving good property. The dahlias are becoming large. Cosmos is plentiful. A limited number of chrysanthemums are offered.

NOTES.

GENERAL IMPROVEMENT IN CONDITIONS.

With the improvement in stock, and a more generous supply, business has shown decided improvement. Cooler weather has helped the rose crop, and already good stock is being cut. American Beauties still hold first place, and the newer Columbia and Winnett are coming in good. The varieties grown seem to be more numerous this year, and with Ophelia, Sunburst, Shawyer, Hoosier Beauty, Double Killarney and Russell grown in quantities, there are a number of others that make a good general collection. Carnations, which have been off the market for some time, are again fairly common and with chrysanthemums getting better, good business is expected to continue. Longiflorum and speciosum are fairly plentiful, and with good gladioli and asters, stores look like real florists' shops again.

NOTES.

Criticism has been heard and published regarding the apparent lack of interest shown by the retailers in not competing in the different classes at the Canadian exhibition. Outsiders who are not conversant with florists' crops for the last week of August, are forgiven, but for those in the trade to profess their ignorance, they would likely profit more by letting us have stock that would be suitable for exhibition work. Gladioli, asters and sunflowers are fine in their places, but I fail to see their proper places on a first class decorated table for exhibition, and rather than show stock which is inferior in quality, and not an advertisement to the exhibitor, you have the answer. The plant displays and group effects were a credit to the men who put them up. Outdoor flowers were in most cases very good, but when it came to the greenhouse roses and carnations, the less we advertised these the better I should think it would be for the trade.

The retail florists' club held its monthly meeting September 9, and had a good attendance. Plans were made for the coming year, and something of interest and pertaining to our business will be featured each night. Chrysanthemum day, which proved so successful last year, will again be carried on and co-operative publicity for holidays and special days, which benefit the florists, will be gone into.

Difficulty is being had to get licences for the importation of baskets, and some shipments are being held up by the customs. It would be advisable to secure your license before the goods are shipped to save expenses. The retail florists' club is taking it up on behalf of its members and may possibly import an bloc.

F. C. W. Brown, of Cleveland, O., was a visitor who is much enthused over the F. T. D. meeting in that city in October. From the promises received, it looks like a good turnout from Canada.

It now looks as if there will be any amount of Lillium longiflorum, as they are being offered by a number of firms, and the bulbs expected in October.

SUPPLY VERY LIMITED.

The supply of flowers was entirely inadequate to the demand last week, owing to an unusually strong call for flowers for local and out-of-town funerals, social happenings, and donations made by the local florists to the large Red Cross auction held September 11-14, and which netted $40,000 for this great cause, the flower booth being one of the most prominent sectors of the auction. The weather has had a decidedly detrimental effect upon production, as rain fell on every day but Monday and Friday, and even these days were dark and cloudy. The new crops of roses are improving daily, Shawyer and Maryland being the best pink varieties, and Ophelia showing excellent color. Orchids are offered on this market in the Cattleya labiata, oncidiums, and vandas, which sell very well.

NOTES.

Mrs. Alice Flick-Shive, of the Flick Floral Co., who has been ill at her home, "Waldron," for the past two weeks, is again able to be at the store. This firm had an elaborate basket of red gladioli, and red, white and blue ribbon, as part of their patriotic window decoration during the week of the Red Cross auction. This firm donated 1,000 roses to the Red Cross and also sent out several out-of-town casket blankets last week.

F. J. Knecht & Co. have a good crop of Ophelia and Shawyer at present, but not nearly enough to fill the demand. This firm has practically all of its coal in 11 car-loads having been delivered, and they feel no anxiety on this score. The labor problem is getting to be a big one with the growers here, however, as they do not seem to think they can utilize women workers as well as the retailer.

Baskets of cut flowers, aster and begonia plants, and ferns were among the generous donations of Ed Wenninghoff to the Red Cross auction. This flower shop is displaying some excellent roses, and reports a heavy business in large funeral pieces.

a short visit with his family, before embarking for overseas service. He was accompanied home by Mrs. Vesey, who has been visiting him at camp for the past month.

The New Haven Floral Co. sold thousands of roses at cost to the retailers of this city, which were given to the Red Cross, besides giving hundreds of blooms to this great cause. Miss Ruth Lanterner gave a number of classical solo dances at the Red Cross auction last week. The Lanterner Co. donated many hundreds of flowers every day of the auction.

Private George Pandall, formerly with the Fort Wayne Flower Shop, has arrived overseas with the Lincoln division.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are having a heavy demand for roses and orchids.

TRADE NORMAL FOR SEASON.

Some have claimed that my last week's report was too optimistic, that business was anything but satisfactory, while others state that it was quite up to the average first week of September, which, considering war conditions, makes my description of "normal" quite within bounds. The past week has been quiet, some report very quiet, while others state that all good stock sells well up at fair prices for the season. The retail stores claim to be meeting with a seasonable demand, there having been quite a number of small weddings during the past three weeks, above, in fact, the average at this time. There is an abundance of flowers in almost all lines. Roses are being benefited by the cool nights; the best of the teas are now so improved that they bring eight, and a few 10, cents. The growers who planted strong of Columbia are right in it, as this variety is developing into a magnificent flower, which bids fair to be a leader the coming season. Carnations are now seen in all the stocks. Asters are on the wane, although some choice flowers are still seen, with quite a lot that just manages to pull through. Gladioli are still a mainstay and much used in all kinds of work. There are a few too many Easter lilies, although they sell as well as anything else. Fall cosmos is now in splendid shape, and should have a good sale. Dahlias have never been finer. All growers report plants in good condition, being much benefited by recent heavy rains. There is no great demand as yet, but they will be a strong factor for the next three weeks.

SPECIAL CLUB MEETING.

The large attendance at the special meeting of the florists' club, September 10, deserves more than the telegraphic report in last week's notes. It was a distinct tribute to Charles H. Grakelow, who met the large, and which he called combative, audience of over 100, and presented his proposition that the retail shops close three nights of the week at 6 p. m., and the wholesalers at 12 m. The result, if favorable, was to be submitted to the national fuel administration, with the request that they make these closing hours official, so that they would be complied with by all in the trade. This he claimed would have a good effect with the government and they perhaps would not draw so heavily on employees in the various branches of our business when the selections from those in the new draft were made. Mr. Grakelow went into detail in describing the retail stores as managed in this city, particularly the late hours, the difficulty in getting labor, etc. There should be early closing hours which would elevate the business and place it on a higher plane. Every movement of the craft that had a government bearing, such as purchasers of bonds, Red Cross contributions, thrift stamps, etc., should be so recorded that the florist's trade would be credited, which he felt sure would give us a better standing with the government. He was very forceful and earnest in his remarks and replied instantly to all objections to his plan. Victor Ridenour and one or two other Aschmann Bros., Second and Bristol streets, are going strong into pot roses for Easter. They have thousands of American Beauties and Ophelias growing in 3½-inch pots, bench stock obtained from growers last spring when they cleaned out their houses. These strong plants when cut back, potted and plunged outside come along nicely, and are now making a splendid growth. With all foreign rose stock cut out, no azaleas, spiraeas or lilies, these roses are sure to find a good market at the Easter holidays. Choice ferns, ficus, primulas, and several houses of well grown cyclamens are also features.

J. W. Colfesh's Sons have made a specialty of the hardy English ivy leaf stock for two year old plants out in the field without protection over winter. The vines are cut back in the fall to about a foot in length, the shoots being made into cuttings. A five-ton truck delivered to New York last spring, one order of 500 six-inch, 500 five-inch and a balance to fill the car with four-inch stock all in pots. Some order, that.

good. He finds business best now with the middle classes, to which trade he is catering. He finds the wage earners have plenty of money and are good spenders.

At the recent special meeting of the florists' club, Charles Grubelov's thrust, in reference to florists' show windows, that most of them offered nothing that would cause an incentive to buy but would be a deterrent to most people, made a great hit with the crowd, only about one-sixth of whom, however, were retailers.

Mark Mills, in speaking of the importance of plants and flowers, said this world would be a dreary waste without them. One might as well take oxygen from the air as to ask people to do without flowers.

W. J. Baker, the veteran wholesaler, is no "has been" and is on the job every day. A large ice box in the yard, to which he is giving the finishing touches, would be a credit to any merchant. K.

CONDITIONS MORE ENCOURAGING.

Although there was no great activity in the wholesale district during the past week, there was a more cheerful feeling, particularly during the closing days. Heavy frost has been reported from up-state localities, but from the amount of outdoor stock that is arriving, it is evident that it did not reach the area from which this market draws its supplies. In both dahlias and late asters, fine stock continues to arrive. There is also a fair supply of gladioli on the market and most of it has been cut very tight. Hydrangeas, zinnias and various other stocks are also plentiful. The supply of American Beauty roses is not heavy and there is no change in price. In tea roses, the supply of specials is increasing, but special stock of the leading varieties, such as Columbia, Mrs. Russell, Scott Key, Mock and Ophelia brings good returns for the season. In chrysanthemums, the quality continues to improve, some large blooms of Golden Glow having wholesaled for $4 per dozen. There is some movement in carnations, but now that the chrysanthemum season is at hand, the carnations will be in the shade. Considering all conditions, the feeling among the retailers is cheerful, and the sentiment seems to be, to accept the situation as it develops and make the best of it. Indications are that the draft will claim many men from the retail trade, and there will be a feeling of uncertainty until classifications are decided.

September 16.—There is a fair amount of business this morning and the market has a cheerful tone. The scarcity of lily of the valley is a noteworthy feature, the price going as high as $10 and $12 per 100 when it can be had. Fine stock for the season, of the roses Columbia, Mock and Ophelia is noted. The upward tendency in the price of American Beauties indicates improved business.

THE FALL SHOWS.

Let us, dear friends, forget for a time the 50 per cent cut in the coal supply, (we will have plenty of time to think of that before Christmas); let us forget the people with more zeal than judgment, who think that as a winter measure, greenhouses should be scrapped, and let us forget the bearers of idle tales and wild rumors, for in France Pershing and his gallant boys are marching on, and here at home, the season for the fall shows has arrived. Be gone, dull care; for on Tuesday, September 24, the American Dahlia Society, in connection with the American Institute of the City of New York, will open its show in the Engineering building, 25-33 West 39th street. This show will continue through September 25 and 26, and, believe us, it will be some show. Father and President Vincent of the American Dahlia Society visited the New York Florists' Club meeting on the night of September 9 and exhibited a few of his specimens which were but forerunners of what we will see at the show. George L. Stillman of Westerly, R. I., will be there with his "dahlias of distinction," also many other growers. The Horticultural Society of New York is with us during summer's heat and winter's cold, with its monthly shows. This society will hold a dahlia show in the Museum building, Bronx park, September 21-22. A trip to Bronx park on a Saturday afternoon or Sunday, in summer or autumn, is always worth while, and so are the society's shows. Now that the more pretentious shows are likely to be abandoned for the duration of the war, we urge the florists of every branch of the trade to take an increased interest in the fall shows. They bring the members of the various branches together, and promote business as well as sociability. If the exhibits are abundant and meritorious, it will prove to the public, that regardless of the "knocking" of pessimists and naysayers, the florist business is very much alive. The dates of other fall shows to be held in this city and vicinity will be duly announced in these columns.

NOTES.

Now that the Fourth Liberty Bond campaign is at hand, it may interest our readers, the younger ones, to learn what some of the fathers did for the government at the time of the civil war. Asa Gray wrote: "My wife and I have scraped up $550, all we can scrape, and lent it to the United States." And, somebody may ask, who was Asa Gray? He was born in Paris, Oneida county, N. Y., November 16, 1810, and died in Cambridge, Mass., January 30, 1888. Bailey has written of him as follows: "He early became interested in botany and entered into correspondence with Dr. Lewis C. Bock and Dr. John Torrey, both of whom were well known botanists of the time. In 1833, Gray became assistant to Torrey, who held the chair of chemistry and botany in the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons. His first book, the 'Elements of Botany,' appeared in 1836. Gray was chiefly known for his taxonomic (classification) and descriptive work with plants. It fell to his hand to review the North American flora. The western country was largely unknown botanically. * * * His publications on this new flora are voluminous and critical. * * * Asa Gray was a lovable man. He was gentle, quiet, sweet tempered; intellectually he was keen and penetrating. * * * Harvard College, in which he held a professorship from 1842 until his death, became the mecca of every American botanist. Here he built up the most important herbarium and botanical library in the New World. He was the master of American botany."

ists' Club on supplying flowers to the base hospitals, advises us that as the number of sick and wounded soldiers increases, so do the requests for flowers. Up to the present, the flowers have been contributed largely by members of the club, but it is believed that many growers, who are not members, will cheerfully respond to this appeal when they realize how much happiness the flowers bring to the invalid soldiers. There is yet a surplus, in many places, of outdoor flowers, and these will be acceptable while they last. This matter was referred to in our notes of September 14, and also in our report of the club meeting.

At the tenth convention of the International Association of Game and Fish Commissioners, which closed its session at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, September 13, resolutions were adopted asking the President to urge Mexico and Central and South American states to join in a treaty to protect migratory birds; asking Congress for $700,000 to enforce the migratory bird act; urging the national government that suitable tracts of land in every state in the Union be acquired by purchase, where necessary, to be set aside and devoted to returned injured soldiers and sailors for operation by them as game farms. All the commissioners were urged also to plant black walnuts this fall and for 10 years, to aid the federal government.

Peter Carvel, head salesman for the United Cut Flower Co., 111 West 28th street, was married, Sunday, September 15, to Miss Laura Kuhn, an attractive young lady of this city. The ceremony took place in the Greek church, Lexington avenue and 72nd street, in the presence of a large company of friends and well wishers. The happy couple are spending their honeymoon at Asbury Park, N. J.

Marshall Clarke, of David Clarke's Sons, says, that though it is too early to expect much of an improvement in business, as compared with last year, they are holding their own. They have stocked up with a lot of nice ferns and other plants, noteworthy being the new fern, President Wilson, which looks good.

Calling recently on J. K. Allen at his home in Kearny, N. J., we found good landscape and garden features. He has on his lawn a number of specimens of the climbing plant, Polygonum baldschuanicum, which are showy and attractive. He has also a fine rose garden.

Traendly & Schenck are handling a fine quality of the Columbia rose, grown by Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J. They are also receiving good roses from the Rowton, Conn., greenhouses.

Malandre Brothers are cheerful over the outlook and report fair business. They are handling an exceptionally fine stock of the chrysanthemum, Golden Glow.

A proposal has been made to have the dead trees in the parks cut down and burned for fuel during the coming winter. The idea is good. Some coal will be saved, and from parts of Central park, at least, it will remove the appearance of a shell-shot area in France.

A. B. Cazan, president of D. J. Pappas, Inc., has made great improvements in his store, is handling fine stock, and reports fair business.

On September 14, we found business active at the store of Herman Warendorff, in the Ansonia hotel, a large funeral order having come in.

Otto Sergel, who has been with the New York Cut Flower Co. for five or more years, has been called to the colors.

New York Federation of Societies.

The annual meeting of the New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs was held in the office of Commissioner Wilson at the state fair, Syracuse, September 11, being called to order at 2:30 p. m. with President Pierson in the chair. Twenty-one delegates were present from the various affiliated societies. The records of the last meeting were read and approved. The treasurer reported funds on hand to the amount of $250.46. A report of progress on the horticultural building was made by the president. In view of the changes recently made in the state fair commissioners, it was deemed advisable that a committee be appointed to appear before the present commissioners with a request that the horticultural building be the next on the programme of construction after the war. The following were appointed on this committee: Dr. E. R. Bates, Syracuse; Charles Vick, Rochester; George B. Hart, Rochester.

President Pierson called on professor Ralph W. Curtis of the landscape art department of Cornell University, for an expression of opinion as to what landscape effects would make the setting of the new horticultural building most pleasing. Professor Curtis stated that he would like to make a general study of the whole plan of buildings and grounds and submit the results of his study to the federation at a later date. It was moved and carried that Professor Curtis be made a member of the committee appointed September 14, 1916, to make a study of plans for the horticultural building. The personnel of this committee is: President Pierson, Vice-President Bates, Professor D. Lumsden, W. H. Workman, George A. Thorpe and Professor R. W. Curtis.

President Pierson made a report for the committee appointed at the last meeting to keep in touch with the fair commissioners and lend whatever aid is necessary in getting a supply of fuel for any florist in difficulty. He represented the federation at a conference in Washington last spring and stated that everything was done at that time which could be done to secure recognition of the floricultural industry in the regulations of the fuel administrator. A canvass of the members present showed that most of the florists already have the 50 per cent of coal allowed for the coming year.

There was a discussion of the bill which is now before Congress, prohibiting the importation of all plants, including bulbs. It was the general opinion of the delegates that such a restriction would be disastrous to the horticultural industries, both in this country and abroad. A committee consisting of Dr. E. R. Bates, Professor D. Lumsden and Charles Vick was appointed to draw up resolutions expressing the disapproval of the federation on such legislative action. It was also suggested that each member of the federation immediately get in touch with his congressman and state his opinion regarding the passage of the bill.

In the general discussion which followed regarding trade conditions in the various sections of the state, the opinion was expressed that as a whole these were better than at this time last year. While as many flowers have not been sold as last year, prices have been better and the general trade demands have been good. The labor situation is one of the most troublesome factors now facing the florists.

The election of officers was the next order of business, the result of the balloting being as follows: F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, president; Dr. E. R. Bates, Syracuse, first vice-president; Chas. Vick, Rochester, second vice-president; Hugh McCarthy, Syracuse, third vice-president; F. A. Danker, Albany, fourth vice-president; W. H. Workman, Asbush, fifth vice-president; W. A. Adams, Buffalo, treasurer.

The meeting adjourned at 4:30.

E. A. WHITE, Sec'y.

New York State Fair.

The New York state fair at Syracuse, September 9-14, was well attended by the craft, especially those from the central and western sections of the state, who found the floral displays of general excellence. F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, staged a fine display of roses, palms, lilies, gladioli and other flowers. There were many other good entries. The exhibit of roses by the Syracuse Rose Society was very fine, the effective arrangement being made by the ladies of the organization, to whom much credit is due. The showing by the commercial florists was also noteworthy, among those represented being E. A. Slattery, W. H. Grever and Jerry Brookins & Son, of Buffalo, and P. R. Quinlan & Co. and Werner Bultman, of Syracuse. Brides' bouquets, vase arrangements, baskets, decorations with roses, lilies and dahlias showed care and taste.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. reports the past summer's business the best in the history of the firm.

DAYTON, O.—The registration of September 12, of men between the ages of 18 and 45, affects all of the male employees at the establishment of W. G. Matthews, a number of growers in this vicinity will close their houses after the chrysanthemum season, owing to shortage of fuel and labor.

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C. President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held June, 1919.

IMPORTERS are daily expecting notice of arrival of Dutch bulbs which have been some time on the way.

GEORGE C. THOMSON, of Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn., is at Racine, Wis., this week loading onion sets.

VISITED CHICAGO: Wilbur Brotherton, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Detroit, Mich.; R. Helm, of Helm's Seed Store, Janesville, Wis.

CHINESE NARCISSUS BULBS are in Canada, but the United States government prohibits their importation from the orient via either Canada or Mexico.

A DIRECTORS' meeting of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League will be held in New York, Tuesday, October 8. The stockholders are also invited to be present.

THE Detroit meeting of growers, scheduled for Friday, September 13, was postponed. Seed growers have not been considered superstitious heretofore.

AN informal rehearing regarding lifting the embargo on Japanese lily bulbs resulted only in a repetition of the original stand taken by the authorities, relative unimportance of the industry.

A STEAMER supposed to sail last month with a cargo of French bulbs, was requisitioned by the government at the last moment. This was unfortunate for both the growers and American planters.

MISS GRACE CHESTER, daughter of Harry H. Chester, Chicago, is leaving with her father for the east this week, as the guest of Shipbuilder Hurley, and will christen the next new ship launched.

ONION SETS.—Prices made by growers in the Chicago district are a little easier since outside jobbers have secured a supply. Some have paid $2.00 for colors and $3.00 for whites. Local jobbers have not yet paid these prices.

TOLEDO, O.—Clover made a 15 to 35 cent advance September 14, closing at $21.90, gaining $2.25 for the week. Cash timothy was steady, selling at $4.75. September closed at $5.07½, October $5.00, December $5.00, March $5.05 and April $4.97½.

CALIFORNIA onion seed growers are reported to have made delivery of their Yellow Bermuda orders, and 25 per cent. of their orders for seed of Crystal White Wax, owing to partial failure of the seed crop in the Coachella valley. The plantings of this seed show excellent germination.

A GROWER writes from the French bulb district, August 7: "The poor crop of bulbs this summer has been a disaster to the growers; the dryness of the winter has not been recompensed by the limited spring rains, the largest size of this season being scarcely greater than the second grade of former seasons."

California Rain Damage.

L. W. Wheeler, of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Gilroy, under date of September 16, says:

"Five inches of rain fell here in two days last week, something never before heard of in this state in September. The greater part or the seed crops, however, are harvested and out of danger. There was slight damage to onion on sheets. Endive which was all cut and laying on the ground will suffer a 50 per cent. loss. Late planted lettuce will suffer to the extent of about 10 per cent. of the entire crop seriously injured and about the same proportion of loss will apply to carrot, much of which was cut and on the ground. Considerable injury was done is water soaked and growing. The entire carrot crop is in the field and it is believed a large portion will be lost."

Onion Set Movement in Kentucky.

Louisville, Ky., September 13.—Onion sets have started moving much better from Jefferson county. Farmers are more anxious to turn loose of their holdings since the buyers backed off of the high market. At the present time the demand is principally for immediate delivery, and to cover future contracts, with no effort whatever towards speculation. Farmers are receiving $8 a barrel or 5 cents a pound for a barrel of 160 pounds of yellow sets, and $10 a barrel for whites. Resale prices are $2.50 a bushel of 32 pounds for immediate delivery of yellows and $2.85 for January delivery. On whites prompt delivery is $2.95 a bushel, and $3.30 for January. Most of the shipments at the present time are moving into the south. The stock is of fine quality.

Peas and Beans.

N. B. Keeney & Son, LeRoy, N. Y., write as follows, September 11:

"The outlook for the pea crop, as already reported, is most discouraging, as yields on nearly all varieties, excepting Alaska, are falling below field estimates, while present indications are that First & Best, Pioneer, Gradus and Alderman will yield little more than the seed planted.

"The bean outlook, while not as favorable as six weeks ago, is fairly satisfactory, and with right harvesting conditions, we ought to secure a crop in good condition that will permit delivery of satisfactory quantities on our orders. We are now tabulating our field estimates, and while this work is not completed, we have advanced far enough to warrant the belief that we will be able to deliver from 60 to 100 per cent on all varieties."

TEXAS GROWERS say that very little Canary Island onion seed has so far reached that section, and unless it arrives within the next two weeks, it will be too late for planting. The first 10 days of September Texas growers have been busy planting, and they have put in only about 50 per cent. of last year's acreage.

to sweet peas, possibly one-fourth of the crop being unthreshed.

"The greatest damage was to sheeting, the total loss in this item being fully $50,000."

R. C. McGill & Co., San Francisco, advise as follows, September 16:

"California has just had a terrific rainstorm extending generally throughout the state and lasting almost 72 hours. The precipitation was nearly seven inches in the Santa Clara valley and five inches in the Sacramento district. Onion, carrot, bean and other crops in the course of harvesting are badly damaged. Part of the onion crop is in warehouses, but what is on sheets

THE importation of fresh tomatoes from the Bahamas, when moved as deck cargo to New York, is authorized in a new ruling of the war trade board.

LAREDO, TEX.—The Roy Campbell Co., with headquarters here, has been granted a charter, with capital stock of $15,000. It is understood the company will devote large acreage to winter truck crops.

WINDSOR, CONN.—Considerable damage was done to vegetables, silo corn and large fields of tobacco in this vicinity by severe frost, September 11. A similar frost killed all early vegetation at this time last year.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, September 17.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, 80 cents to $1.00; celery, crate, 25 to 50 cents; head lettuce, 2-dozen 75 cents to $1.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $1.50; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 75 cents to 90 cents.

New York, September 16.—Celery (state) per bunch, 15 to 50 cents; cucumbers, 50 cents to $1.25 per basket; mushrooms, $2.00 to $4.50 per basket; tomatoes, per carrier, 50 cents to $1.50; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $2.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50.

Silverberg's Early Bearing Tomato.

Ed. Silverberg, 2110 North Third street, St. Charles, Mo., has succeeded in producing tomato plants which he claims will supply a crop of ripe fruit by July 1, also a winter onion which may be raised in the coldest weather when prices are best. He has grown and marketed the tomato for several years, the first year's sales being 200 plants, while those of the past season increased to over 2,000 and he is considering improvements at his establishment to care for the increased demand. Mr. Silverberg has been commended by Mayor Kiel, of St. Louis for his efforts to assist in the food situation and the government has been invited to make an examination of both introductions which the grower believes to be especially vital to the needs of the nation at present.

Vegetable Prices.

In the potato markets, prices continued to advance during the period September 9-16 according to reports received by the United States department of agriculture. Minnesota white stock reached $2.60 per 100 pounds in carlots at Chicago and Wisconsin stock moved at $2.75, an advance of 15 cents during the week. New Jersey Giants strengthened to $2.75-$3 in eastern markets and Maine Cobbblers advanced 15 cents at Boston, closing at $2.70 per 100 pounds. In cabbage, a general decline occurred at shipping points and in consuming markets. Rochester quoted $15 per ton in bulk f.o.b., a decline of $7.25 from the previous week's quotation. Colorado stock lost 25 cents, going at $1.35 per 100 pounds at shipping points. Onion values were irregular; steady in the east but weaker in the midwest. Western yellows weakened slightly at Chicago ranging $2.60-$2.75 per 100 pounds and prices in southern markets were also lower. Sweet potatoes ranged lower in New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore at $5-$6 per barrel for Virginia Big Stem Jerseys, but the general range held steady at $6-$7.50. New Jersey stock was quoted at New York at $2-$2.25 per bushel hamper and $2.75-$3.50 in mid-western markets.

Toronto War Garden Show.

The war gardens show, staged under the auspices of the Toronto Horticultural Society, September 12-14, showed conclusively that the amateur gardener is no slouch, and that "city folk" can make backyards produce. It was one of the largest exhibitions of its kind ever held in the Dominion, and the quality of the entries compared favorably with those staged at many of the fairs. The big drill hall at the Armory was completely filled with displays from all sections of the city. One of the most interesting exhibits was that of Leonard Thorogood, a 12-year old boy, whose collection included practically every variety of vegetable ranging in size from a bean to a squash. While primarily a vegetable show, there were several attractive displays of flowers, principally asters. At the close of the show, the vegetables were auctioned for the benefit of the Red Cross, the proceeds amounting to nearly $490.

American Association of Nurserymen.

J. R. Mayhew, Weyabachie, Tex., President; J. Edward McLean, Morrisville, Pa., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-four annual convention will be held at Chicago in 1919.

HOUSTON, TEX.—The Houston Horticultural Society has a plan to make this city prominent as the "City of Crepe Myrtle."

MALDEN, MASS.—M. F. Enright, owner of the Highland Nurseries, has filed a petition in bankruptcy; liabilities, $850; no assets.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—Glensyrie, a 5,000-acre estate near this city, has been purchased by Alexander Smith Cochrane, of Yonkers, N. Y.

METHODS of clearing land that have proved successful in cut-over sections are described and illustrated in Farmers' Bulletin 974 of the United States department of agriculture, entitled, "Clearing Land."

THE New York Sun says there is almost certain to be a shortage of fruit trees of all kinds next spring with all stock higher in price and suggests securing acceptances of orders now for next spring delivery.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—Unprecedented rainfall in this state has caused a loss to the prune crop that will total millions, and has resulted in a government order to hold up all shipments to outside points intended for civilian consumption.

A SPECIAL commercial apple crop report for August, issued by the United States department of agriculture, indicates the condition in barreled-apple producing states as 50.5 as compared with 40.4 final for 1917. Boxed-apple producing states, it is estimated will show a decrease of 18 per cent.

The Town Peach Basket.

The Town Peach Basket stands on the Broadway curb, just above Thirty-fourth street, in front of Macy's. Already it has become a landmark, like the steamship Recruit, the camouflaged tank at the public library, and all the other picturesque bits of war-time advertising which line our streets. Its fat, bulging sides, vividly striped with red, white and blue, catch the eye of the newsboys on the corner, who refrain from throwing their peach pits at one another and deposit them dutifully in the name of the big brother who has gone to war. The great black letters tell the story of the peach pit and its part in the war to every passing automobilist, and are responsible for the many packages of dried pits which are deposited early each morning by chauffeurs on their rounds of errands.

"The government needs peach stones. Reduced to charcoal they filter the poison out of gas and save our soldiers' lives."

This is the legend which the barrel bears, at the request of the United States government. Everybody has probably read a month since that peach pits are needed in the manufacture of charcoal for gas masks, and everybody would give them willingly, and, if necessary, eat peaches they didn't want all the rest of the season, if by so doing they could be sure of helping. It is not the eating, nor yet the saving, however, that counts, but the delivery of the dried pits into the hands of the government agents. Good intentions have to be gathered young and have to be helped along in the gathering by every device for labor saving and memory stimulating. It would save a great deal of trouble if every good intention was a guarantee of good action. No Liberty bond speeches would have to be made on the street corners, for people would simply go to their banks and buy their bonds; but people are indolent and they neglect to do the things they want to do. Hence Liberty Loan campaigns and peach barrels.

Peach pits are not the only providers of carbon for gas masks. Two hundred pits supply enough carbon for one gas mask, but other fruits and nuts supply the same commodity in varying degrees. The pits of apricots, dates, prunes and plums, together with walnuts, butternuts and hickory nut shells, are all valuable. Even the despised boarding house prune takes on a new dignity from this knowledge.—New York Tribune.

Boston Dahlia Exhibition.

The dahlia show held in Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass., September 14-15, under the auspices of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, in conjunction with the American Dahlia Society, was marked by an excellent attendance and a far better showing of blooms than was anticipated, in view of the heavy rains followed by long drought. While the entries were not as numerous as in other years the quality was excellent and interest was not lacking in the new seedlings and the many standard varieties and old favorites of great size and fine in form and color.

George L. Stillman, Westbury, R. I., again staged Millionaire, a delicate lavender and one of the best in the show, while Billionaire also appeared to splendid advantage among his 100 original varieties. Included in his class were General Joffre and General Haig, gorgeous blooms, while his noted Loma family showed up well.

J. E. Jones of Waltham, an amateur, showed two 3-year-old seedlings, which were greatly admired. President Wilson, a rich crimson with a suggestion of magenta and white tipped petals, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, white with markings of garnet. Both are said to be free bloomers with blossoms nine inches across. Thomas Murphy staged the most remarkable white varieties ever seen in Horticultural hall and John P. Rooney, of New Bedford, attracted attention with a vase of Mrs. Frank Grinnell, which has 13 first prizes to its credit. J. L. Alexander had entries in all of the classes. His Nancy Hankins was especially good. Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., Boston, and the Ames Plow Co. also made splendid displays.

The following were prominent in the list of awards:

Dahlias.—Boston Cut Flower Co., Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., George L. Stillman, J. B. Jones, A. M. Hayden, W. D. Hathaway, C. Louis Alling, J. K. Alexander and Ames Plow Co.

Fruits and Vegetables.—Hillcrest Farm, John Bauernfeind, Edward R. Farrar, Mrs. M. J. Merrill, Mrs. Elbridge Torrey, F. W. Dahl, Oliver Ames, Mrs. C. E. Cotting, John Scheepers & Co., J. A. Neal, Mrs. Henry Lyman, Mrs. O. S. Patten, F. S. DeLue, D. R. McLean and Brookline High School Girls' War Garden. H. C. T.

Ass'n of American Cemetery Sup'ts.

The thirty-second annual convention of the above association, held at Rochester, N. Y., an account of the opening sessions of which was published in our last issue, page 395, came to a successful close September 13, a most interesting and well attended meeting. Cincinnati, O., was chosen as the place of the next convention, and the election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: W. H. Atkinson, Riverview, Trenton, N. J., president; H. B. Adams, Forest Hills, Jamaica Plain, Mass., vice-president; W. B. Jones, Highwood, Pittsburgh, Pa., secretary-treasurer. The executive committee comprises the following: James Warren, Providence, R. I.; R. N. Kesterson, Knoxville, Tenn., and W. N. Rudd, Chicago.

SAVE COAL! Grow the New Improved Primula Malacoides

Of all the many varieties and strains of Primula on the market now there is not one of them compares, even favorably, with the Rohrer Primula Malacoides. Years of patience and hard labor have developed this one to perfection, both in growth and size of plant, color and production of bloom. A season, such as this, when coal is scarce and expensive, it is one of the most profitable, economical and popular plants for you to grow. The colors are most beautiful shades of Rose Pink, Light Lavender and Snow White. A cool temperature, 40 to 45 degrees, produces the best results. For September and October del very:

Pink and Lavender, 2 1/2-in. pots.....	100	1000
Pure White.....	$6.00	$55.00

BUSINESS IMPROVES IN ALL LINES.

Roses are shortening up, and with cooler weather in sight, the supply will be even more limited until the new crop arrives. Carnations are making their appearance in more generous quantities every day and find a good market. Gladioli are now done for and asters are on the wane. Snapdragons are seen, and while the stems are short the flowers are excellent. The demand for funeral work during the past week has been good and the call for cut flowers is improving fast. Weddings and receptions are also more numerous and all of the shops are busy.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY'S FLOWER SHOW.

The September exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, held in the ball room of the Narragansett hotel, from all appearances, was a complete success, the displays being quite numerous. Dahlias seemed to predominate, and the exhibit of James Robertson, of Newport, attracted much favorable attention, as did that of Arthur Selew, one of the largest exhibitors in the amateur classes. A fine showing of the new rose, Columbia, staged by Joseph Kopelman brought favorable comment. The rose display of Burke & Burns was also most excellent. T. J. Johnston & Co. were well to the front with fine baskets arranged with dahlias and gladioli, and the Westminster Greenhouses had an excellent arrangement of palms. Lawrence Hay made a good showing of hardy perennials. James Crawshaw displayed hardy annuals. Cornelius Hartstra had flowers in variety, and Neil Ward took the honors for the best collection of asters. The feature of the vegetable section was the display of the Maplehurst Greenhouses. The exhibit was most varied and included some large squash specimens, one of which weighed 43 pounds.

The New York Floral Co., which has a fine store at the corner of Manor House Square and North Broadway, reports having had excellent business throughout the summer.

R. T. Frederick has recently opened a neat store at Hastings-On-Hudson.

At the Milliot store, 18 North Broadway, it was recently stated that business was satisfactory.

The Hollywood Florist, 36 South Broadway, has a good store and seems prosperous.

The Macdonald Floral Co. closed its store, September 1, and discontinued business.

O. A. Schaefer, the Park Hill Florist, has given up his store.

FLORISTS' TELEGRAPH DELIVERY.

Annual Convention, Cleveland, O., October 8-9, 1918.

Programme of Unusual Interest.

Every retail florist should, and no doubt will, be interested in this important gathering of the active, wide-awake men of the trade. The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association has made wonderful strides in the past three years, its increasingly perfected organization opening up avenues of trade that have proved very profitable to members, particularly those who feature the system and originate business in their own stores.

The association is an offspring of the Society of American Florists, each applicant being required to first become a member of the parent body. Since 1915, its membership has grown so rapidly, however, that a special meeting or convention was called in Chicago in October, 1916, at which a new constitution and by-laws were adopted. President Wm. F. Gude at the close of this meeting said that he had never presided over a more enthusiastic or earnest body of business men.

Last year's convention at Detroit, Mich., was attended by prominent retailers from every section of the United States and Canada. There was not a dull moment in the two days' proceedings. President Gude, with his inspiring personality and vim, kept the members on the qui vive all the time. It was a meeting of business men who talked business and the subjects discussed were intensely practical. A large sum was raised for the S. A. F. publicity fund, and great strides made in getting its own F. T. D. message across to the public. It was, indeed, a most enthusiastic and inspiring gathering.

Since that time, great changes have taken place. On account of war conditions, many serious problems now confront the trade in every branch of the business. There is, however, a distinct note of optimism throughout the craft in all parts of the country. The effort to keep the "Home Fires Burning" is encouraged in the persistent demand for flowers by the public, who find them a necessity in everyday life. All members of the organization look forward to a greatly enlarged attendance at the coming meeting, as Cleveland is so centrally located, being convenient alike to east, west and south, and Canada on the north.

In addition to its 100 per cent president, the association also possesses an exceedingly live wire in Secretary Albert Pochelon. Some call him Secretary "Pushalong," for in his activities for the good of the F. T. D. he certainly does keep things moving. In his questionnaire of last year, mailed to all the members previous to the meeting, he put questions that were of vital importance, several of which set the members thinking and produced direct results at the Detroit meeting. This year's questionnaire covers every phase of the work of the organization.

Question No. 3 reads: "Shall firms, not in the retail business, but closely associated with our trade, be allowed to join and work with us, and what shall be their annual dues?" The discussion of this should certainly prove interesting, as if wholesalers are meant, and are allowed to fill orders, which the by-laws now especially forbid, there will be opposition from the trade in the large cities, where there is already too much of this clandestine service.

In question No. 5, the plan of buying membership in the S. A. F. with a lump sum is interesting and affords a solution of a more or less troublesome matter.

Question No. 8 refers to a system of paying all "past due" bills by the secretary immediately on presentation of the same, the 20 per cent discount to revert to the organization, and compelling the delinquent to pay full face value within two weeks or lose his membership. This looks feasible, and if practicable will definitely solve the question of credits, which is so important to every member.

And hasten peace for all

No. 16 asks: "Are you dissatisfied with any part of the work of the F. T. D. and why?" This should result in the clearing up of real or fancied troubles, due generally to misunderstanding.

The answers to No. 9, "Have you increased your out-of-town business since becoming a member?" should be interesting to all present, as some of those who have featured the service have obtained really wonderful results. Chas. P. Mueller, Wichita, Kan., made the statement at the F. T. D. special meeting in St. Louis that he had sent out 850 orders the past year and that these had been productive of much return business.

In No. 6 the support of the publicity fund is urged upon the members, the "Say It With Flowers" slogan having become very valuable to the F. T. D.

No. 2 says: "The question of higher dues will also be discussed, and the members are asked to give their opinion."

No. 10 is important. In order to find the volume of business done by the organization each member is asked to give the number and amount of his outgoing and incoming sales for the year, which information, when compiled, will be of great value. If computed annually, comparisons would show the growth and importance of the service.

Others of the many questions, 28 in all, touch on minor matters that are continually coming up in the transaction of business of the organization all over the country.

Secretary Pochelon is on the job all the year round. New members! New members! is his cry continually, as each addition adds to the power of the organization. He is constantly planning and working out new ideas that in one way or another will aid the association. He wants the assistance of every member, and will try out anything that is feasible or appears at all practical.

In speaking of the Cleveland meeting, President Gude said: "We hope to have the largest gathering of retail florists, and the greatest number of new ideas and practical thoughts, ever brought to a florists' convention. Bring all your ideas, suggestions and criticisms, and come prepared to exploit and substantiate them, and thereby help to make our association better."

Cleveland is the home of leaders of the craft who are up to date in everything that pertains to the advancement of the business, among whom are Adam Graham, H. P. Knoble, F. C. W. Brown, Charles E. Russell, Carl Hagenburger, Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson, Frank A. Friedley and M. A. Vinson, from whom visiting members of the craft will be sure of a hearty welcome.

Funeral Orders.

The most profitable and important feature of the cutflower business is that of furnishing designs and emblems for funerals. Some stores enter to this class of work almost exclusively. Owing to the short notice that is given for many last-minute orders, often at times to make trains for out-of-town delivery, one should as far as possible, be prepared with made-up wreaths of magnolia, galax or other material that can in a short time be decorated with fresh flowers. A stock of mossed pieces of pillows, crosses, etc., are also a great help.

Many persons or committees who have not had former experiences in ordering funeral flowers, come with ideas of fantastic designs that are almost impossible of execution. It is the business of the florist to point out in a nice way that such designs are not now as much used as formerly; that handsome wreaths on stands or easels, with inscriptions on ribbon, are more suitable. Panels of flowers, with, if necessary, small designs of monograms, badges, or trade symbols, which can be made with varied colors of chenille, to be placed in the center, are to be suggested to those who want this feature carried out.

The average customer who has expressed a desire for something made of flowers not in stock, will very likely accept something else just as appropriate if it is shown to be "what we are using a good deal of at this time." It is not necessary to say that the flower wanted is not on hand, but by bringing forward other flowers as popular for the purpose, it is a question as to which is the best, and the salesman's recommendation generally brings the choice his way.

To find out how much a customer or committee wants to spend is not as difficult as it would seem. When it is learned that the demand is for funeral flowers, the salesman ventures: "We are sending mostly wreaths and sprays and have them from $5, $7.50, $10, $12 and $15. "Which size can I show you?" In some stores prices would be lower, and in others higher, according to the trade. In nine cases out of 10 the answer will reveal the price desired. Committees are generally guarded in expressing themselves, but, if mention is made of several choice pieces recently sent, together with prices, some member will almost involuntarily ask to see something about such a price, and the salesman has his cue. When with the individual customer something is decided on, it is then the salesman's opportunity to add something to the price by suggesting the addition of a bunch of violets or an orchid or two or a dozen valley, a choice ribbon bow, etc. The best work of this character comes from the regular customers of the store. Many who only buy occasionally and are not particularly fond of flowers, will send something to the funeral of relatives or of persons with whom they have had business relations.

Soliciting is not considered ethical by most of the stores, but there are "crepe chasers" who, watching the death columns in the daily papers, strive to be first on the ground, almost before the ink of the paper is dry. Quite a large business is done by these gentry, who are profuse in promises, but whose work is very sparse, indeed.

Legitimate soliciting can be undertaken in factories, stores, clubs, societies and other organizations, when officers or other prominent persons pass away. Orders for considerable amounts can be secured in this field.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The season is now opening up a trifle, with a perceptible increase in the demand. House plants, ferns, rubbers, dracenas, and bright crotons should begin to move. Keep a few choice specimens in jardinières or pot covers. An article that is to be sold to some one who is not particularly anxious for it, must look its very best, so every moment of spare time can be used to advantage in rubbing up the leaves, removing blemishes or rearranging positions, so as to show the plants off to the best possible advantage.

Well colored autumn leaves are now to be had in quantity. When the oaks are at their best, the whole interior of the store can be decorated with these to great advantage. J. H. Small & Sons, in their Broadway store, New York, made a feature of this oak leaf decoration the first week in October for many years. It always attracts great attention. They make a point of getting the first of these, before they were seen in other places. Branches placed in jars of water last much longer.

Weekly mimeographed or printed notices or cards, that can be mailed for a penny postage, are certainly worth more than they cost. Just a short, trite message, calling attention to one or two seasonable plants or cut flowers, may bring but few early responses, still, everyone addressed reads the short sentences, and is reminded of the store and its desire to serve, and will likely be heard from at the first opportunity.

Arrange a window with pots of the Chinese wool flower. This very showy plant, with its red tassel-like plumes, belongs to the coxcomb family. It is comparatively cheap, and always attracts great attention.

Baskets of fruit and flowers, artistically arranged, are sure to meet with approval. A few well-colored peaches, pears, grapes and apples, together with a small box of choice candy, and flowers which can be placed in small vases or tubes of water, are just the thing for sick friends, particularly if they are recovering in the hospital.

A choice wreath of galax, ivy, or magnolia leaves makes a good ornament for the flower case and one which can in a few minutes, by the addition of choice seasonable flowers, be made into just what the customer with only a few minutes to make a train was looking for. Many a dollar has been added to the day's receipts by these almost "ready to pick up pieces," which were on hand for the hurry-up customer.

There is likely to be a number of short notice weddings, as a result of the new draft, which it is well to be prepared for, with all the accessories spick and span, including a few floor vases, a kneeling stool, good pedestals and pot covers, bridesmaids' baskets, etc. Wall pocket baskets can be used decoratively to great advantage, as a few to a room or hall, filled with loose flowers and vines, are quickly placed and always pleasing features.

It is now time to feature evergreens, pyramidal stock for the vestibule or stoop outside, or shorter bushy plants for window boxes. Grover-retailers, who are closing some of their houses, will find a good profit in filling a cold house with good bright evergreen plants in assortment secured at this time before the first frosts give the stock a coat of tan. These, when heeled in the ground, will keep their fresh bright appearance for a long time. A light covering of leaves thrown over the top will prevent the ground from freezing, even in quite severe weather. Those who supply retail florists with plants, will also find this a good side line this season, when other stock is so scarce.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery convention in Cleveland, October 8-9, is going to attract all the live wires. Better arrange to go. It will pay you.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

October Routine Work.

The varieties, Golden Glow, Smith's Advance and Early Rose, are now being cut in limited quantities, heralding in the 1918 chrysanthemum season, and some of the early October varieties are fast ripening up the wood and expanding their buds so that in a very few days they too will be showing considerable color. This means somewhat of a letup in the moisture given to the plants and a drier atmosphere maintained. After the buds begin to open up, the plants should not be syringed overhead because of the danger of water settling in the top of the buds and causing them to rot, but the plants should be watered at the roots only as they require it. An occasional syringing of the underneath of the foliage early on bright days as a check to red spider and other insects, does no harm and is beneficial to the plants, but be careful and not get them over-wet at the roots. Do not think that after the buds are taken there is to be any letup in the watchful care of the plants. On the contrary, there will be plenty to do until the last bloom is cut.

After the buds are taken, any side-shoots that have been overlooked will quickly push out and grow rapidly. The plants ought to be looked over every few days and any of the shoots found on the plants picked off; also the suckers, which shoot out so quickly from the stool of the plant. Before the buds get very far advanced be sure the plants are properly supported.

Watering with liquid manure should be continued with the bench grown stock until the buds begin to show color, after which clear water only should be given. Specimens and plants being grown in pots for sale as pot plants can be given liquid manure for a considerable time yet, but it is best to gradually let up on the feeding as the buds commence to expand. When in active growth, pot grown chrysanthemums respond with a vigorous growth under the stimulation of liquid manure, but if the root action is not right through poor drainage or other causes, a great deal of damage can be done the plants in a very short while.

Now is the time to attend to any staking and tying of pot grown plants, whether they are specimens of large size or smaller plants for commercial sales, it being very much easier to do the tying now before the plants are full of buds than afterwards. The plants need to be properly supported so that the branches will not break off in handling, but neatness should be exercised in doing the work; do not fill the plants with an overabundance of cane stakes when a few loops of green silk-line will answer the same purpose.

Now is a good time to go over the benches to see if any of the surface soil is washed away so that the roots are bare. Sometimes this happens from continued watering of the beds. If so, take a little fresh soil and cover up any of the roots showing.

Watch closely for any signs of aphid on the expanding buds. As soon as a little steam heat is used, the insects can be taken care of by painting one of the steam pipes with a nicotine insecticide and turning on the steam, choosing a still evening for doing it.

One of the principal factors to insure a fine lot of blooms is to thoroughly ripen up the growth of the plants. Plenty of fresh air and a cool temperature go a long way towards accomplishing this. Chrysanthemums delight in a cool temperature at all times, but just at this time they particularly need it to put strength into their growth and give texture to their blooms.

In a very short while we may expect frost at night, so that it will be necessary to start up the steam to maintain the temperature when the petals are unfolding. A temperature of 50 degrees at night, with a crack of ventilation, is best suited for the development of the blooms. Dampness is the principal thing to avoid. If upon entering the house in early morning the plants and blooms are found too damp, as though covered with a heavy dew, then they need a little more steam to dry up the atmosphere better, but until the outside temperature goes down to the freezing point very little steam heat will be needed in the chrysanthemum houses.

The pompon and single varieties are fast budding up, bringing up the question of whether to disbud them or let them come in natural sprays. This of course will depend on the purpose they are being grown for. Some growers find a demand for disbudded single and pompon chrysanthemums, while others have the best demand for the natural spray. But when grown as natural sprays they are very much improved by a little disbudding. It brings out the character of the individual flower better. As soon as the buds are large enough to handle is the proper time to disbud. They will come into bloom quicker if attended to on time. Be sure the pompons and singles are furnished proper support for their sprays.

PROPOSED OFFICIAL BULLETIN.

Under an order emanating from the war industries board, the society will not be allowed to establish any publication during the period of the war. The chief of the pulp and paper section, Thomas E. Donnelley, states, in reply to a letter addressed to him explanatory of the bulletin which the society, at the St. Louis convention, directed should be published to serve as the official organ of our organization:

"This section of the war industries board has ruled that no new publication may be established during the period of the war. It would be admittedly unfair for us to request established publishers to cut their consumption of paper for the various publications, and permit a new publication to be issued unless it were definitely shown to be a war necessity.

We must ask you, therefore, to give up your project of publishing a society organ during the period of the war."

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that F. W. Fletcher, of Aburndale, Mass., and Orlando, Fla., submits for registration the new asparagus here mentioned:

Asparagus Fletcherii (densifolius). A variation (seedling) of Asparagus Sprengeri. It varies in the shorter, more compact and much heavier foliage, four sprays being equal to 12 of Sprengeri. It is especially seen to be an improvement when used as a foundation for sprays, and as a basket plant.

Tested five years and proved to come true from seed.

Any person objecting to this registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY FOR FLOWERS.

It has been arranged that our magazine advertising for the season now opening shall begin with a page, in two colors, in the November Metropolitan, which is on sale everywhere, October 14. This page will feature chrysanthemums particularly, and it is expected, will stimulate a demand for these flowers, which is highly to be desired, in view of the tremendous supply in sight. When, at the opening of the year, florists began to realize that fuel consumption for the next season was to be restricted, many reasoned that chrysanthemums would be the best crop to close with in houses that must assuredly go out of operation until the fuel situation should become less acute, consequently we are confronted with the problem of moving an unprecedented crop. Hence our committees decided to give special publicity to this product.

A plan covering eight other advertisements in various magazines, featuring largely Thanksgiving and Christmas, and including a full page Christmas advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post, is practically settled upon, and will be put into operation, the funds at the disposal of the committees determining, of course, the extent to which the plan is to be followed.

And here we may say again that the committees are still short of the amount urgently required to enable them to attain fully the objects of the campaign. There are hundreds of florists who have as yet contributed nothing to our fund, and yet are reaping some of the benefits arising from our work. Step by step, the details of our campaign have been described in our trade papers, at meetings of our trade bodies, and in other ways, therefore it can hardly be imagined that anyone is not fully acquainted with our objects. There is no holding back on the part of the committees. Every penny coming in is invested in publicity work, nothing is wasted, and we are actually getting also publicity that money could not buy. But our efforts must not be intermittent, they must be constant. That is why we are appealing to those who have not subscribed to help us to complete our fund, and thus benefit the trade the country over.

Our promotion bureau has arranged for a further supply of the handsome glass signs carrying our slogan, "Say it with Flowers," but owing to the increase in cost we have been obliged to advance the price to $2 each, which price barely covers the actual expense of sign and delivery charges. This sign is a business-bringer, and properly displayed silently conveys a message which, in these times, is most suggestive.

To enable florists who use newspaper space for their announcements, to make direct connection with our magazine advertising, our promotion bureau has in course of preparation a series of electrotypes featuring the national advertisements and requiring only the insertion of a local florist's own name and address, and proofs of same will shortly be available.

The use of our "stickers," transfer signs, and slides for use in moving picture houses, should now be seasonable, and any florist who has not received particulars of same, is invited to write us for information. All these helps serve to make the magazine advertisements more effective and to direct results to local establishments.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Flowers and Publicity.

How many florists are using our slogan, "Say it with Flowers," and getting maximum results? The many uses it can be put to is astonishing, as it lends itself to everything. For instance, this simple message in newspapers, "For her Birthday. Say it with Flowers," with your name and address underneath, or, "For the Anniversary. Say it with Flowers," name and address of the advertiser. The hundred and one uses it can be put to make our slogan an invaluable asset to those florists who continually use it.

We find the advertising specialties such as calendars, blotters, pencils, etc., also fitted for the adoption of the slogan, which help in the general use. Another fine method of its use is the co-operation of florists generally in their own cities and towns in raising a fund for their own use and simply advertising "Say it with Flowers," no names being used, but the repeated use of the slogan on bill-board, car-cards, or newspapers would have an unusual effect in the sale of more flowers. It would be an ideal way of advertising and would create widespread publicity on account of its simplicity of character but high-minded in ideal.

Try it out whenever possible and watch results.

INTERESTING CLUB MEETING.

The florists' club meeting of September 19 was the initial one of the present season and was held at the Hotel Statler, where all the future meetings of the club will be held. The attendance was good and much enthusiasm was shown. After some preliminary work was disposed of, former president E. A. Fettes turned the meeting over to the president-elect, J. F. Sullivan, who, speaking for the present officers, promised a season of active work for the club and earnestly pleaded for the hearty co-operation of the members. The new treasurer, J. K. Stock, entered earnestly into his work and collected a substantial sum from those present. Harry Balsley gave an interesting address of a reminiscent character. Referring to the S. A. F. convention to be held here next year, he recalled the first meeting of the club, which was organized just 20 years ago as a preliminary step to the purpose of a few of the florists of the city to invite the national society to meet here in August, 1899. His memories went back 45 years, when this city had few florists and their houses and facilities for doing business were of the most primitive kind, and their hardships correspondingly great. He remembered vividly similar experiences of the pioneer florists throughout the west, and named many of them, who have since passed away, but who had achieved great success, both financially and professionally. Harry's address was the chief feature of the meeting and was highly appreciated by all. S. Seligman, of ribbon fame, was present, and gave a talk which was full of optimism as to the approaching fall trade, which at many points, he said, is already plainly manifested.

A letter was read from Philip Breitmeier, who was unable to be present. He predicted a successful season for the club and encouraged everyone to do his utmost to that end, promising his own hearty co-operation. Charles H. Plumb gave an interesting review of the bulb situation, based upon information gleaned from reliable sources, and which indicates much uncertainty as to importations this fall.

By a resolution unanimously adopted, a hearty vote of thanks was given to Wm. F. Gude, the Washington representative of the Society of American Florists, for his recent assurance to the trade that General Crowder has not made a ruling to the effect that florists within the draft age would be required to seek work in munition plants or other essential war work. The secretary was instructed to convey to Mr. Gude the club's action, which included, as well, a high appreciation of all the splendid work done at the national capital by Mr. Gude for the florists of the country as representative of the S. A. F.

The school gardens committee made a report of the annual exhibits at 17 of the public schools, September 17-18. The judges were P. Pape, Louis Charvat, Sidney Beard and George Doemling. The club annually donates prizes in plants to each of the schools making exhibits, and members of the club individually contribute many special prizes.

A spirited discussion of the proposed closing of flower stores on Sunday was participated in by most of the retailers present, and the subject developed such importance as to make it a special order of business for the next meeting of the club.

The following were by ballot voted upon and received into membership: Walter E. Cooke, Charles Vodic, A. T. Gibson and George Streit, Jr.

NOTES.

Philip Breitmeier, Charles H. Plumb, A. Pochelon, Thomas Browne, A. J. Stahelin, Robert Rahney and J. F. Sullivan visited the growers at Mt. Clemens, September 17. Here they found the florists in nearly every case short of help, but the stock was looking well, though somewhat limited in quantity as compared with former years, and all yielding to the government rule of 50 per cent of the coal supply.

Vice-President-Elect M. Eloy of the florists' club is on a motor trip to New York. He left here September 17 and was accompanied by his wife and son, Myron. The latter goes as far as Ithaca, where he re-enters Cornell university to finish his horticultural training.

Otto Reinhold, who some time ago bought the florist business of Alex. McCommon, at 412 Grand River avenue, has, owing to ill-health, given it up and is now at Denver, Colo. Mr. McCommon, who owns the building, is again operating the store.

Lancaster County Florists' Association.

Through the courtesy of Willis B. Girvin, of Leola, Pa., the meeting was held on his veranda September 19, with a goodly attendance of members, and with S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, and James Brown, of Coatsville, as visitors. A letter of invitation to the club to make its annual visit to the Vincent dahlia farms at White Marsh, Md., was read, but owing to labor and other conditions, it was deemed best to omit this trip as a club affair this season. Letters were also read from T. J. Nolan and Wm. K. Murphy, the latter being in active service in France.

The programme for the evening was a discussion opened by E. F. Barr with a paper entitled "How to Make Both Ends Meet."

The topic was discussed by different members of the club. Harry Rohrer said that we certainly should watch our expenses closer than most of us do, and that we should take advantage of every possible side line that we could work in so that the end of the season would find us with a margin of profit. Mr. Barr added that his remarks applied to greenhouses only, that all stocks from the greenhouses was sold to their store, and it was up to the store to show a profit over these prices, the prices charged the store being based on cost records at the greenhouses.

S. S. Pennock said that the curtailment of shipments in times of glut would help the market if it could be carried out so that each grower would share his part of the burden. He also said that on account of a number of florists intending to run their places this fall until chrysanthemums were over, the season would probably find a rather oversupplied market, but many of these places would then close down and he believed that the year would average up good. He fully agreed with Mr. Barr and others that florists should keep more records of cost and returns, instead of depending on their bank account to show whether they had made money or not. Speaking of the business in general, he said it is anything but non-essential, that the French people consider the use of flowers right now as more important than ever before, and that the French government recognizes the importance of flowers as a means of keeping up the spirits and the morale of its people.

Fred Ritchy said that he saw an article in the Ladies' Home Journal that advised people not to buy flowers, but to put the money into Liberty Bonds or War Savings Stamps and that he could not understand why this business should be singled out for such articles, when there were other things much less needed than flowers.

Mr. Barr further said that while his remarks applied principally to their own establishment, he had looked up the advertisements in the trade papers, and finds that there has not been an increase of five per cent in the wholesale prices of stock advertised in 1918 over those of 1916, and he said this was not enough as the increased cost of production was over 40 per cent. The number of failures in this line of business was brought out, and this does not help our standing as a business, either with our bankers or the government, and the only way to avoid this is to keep such accounts so that we know where we are losing money.

After a vote of thanks to the host, the meeting adjourned to meet in the Chamber of Commerce rooms the third Thursday of October. The ladies' auxiliary had a meeting at the same time and the same place with a 98 per cent attendance, so that we can expect some doings the coming winter. After the meeting, home grown apples, peaches, plums and grapes were served, and their appearance and quality demonstrated that Leola is a good fruit producing section. Previous to the meeting an inspection was made of the greenhouses where carnations are the principal feature, with only three varieties in evidence, Matchless, Supreme and Mrs. C. W. Ward. Three houses of roses are being grown and have proved a profitable investment with the new Columbia, and has one house that will be run cold until spring. In this he has planted Kaiserin and Killarneys. He also has a number of houses of chrysanthemums that will be matured and the houses run cool for the balance of the season. ALBERT M. HERR.

Washington, D. C.

AUTUMN PICKING HELPS BUSINESS.

Business is picking up with the coming of cold weather and much better prices are prevailing in the retail stores, while there has been no very large increase in wholesale costs. At the same time the quality of the stock has improved and some very good Russell, Hadley and Ophelia were offered. The prices on the first-named ran as high as $15 per hundred, with average quotations running between $8 and $12. Ophelias brought from $3 to $6. There were only a few gladioli on the market and these sold up quickly at $3 and $4 per hundred. Cosmos is not as good as could be desired. It is coming from New Jersey, but does not seem to ship well, and, therefore, does not hold up. It is too early for the local supply. Dahlias are more plentiful but seem to be in short crop this year, due in part to the long dry period during the summer. It is expected that these flowers will bring a little better price this year than last. Asters are entirely off the market. There are a few new crop carnations coming into this city, but these are small as to flowers and short stemmed and not very desirable, although selling fairly well. White October Frost put in an appearance last week, but they do not amount to much, being of inferior quality.

NOTES.

William F. Gude, with his two sons, Ernest and Granville, George W. Hess, superintendent of the United States Botanical Gardens, and Judge Downey, of the United States Court of Claims, spent the week end at Barnegat Bay, N. J., the guests of Commodore Westcott.

Miss Nellie Brueninger, in charge of the bookkeeping department of Gude Bros., has returned from a three weeks' vacation, two weeks of which were spent at Atlantic City, N. J.

SHIP all tender stock before hard frost sets in.

ENGLISH growers are now facing war restriction of greenhouse fuel.

ARRANGE now to attend the Florists' Telegraph Delivery meeting at Cleveland, October 8-9.

SOME enterprising florists are planning to raise poultry in their vacant greenhouses the coming winter.

LIBERTY BONDS are United States government passports to peace, freedom and prosperity. Buy your passport today.

Lime on Preferred List.

The war priority board, at the request of the secretary of agriculture, has placed agricultural lime in preferred classification both as to fuel supply and transportation.

Fourth Liberty Loan.

Saturday, September 28, will mark the launching of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, the largest loan the country has ever asked because the need today is greater than ever before. The florist industry, already in the front rank in its generous response both collectively and individually in former Liberty Loans, contributions to the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus, and numerous other calls for war needs, not forgetting the thousands of the craft fighting for Democracy, will not fall in this further test of patriotism.

Buy bonds early. Buy to the limit of your resources. Buy them through the division which includes florists and allied trades. Keep your place in the line as necessary to war needs by backing up our boys "over there." The public will "Say It With Flowers" if you "Say It With Bonds", and the misguided individual who tries to break into the limelight as the censor of non-essentials will find it hard to get hearers.

F. T. D. Convention Window Displays.

Secretary Albert Pochelon, of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, Detroit, Mich., calls attention to the good that resulted from the prize window displays arranged by Detroit florists in competition for the $25 cash prize offered by S. Seligman at the time of the annual convention of the association in that city last year. The idea worked out so successfully in presenting the service rendered by members of the organization to the public, that for the window displays arranged in connection with the F. T. D. convention at Cleveland, O., October 8-9, three generous prizes have been offered as follows: For the best window, $100 in cash, by the Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago; second prize, a silver cup, by Chas. H. Grakelow, Philadelphia, Pa., and a third prize of $25, donated by S. Seligman, New York.

Secretary Pochelon urges all Cleveland florists, not only the members of the association, to enter the competition, as the prizes are well worth striving for.

Express Rates Increase.

Following a meeting of the special war committee of the state utilities commissioners of New York, held at Washington, D. C., September 19, Public Service Commissioner Whitney made the announcement that express rates throughout the country is about to be increased 10 per cent, which will mean an aggregate of approximately $24,000,000, of which $17,000,000 shall be raised in the territory of the Chicago lines. The increase allowed July 1 amounted to between $20,000,000 and $25,000,000. The application for increase asks for a flat raise of 10 cents per 100 pounds to existing commodity rates and to advance first-class rates about 16 cents and second-class rates 12 cents per 100 pounds. The state commissioners have issued a statement of protest.

Patriotism and Progress.

There are good, patriotic business men in this country who are genuinely alarmed over some of what they term the meddling activities of the government in business affairs where such meddling cannot be justified as a necessary war measure. A prominent New Yorker, indirectly a trustee for millions of invested capital, thus voices his sentiments: "Governmental encroachment upon freedom of enterprise, I am convinced, can only hamper our progress and play into the hands of our adversaries. As an American citizen, I am glad to let the government have whatever it needs to win the war. As a free American, I demand that what I relinquish to win the war—no more in the way of property, no less in the way of liberty—be returned as soon as victory is won."

Screenings Storage.

William Dilger, Detroit, Mich., offers the following regarding the storage of screenings:

"Storing should be done after October 1 when the weather is cool. A 6-inch reversed sewer pipe with the bell part down placed in the center of the pile or two or three such pipes if the piles are large will take care of the ventilation. The piles must not be too large—preferably not over five feet high and cone shaped."

[Other valuable information on this subject will be found in our issue of August 10, 1918, page 120, under the title, "Coal Screenings Danger."]

STOCK IS STILL IN SHORT SUPPLY.

There has been no great change in the market conditions since last week, consequently stock of all kinds is in short supply and cleans up early. The weather has been cold the greater part of the time and several near frosts have been reported from certain sections in the vicinity of this market. American Beauty roses are in fair supply, but are cleaning up quickly every day at satisfactory prices. Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia are exceedingly scarce and command high figures. Hoosier Beauty, Milady and Richmond are to be had in fair supply, but like all the other roses, are scarce and expensive compared to the general low prices prevailing all through the summer months and up to the time of the present shortage. Carnations are selling exceptionally well at surprisingly good prices considering the quality, especially in regard to the length of stem. Chrysanthemums are more plentiful but are in brisk demand at good figures owing to the general shortage of stock, consequently there is no surplus to speak of at any time. Asters are having a brisk call and move quickly at top-notch prices. Gladioli are still a factor in the market, but the receipts are smaller and there are plenty of buyers for what stock is arriving. Lilies are scarce and so are orchids, but the receipts of Cattleya labiata are increasing a trifle. Lily of the valley is in brisk demand. Dahlias are seen at a few of the stores in limited supply, but seem to be holding their own at high prices. A few home-grown single violets are among the offerings together with water-lilies, calendulas, tuberose and other miscellaneous seasonal stock not already mentioned. Greens are in fair supply in almost all items. Ferns have advanced in price and a shortage is predicted for this winter. The first chrysanthemums from California made their appearance here this week, having been shipped direct to the retail stores. They are considerably higher in price than last year and for this reason will probably not affect the home-grown stock offered in this market as seriously as in the past.

NOTES.

Allie Zech, manager of Zech & Mann, was elected to the local order of Elks and will be initiated September 26. He was the first one in the local wholesale market to receive a questionnaire under the new draft, which means he will be one of the first to be classified.

T. E. Waters, manager of Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s supply department, celebrated his forty-third birthday September 20. He has been engaged in the florist business for 31 years, which means he has been in the harness ever since he was a kid.

Peter Hoefelder, of Kennicott Bros. Co., has received notice from his local draft board that he is an alternate for a quota that will be called to the colors September 30.

John Furrow, of Guthrie, Okla., and bride are at the La Salle hotel.

The Central Floral Co., 132 North State street, has a window display this week that is right in keeping with the times and is drawing the crowds every minute in the day. When one takes into consideration that Marshall Field & Co., who are noted for their magnificent window displays, are directly across the street it can be easily understood that Manager Duris would have to feature something out of the ordinary to command attention and at the same time not lose sight of the fact that his chief object is to sell his stock. With the assistance of his right hand man, Walter Walters, who is responsible for the idea, they staged a scene from real life that is appropriate and brim full of sentiment. A soldier who is home on a furlough is leaving for camp and evidently for overseas, is passing through the gate and turns for another sight at the old mansion, notices that his dog is following, which causes him to stop long enough to say "Not this trip old pal," which wording is inscribed on a card in a prominent place and gives the on-looker an opportunity to grasp the idea in a second. The figures are all life size, and sections of the front yard are bordered or banked with crotons, dracenas, ferns and coleus, while overhead autumn foliage denotes the present. Across the entrance the north window is filled with all the seasonable offerings including occasionally a made-up wreath of such items that suggest the mood the designer happens to be in, or what stock is best available. Another point one should not overlook is that the proprietors took advantage to stage their bill when stock was scarce and the necessary room was available and still another, the chief one of all, the psychological moment—just before the Fourth Liberty Loan drive.

There will be a meeting of all workers identified with the Fourth Liberty Loan, Thursday afternoon, September 26, at three o'clock at the trade headquarters, E. C. Amling Co.'s store, 175 North Wabash avenue. Credentials will be issued to each worker, supplies, posters and automobile permits will be furnished and an able speaker, representing the Liberty Loan Committee, will be present. Everyone in the trade should subscribe through the florists so that as large a showing as possible can be made. Everyone is expected in almost all instances to do as much and more, and at as early date as convenient so as to make the work as easy as possible for Chairman Lautenschlager, who will have his hands full during the entire campaign.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is experiencing a brisk demand for orchids, especially Cattleya labiata, which is in better crop with them now. American Beauty and Mrs. Chas. Russell roses are leaders at this establishment this week. The supply department reports business as good this month with the outlook very encouraging as to the future fall and winter trade, judging from the advance buying.

Paul Klingsporn, manager of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, had a most pleasant visit from his mother, who returned to her home in Philadelphia, Pa., September 23. His firm is offering the first daisies of the season, which made their appearance this week.

The Grossberg-Tyler-Finnemann Co. is receiving regular shipments of choice sweet peas. Louis Finnemann is back on the job, after being laid up for several days with the grip. Morris Grossberg is about to leave on another out-of-town trip.

Percy Jones, Inc., is handling a large quantity of fancy asters, which are good property, this week. Manager Van Gelder is more than pleased with business for September so far, especially in regard to the heavy out-of-town demand.

N. J. Wietor says that Wietor Bros. will start to cut a few early pompons in a couple of weeks, the stock of which is in splendid condition. Carnations are arriving in large quantities here and are having a brisk call.

Kyle & Foerster are featuring a large quantity of stock of all kinds, notwithstanding the shortage in this market, especially roses and particularly American Beauty, Mrs. Chas. Russell and Ophelia.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are pleased with their September trade so far, which is better than that of the same period of last year. Gladioli are still seen in quantity at this establishment.

At J. A. Budlong's store stock is arriving in large supply according to the market condition, especially roses, among which are particularly fine Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia.

Homer Lange, son of the well-known East Madison street florist, will attend the Chicago University starting next week where he will be in the ensign class.

Bassett & Washburn are supplying their trade with fancy Mrs. Chas. Russell, Columbia and Ophelia roses, which are in good supply with them this week.

Charles Reinberg, adopted son of Peter Reinberg, and Leo Zech, younger brother of Allie Zech, are attending St. Paul's Military School at St. Paul, Minn.

Greenhousemen should send their worn out rubber hose to the Red Cross pile on the lake front at Harrison street.

Peter Reinberg has returned from Springfield, where he attended a political meeting of the democratic party.

William Dilger, of the Breitmeyer Landscape and Nursery Co., Detroit, Mich., was here last week on a visit.

The florists' club will meet at the Randolph hotel, Thursday, October 10, at 8 p. m.

According to plans now being made, farming is to be taught in the city high schools.

Draft Exemptions in Chicago.

The Chicago Association of Commerce, through its trade sub-division, is arranging to assist firms, members, and non-members in this district, on their draft problems. The selective service committee of Sub-Division No. 22, which covers seedsmen, florists, greenhouse builders, and onion set dealers, will consider claims made for occupational exemptions. This committee does not pass on dependency claims. Such will endorse their recommendations on blanks which the committee will furnish. These blanks will be later attached to individual questionnaires and submitted first to the local board and then to the division board. The latter will pass on occupational exemption. It is felt that this endorsement by the trade committee will carry much more weight than any single firm or individual could possibly carry.

Office hours of this committee and headquarters will be established later. In the meantime, particulars may be had from Leonard H. Vaughan, of Vaughan's Seed Store, 31 West Randolph street. The committee for Sub-Division No. 22 includes Leonard H. Vaughan, 31 West Randolph street; F. R. Lyon, care Albert Dickinson Seed Co., and C. L. Washburn, care Bassett & Washburn, 178 North Wabash avenue. Advisory: George Sykes, care Lord & Burnham Co., 208 South La Salle street, and Robert F. Leesley, care R. F. Leesley & Co. Full details will be worked out at a meeting of the Association of Commerce on the evening of September 26.

SEASONABLE WEATHER HELPS BUSINESS.

Business seems to improve somewhat, and the prospects are better right along. The weather has been very seasonable, which helps things considerably. The greatest trouble now is to get a variety of stock. Asters have about run out of their season. Carnations are still far from being a reliable article, the stock arriving now being short and in general of inferior quality. Roses of all kinds are coming in fine, and of good quantity. Russell, Columbia and Ophelia are the leaders. Gladioli are still coming in very good, but the supply is not so great and they command a steady price. Lilies are equal to the demand. Dahlias have been a disappointment up to date, and unless they arrive soon will freeze up before any appreciable cut is brought into the market. Chrysanthemums are still confined to out-of-town shipments. The local cut should begin to come in soon, and if business continues to pick up, the retailer will need them to fill in. A few violets are seen, but they are small, and poor in color. In greens, the market is well supplied.

NOTES.

W. A. Rowe, Phil Goebel, Oscar May and the Deutschman boys will soon begin to cut chrysanthemums. They all expect to have a good season, but we do not see so much of them any more at the market because they all have to work harder on account of the lack of help. Their consignments are handled by the Windler Wholesale Floral Co.

In looking over the windows in the city, the writer finds the majority of florists have special displays arranged advertising the Fourth Liberty Bond drive. This is good advertising, and all florists should join in the good work.

Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. has been getting in a good cut of roses from his growers. The Russell and Columbia of A. S. Cerny and W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, are especially good.

Charlie Kuehn, Jr., is on the job early and late. He is now in charge of the cut flower department of his father's establishment. He is a hustler and has a host of friends in the retail business.

H. G. Berning had the first consignment of violets of the season. He has also been getting in quite a few early chrysanthemums.

Geo. H. Angermueller has been getting in nice shipments of roses, which have a ready sale. J. J. W.

North Shore Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held in the City Hall, Lake Forest, Ill., September 6. Vice-President Wm. E. Fisher occupying the chair in the absence of the president, Thomas Head. There was a large number of members present and after the usual business a lively discussion arose about the forthcoming chrysanthemum show. A proposal was also made by E. Benson that the society should entertain a number of the sailors from the Great Lakes. This matter was entrusted to the care of E. Bollinger, E. Benson, and O. Petersen.

The exhibits for the month were: Celosia, (Pride of Castle Gould), J. H. Francis, 98 points; Greenhouse grown fruit, Thos. Head, 95 points; Oncidium varicosum Rogersii, C. Clarke, 95 points; Eucalyptus, C. Wilson, 95 points; Mr. Head also exhibited a fine Cattleya Harrisoniae and some splendid asters, which were very highly commended. The judges for the evening were R. Claussens, O. Petersen and E. Benson. J. H. FRANCIS, Corr. Sec'y.

FUNERAL WORK IS MAINSTAY.

Florists' displays are not of a character at present to excite the enthusiasm of the public. All outdoor flowers are on the wane, and chrysanthemums are not plentiful enough to fill the gap. Sweet peas and violets are not quite due, and carnations are still slow and undeveloped, although a fine crop is on the way. Heavy funeral work is giving a good trade, of which roses, lilies and asters are the mainstay. Pot plants so far in evidence are confined almost wholly to begonias. Offerings are in good demand, and their scarcity cuts the florist out of considerable trade which he would have if stock was available. There is much interest in the matter of trying to get better prices to help meet the greater cost of labor and advance in other expenses. There has been some education of the public along this line by the individual florist, but it is believed that relief should come in a general and uniform way, if profits are to be maintained at the reasonable standards existing before the war. The fuel situation with respect to florists will remain unsettled until after the lake coal shipping season is over.

NOTES.

The florists' association held its first meeting of the fall and winter at the Neil house, September 16. Plans were discussed for keeping up interest through the aid of good speakers and dinners. It is felt that the organization should be all the more active because conditions are disturbed by the war. Meetings will be held every other Monday evening, according to present arrangement. Alfred Hottes, professor of floriculture at Ohio State University, is president, and E. A. Munk, president of the Munk Floral Company, is secretary.

The Munk Floral Company is displaying in its store a silk service flag containing five stars, and another employee has been called by the draft. This is believed to be the best representation of any local florist firm.

Walter Stephens, of F. S. Stephens & Son, vice-president of the florists' association, is with the American army which wiped out the St. Mihiel salient. He is a member of a machine-gun squad.

The Franklin Park Floral Company, of which Carl A. Joysch is manager, is reconstructing its plant on Fair avenue. A new greenhouse will be devoted to the growing of carnations. J.

GOOD FUNERAL AND WEDDING DEMAND.

The past week was characterized by brisk business in all branches, with funeral work especially heavy in both city and out-of-town orders, with a big demand for patriotic designs. General sales have been fair as the result of a killing frost which visited this locality September 16-17. As a result outside stock is off the market. Weddings are well to the front with a good call for cut flowers while the fall openings in the department stores bring a demand for many plants and in some instances quantities of flowers made up and in baskets. Good roses, carnations and chrysanthemums are scarce; in fact at times not equal to requirements.

NOTES.

The range of L. L. May & Co., one of the largest in this vicinity, will be closed this winter. The stock on hand at present is very low.

J. Christensen reports a sale for more stock than he can cut. He is supplying this market with some very good tea roses.

N. C. Hanson is starting on a heavy crop of Ophelia roses and the demand for same is very good. C. R. F.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

SUPPLY CLEANS UP WELL.

Business during the past week has been good, and with the exception of long stemmed American Beauties stock cleans up each day. Roses in the shorter grades were much in demand and in some cases moved better than specials. On Saturday, some of the wholesalers had to cut prices on the latter to get them out of the way. Dahlias are being received in larger numbers, but the supply is not sufficient to meet requirements. The flowers are of great size and fine in color, and it is hoped the season will be longer than it was last year. Asters are practically over and very few carnations are seen. Some very good chrysanthemums are offered, but move slowly. Lilies are now selling well and clean up at $15 per 100. The quality is unusually fine. Roses with long stems are in short supply. Greens are plentiful and the demand is slow.

NOTES.

Miss Katherine Antonette is now in charge of the flower stand in the Wm. Penn hotel. She was formerly with the flower department in the Kaufmann store.

T. Malbrance, of Johnstown, was a visitor this week. He has a fine line of plants that are selling well.

All of the retail stores are now opening at 10 a. m. on the order of the fuel administration.

A heavy frost, September 21, did considerable damage to outdoor flowers in this section. M.

MONTREAL, QUE.—George Robinson and J. McKean, well-known members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of this city, have gone to Vancouver, B. C., to engage in farming.

BUSINESS IMPROVES AND PRICES TIGHTEN.

Business is improving and the supply of stock is shortening. Growers are demanding unheard of prices for asters—$6 and $8 per 100. Carnations are quoted at $2 and $3 and there has been a decided jump in roses. American Beauties are scarce and move readily. Orchids are entirely out of the question. The demand for flowers in general is far greater than the supply.

NOTES.

R. Kopelman, salesman at the Co-operative Market, has enlisted in the British army for service in Palestine and will leave this country, September 25. A suitable gift will be presented to him before his departure.

The Arnold & Fisher range at Stoneham is showing some good button chrysanthemum buds and will start cutting soon. They have a number of new offerings.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are doing a very good business in both cut flowers and florists' supplies.

Fred Roberts, salesman and decorator for J. J. Cassidy, is ill with Spanish influenza.

Wm. Phelps is sending in excellent Easter lilies, delphiniums and single asters.

George Gill, of Medford, is cutting a good strain of dahlias.

Visitor: J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., with an extensive line of foliage plants.

DEMAND IN GENERAL IMPROVES.

Business during the third week of September showed a very substantial increase over any previous week this season. Although funeral work was the mainstay of the business, there was a very noticeable increase in the demand for flowers for gifts, and for the sick, as well as a number of informal social happenings. The weather has been anything but favorable to production, and the result is that there is a great shortage in almost every variety of cut flowers. The supply of roses has fallen off considerably, although the quality holds up well. Columbia is making a fine showing, and the growers who invested in stock of this rose are congratulating themselves, as the variety is a splendid producer, and is developing magnificently. Carnations are showing longer stems, and better sized flowers, although extremely short in supply. Dahlias are making a fine showing now.

NOTES.

Early varieties of chrysanthemums including handsome October Frost and Golden Glow are being shown in the flower shop of the Flick Floral Co. Dahlias are also very prominent here. The new rose crop is coming on very well at the greenhouses, and a fine, large cut is being received daily at the store.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are cutting a good variety of roses, and their orchid houses give promise of a very prolific season. Some fine late asters and gladioli are still being cut at the greenhouses. They report the out-of-town demand very heavy, with hardly enough stock with which to meet it.

A. J. Lanterier's store force worked all day Sunday filling numerous funeral orders, and report a very busy week.

Basket work has been especially heavy here. They are receiving some fine, long-stemmed Russells, and excellent, new crop Columbia roses from their greenhouses.

The Doswell Floral Co. is growing several houses of Columbia roses this season, and express themselves well satisfied with the results obtained thus far. They are having a good crop of carnations considering the dark weather.

Some excellent late asters and Russell roses were noted at the store of Ed. Wenninghoff last week. Mr. Wenninghoff reports business the best last week since the opening of the fall season, with funeral work particularly heavy.

Miss C. B. Flick has returned to her duties at the Patten Flower Shop, Toledo, O., after a month's visit with relatives here.

WINTER'S APPROACH FELT.

The sudden change in temperature has cautioned all growers of the urgent necessity of being prepared, for winter is upon us. For several weeks past, an unusually dry season has prevailed, literally drying up all outside vegetation, leaving but little for the frost to damage. Stock under glass is looking well and some fine roses are being cut from new plants. Chrysanthemums will soon be on the market. The plants are thrifty and promise a fine return for the labor bestowed upon them. The usual large crop has been grown in anticipation of the annual football game, which in spite of war conditions, will take place as usual. Carnations are coming in after a long dearth and are fair in quality. The flower supply is better than it has been for some weeks, but there is still no great surplus, or anything like a glut. Funeral work continues to be the leading factor in trade, but even that has slowed up during the past two weeks and conditions have been somewhat quiet. A few quiet home weddings are solemnized, and a number are scheduled for the fall season, but all will be on a very moderate scale, the bridegroom invariably having to leave for "over there."

NOTES.

The state fair has just closed, bringing thousands of visitors to the city which made brisk all lines of business, though not helping the florist to any great extent. The fair management offered a few small premiums, but of not sufficient size to tempt the florists generally to enter. Prizes were offered for the best vases of roses, carnations and the best pot plants. The only grower to enter was Charles H. Tritchler, who put in a lovely display of ferns, some beautiful new varieties being shown and all very attractive and beautiful. He captured several blue ribbons. Tritchler is tempting trade by bringing in a very attractive wagon load of miscellaneous plants to the open market house, which do not show the effect of either the drought or the frost.

L. H. Haury & Sons have had a good trade all summer and are opening up with good prospects for the season. They have very good roses and carnations, and fine chrysanthemums coming in. They have 300 fine baby rambler roses for fall and winter trade, some

SALES ARE DISAPPOINTING.

With plenty of stock in all lines, there is a disappointing amount of business, the demand being very light, the past week. The quality of the roses was never better for the season, while good large shipments are arriving every day. Specials in nearly all varieties are now quoted. Mock, Russell, Ophelia, Columbia, Hadley and American Beauties are all fully up to standard. The miniatures are also plentiful, but not much in demand. Carnations are quite good for the season, but are not much of a factor as yet. Easter lilies are offered rather above the demand. A little lily of the valley is seen occasionally. It is no longer a staple. It is now dahlia time and they are to be had in quantity. The quality is all that can be desired. The recent heavy rains have been a great help to the dahlia farmers, who all report a splendid crop from now until frost. Cosmos was never finer than this season. It seems earlier than usual. Hydrangea, with its bronzy hues, is now used extensively or to a large extent in all decorations, as is the gay tritoma. Fall asters are also seen. The Simple and branching varieties are about done. Gladioli are also closing up for the summer, some fairly good stock, but short stemmed. Chrysanthemums Golden Glow and Smith's Advance, are about the only sorts so far. Larkspur and ageratum furnish about all the blue. Cattleyas are a bit more plentiful, but hold to a high price. Asparagus and maidenhair are plentiful.

AT WARETOWN.

The official closing of the Waretown Rod and Gun Club, when Commodore Westcott is the guest of the "old guard," the members and visitors who have spent many delightful week ends with him during the season, took place September 19-21. There was a very good attendance who enjoyed themselves fishing, sailing, and round the hearth in the evening. The happiest of the party was the Commodore, who is always at his best when surrounded by his friends. Those present in addition to the Commodore, were: John Walker, Youngstown, O.; W. F. Gude, and two sons, G. W. Hess and Judge Downey, Washington, D. C.; George C. Watson, D. T. Connor, George Craig, Robert Craig, John Burton, Jos. Trainer, M. Collett, Harry Dean, Frank Adelberger, and Michael Bogan, all of Philadelphia.

The following, signed by those in attendance, was sent to J. C. Vaughan, Chicago: "To our good friend and companion, J. C. Vaughan, we extend best wishes at the end of a perfect outing and express our regret at not having you present on this occasion."

DAHLIAS BY PARCEL POST.

Dahlias are now picked to order at the farms, packed in new corrugated boxes, shipped several together in crates to the commission houses, and here wrapped in paper, weighed, tagged and continue their journey to destination by parcel post. The flowers are not touched save by the grower until the box is opened at its destination. This is the ideal method which prevents handling and bruising the flowers and insures the quickest transit. The boxes

WITH THE WHOLESALERS.

More and better roses than ever before seen at this season, is the comment of Clarence Watson of the Niessen force. Dahlias are now a leader, large quantities going out daily. Late asters, gladioli, Easter lilies and cattleyas were also features.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange is featuring dahlias, receiving some excellent stock. Choice Russell and Ophelia roses are important items. Business lacks ginger, but could be worse.

Jack Berger has a bad cold—maybe the "Spanish grip." Billy Stevens says business is good for the season. Snapdragons, gladioli, and Ophelia roses are features.

NOTES.

J. Otto Thilow, who was in Boston the past week attending the national convention of thirty-third degree Masons, also called on his friends of the craft. He said the Carbone shop was very artistic, displaying the most beautiful flowers of the season. He found Henry Penn as "busy as a beaver" with a well arranged store bearing every evidence of prosperity. The dahlia and vegetable show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, he said, had the best of these seasonable flowers and garden fruits he had ever seen. The dahlias were superb. Vegetables liable to wilt, such as lettuce, celery, etc., were shown with their roots in suitable vases of water, which kept them fresh and crisp. Of 100 entries of tomatoes, 50 dishes were so near alike that the judges had almost to draw lots in awarding the prizes. A competent demonstrator has been on duty as a lecturer at the hall daily the entire season from 9 to 5 and two evenings a week, showing his audiences how to prepare soils, the proper fertilizers, the varieties of vegetables and how to plant and other garden information that was of great value to those engaged in growing vegetables. This Mr. Thilow highly commended as work coming within the scope of the society.

F. H. Murphy has sold his lease of the corner store, Allegheny and Frankford avenues, and has taken two adjoining stores, one of which he has covered with a glass roof, making a greenhouse out of the interior. With the double front he has a very showy and attractive establishment. A large airway connects the two stores. He has a very good location. The city is building a station for the Frankford "L" on the site of his old store, which when the road opens, will make this a very busy section.

The allied horticultural trades have been given a section in the raising of the Fourth Liberty Loan. A. A. Nielsen is chairman and Robert Kift, secretary, of the florists' section, which includes growers, wholesalers and retailers. The city has been divided into sections with committeemen for each. A strong letter has been sent out to the trade asking that all their purchases of bonds shall come through this section, so as to bring the craft to the attention of the government as one of the important industries.

The men in low classification of the draft are now being called to war work. William Dych, on North Second street, whose business was the support of his mother, sister of 16 and brother of 12, which dependency places him in class 3, has been ordered by his draft board to get into some war industry. Edward Reilly, of the Wm. J. Baker force, is now at Hog Island, where he has, after a week's service, had a promotion.

The regular meeting of the florists' club, October 1, will in addition to the election of officers for the ensuing year, have an address from J. Otto Thilow on "The Florist Business in Wartime." Mr. Thilow has distinct recollections of the effects of the war on the business during the troubled times of 1861-65, which will make his lecture most interesting.

Michaelson Bros. have moved their business on 52nd street to their greenhouses on Walnut street, owing to their lease expiring, and which until the last minute, they expected to be able to renew. They are looking for another store.

Edward Reid took his son, Lloyd A. Reid, aged 19, to Lafayette College, the past week, where he entered the service, and now wears the uniform. With his father's fighting blood, he should and will, no doubt, give a good account of himself.

Visitors: G. W. Hess, Washington, D. C.; H. K. Rohrer, Lancaster, Pa. K.

SUPPLY HEAVY BUT PRICES FAIR.

There has been little change in the condition of business since our last notes were written. The supply of stock reaching the wholesale district has not been heavy and fair prices have been realized on all good stock. Indications now point to a lighter supply until the chrysanthemums arrive in large quantities. The asters, at the best, are growing stale, and heavy rains during the last days of the past week beat them down. It turned much colder after the rain, and coupled with dark weather, is likely to reduce the supply of roses. Good dahlias continue to arrive and the best sell well. There has been an increase in the supply of orchids and prices are easier. Lily of the valley, when it can be had, brings high figures, some lots being wholesale, the past week, at the rate of $15 per 100. Excepting the dahlias, and their time is indefinite, there is a diminishing supply of outdoor stock. Taking into consideration the fact that a considerable area of glass must stand idle throughout the winter on account of the coal shortage, there is little prospect of a surplus after the volume of chrysanthemums is spent, assuming that there will be a moderate demand. Thus far, the retail stores have no great activity to report, but there is a slight improvement.

September 23.—This is officially the first day of autumn and the weather is seasonable, so much so that the wholesalers are complaining of a light supply of stock. Hadley roses are again appearing on the market, but do not go above extras. Gardenias of fair quality have arrived.

NOTES.

If the florists as "non-essentials," are ever compelled to work off farms or in shipyards, we hope they will do credit to their craft. Referring to the statement of vice-chairman Piez, of the Emergency Shipbuilding Corporation, before the commerce committee of the United States Senate that: "The Hog Island yard expected to turn out 48 ships. It will do well to turn out 20," the New York Sun thus flays the slackers: "As an example of slackening at the Hog Island yard, it is pointed out that on September 13 the riveters, spurred on by wages or prizes, drove 195,212 rivets. On September 17 only 89,407 rivets were driven in the same yard. The trouble comes from slackers of different types. Some are inefficient men, wholly incapable of doing a good day's work, who have wormed their way into the shipyards in order to pick up high wages and escape the draft. Ball players, actors, pugilists, men from every non-essential walk, have found the shipyards the place for soft living. Their employment has incensed some of the men who really know how to work. In the Cramp shipyards some of the workmen have quit because these impossible fellows were put over them as bosses. The hiring of these dodgers of the draft, these creatures who come to 'work' with flowers in their coat lapels and whiskey for their breath, has been the worst evil of shipyard labor. We are glad to see that their case is not hopeless. Mr. Piez has set General Crowder on them, and the Provost Marshal General should have no trouble to weed out every shirker and put on him a coat that has no lapel." In a previous investigation, it was disclosed that a number of eminent financiers were getting big money, not for any work they were doing, but for the "know how." What name could be more appropriate than Hog Island?

N. J. Lales, who is a retail florist of 2528 Eighth avenue, and treasurer of the Greek-American Florists' Association, has recently received a letter from his nephew, Michael Polychron, who enlisted over a year ago in the United States army and who is now with Company A of the 165th Regiment, Rainbow Division, in France. He writes that he was on a five days' leave after some great battles, "but with God's help came out without a scratch" after hard days of hand to hand fighting with the Huns. He adds: "It is wonderful, Uncle, how the Yankee boys show the Fritzies what they are made of and make them glad to cry kamekad! American!" Mike Polychron comes from an old Sparta family, and has an uncle who is a major in the Greek army. When he joined the American forces, he declared to his uncle here: "I am going to fight for the United States since Greece is also fighting for democracy, and were I to try and go to Greece to fight the Germans, the U-boats might get me."

Mrs. J. Asmus, widow of Ernest G. Asmus, formerly a well-known rose grower of North Bergen, N. J., and mother of the young man who now conducts the business, was severely injured September 16, when an automobile truck crashed into the limousine in which she was riding with her son, G. E. Asmus, who was at the wheel, but escaped with slight injuries. Mrs. Asmus is reported to be in a very serious condition, in the North Hudson Hospital, North Bergen. Her home is at 4011 Hudson Boulevard, North Bergen.

Charles B. Weathered, the well known greenhouse builder, was officially notified, September 20, that his son, Charles Bartlett Weathered, Jr., had been killed in action at the river Aureme, in France, July 30, his twenty-second birthday. The young man enlisted in the 7th Regiment, of New York when the United States entered the war, and was later transferred to the 69th, now the 165th Regiment of the line. He was a fine young man and there is much sympathy for his father and mother.

Public Service Commissioner Whitney, of this state, who returned from Washington, September 19, where he had attended a meeting of the special war committee of state utilities commissioners, reported that express rates throughout the country are to be increased 10 per cent, which will aggregate about $24,000,000. The utilities commissioners at their meeting, protested against the raise. It had not previously been made public that such a raise in rates was contemplated.

Costos Sakelos, the Port Washington florist, of Broadway and 181st street, will soon join the colors, leaving the store to his brother, Thomas, who was recently honorably discharged from the United States army on account of an injury he had received. Costos was in the first draft, but on account of being a citizen of Greece he was placed in a deferred list. Now that he must make a choice between the Greek and American armies, he has decided to join the American.

On September 22, P. F. McKenney, Fifth avenue and 42nd street, made up a number of fine floral offerings of American Beauty roses and orchids for the singers that entertained a large audience at the Hippodrome in a benefit for the 69th Regiment, the proceeds to purchase comforts for the boys "over there." Among those to whom the flowers were presented were Mr. and Mrs. John McCormack, Madame Galli-Curci and Madame Caroline Lazzari.

Joseph Vocks, for many years salesman for W. H. Siebrecht in the Cut Flower Exchange, who resigned over a year ago on account of illness, has completely recovered and taken charge of the store of George C. Siebrecht, 100 West 28th street, George having been called to the colors.

Paul Rigo, manager for the Henshaw Floral Co. recently received a letter from his brother, Alphonse, formerly a retailer of this city, who is now at the front with the American army in France. He has seen hard fighting, but thus far, has not been hurt.

Captain Gilmore D. Clarke, son of Gilmore Clarke, of David Clarke's Sons, is now in France and occupies the important position of secretary to the commanding staff of the American army. He went abroad as a member of the 6th Engineers.

Ralph Armstrong, the retailer of Madison avenue and 47th street, recently had an unfortunate accident. He was cranking up his machine when the crank flew back and badly fractured his ankle. He is in St. Luke's hospital.

Jacob De Groff, of the staff of James Weir, Inc., Brooklyn, has two sons in the American army in France and says he has six more that will soon be ready to go.

Craig Muir and wife, who spent the summer on their farm in Connecticut, have returned and reopened their store at 62 West 40th street.

Help Equip 50 Soldiers With Rifles

Twenty members of a War Savings Society, each buying only one War Savings Stamp a month for a year, can equip 50 American soldiers with rifles!

Here's your chance to be a leader in very important war work.

Get together twenty or more of your friends or employees.

Organize a War Savings Society. Call it the "Fifty Rifles Club." Appoint a Captain or Secretary and plan for systematic saving as a group.

Tell others what you are doing and encourage them to join or to organize other Societies.

Your Example will stamp you as a Leader and encourage others to save.

Your Economies will release men, money and material for essential war work.

Your Savings will be of direct help in Winning The War.

You will be under no obligations except to Save for yourself and your country.

Will You volunteer Today for this work?

SAGINAW, MICH.—Bean jobbers of the state held a meeting in this city, September 17-18.

AULT, COLO.—A warehouse is being built here for the John H. Allan Seed Co., of Sheboygan, Wis.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. L. Rogers, of Rogers Bros., Alpena, Mich.; A. E. McKenzie, of E. E. McKenzie Co., Ltd., Brandon, Man.

THE war service committee of the American Seed Trade Association is working on the problem regarding liability of employees of seedsmen.

JOBBERs of Southern France are reported to have delivered less than 40 per cent on their orders for large bulbs of Narcissus Paper White grandiflora.

WHOLESALE PEA CONTRACTS.—Some are giving their former growers three months acceptance, carrying such interest as makes the same bankable locally.

CALIFORNIA growers report failure of plain parsley and salsify as well as some lettuce seed crops. Extra curled parsley, parsnip, endive and red onion are very short.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade September 25 were as follows: Timothy, $8.00 to $10.50 per 100 pounds, no change from last week.

JAPANESE, born in California, may acquire and retain title to real estate, according to a decision handed down in a test case by Judge Craig of the Superior court at Riverside.

LIBERAL shipments of delayed French bulbs are reported afloat on the S. S. Cantal the last third of September. In the early third of the month another steamer also carrying French bulbs sailed and is now due.

SHELLING seed corn by hand is advised by the United States department of agriculture, after its selection from the most productive stalks as they stand in the field. While the method takes more time it is more profitable.

TOLEDO, O.—Clover made a 10 to 15 cent advance September 24, closing at $23.25, gaining $1.35 in 10 days. Cash timothy was steady, selling at $4.97½, September closed at $5.52½, October $5.42½, December $5.42½, March $5.40 and April $5.20.

HARRY A. BARNARD, the genial representative of the Stuart Low Co., London, Eng., writes regretting inability to call on his many trade friends this season on account of the difficulties of travel. Mr. Barnard continues to enjoy good health and hopes to call on the trade again in the near future.

Christie, Ass't. Secretary of Agriculture.

Washington, D. C., September 21.—G. I. Christie, of Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., was nominated by President Wilson today to be assistant secretary of agriculture.

Seeds Regain Priority.

Many in the trade were surprised to find seeds omitted from the priority list recently issued by the War Industries Board, especially as representatives of the American Seed Trade Association had been led to believe that seeds would be included. Immediately upon the appearance of the priority list steps were taken to have seeds included, the Seedsmen's War Service Committee presenting the matter to the board with the result that on September 24 seeds were placed in third class, war preference list.

Dutch Bulbs.

The New York representatives of M. Van Waveren & Sons, Hillegom, Holland, write September 9, as follows:

"It may interest your readers to learn that cable advices are to the effect, that the exportation of bulbs from Holland was ended August 31, 1918. Total cases exported between 15,000 and 18,000 (as against 37,000 cases in 1917). The Germans have declared them contraband of war.

"Owing to the extreme necessity of producing foodstuffs in Holland, the government has ordered that the area devoted to bulb growing must be reduced to 2-3 of the average area employed for the 1917 and 1918 crop. Many varieties of bulbs have totally disappeared in Holland during the last year or two, and a further process of elimination will be the result of the new government order."

Philadelphia Seed Trade.

Local seedsmen, particularly those who specialize in Holland and French grown bulbs, are anxiously awaiting first shipments, which, from cable advices and invoices, are known to be on their way. Holland is making all shipments by way of England, the usual unconvoyed boats for direct service being considered too risky. The extra expense will be considerable. I. N. Simon & Son report spinach already received by the new route, the cost being $2, as compared with 35 cents per 100 pounds for freight and other transportation expense—nearly six times the normal charge for carriage. Two cents per pound, however, is nothing as compared to the great bulk and weight of bulbs, which, if the same advanced rates are carried out, will be found very burdensome, and will add materially to the selling price to the trade.

Paul Richter, of the H. F. Michell Co., states his firm had a record sale of Holland and French forcing bulbs of all kinds. Its salesmen find the trade generally optimistic, and, as there are no Japanese lilies and a very insignificant shipment from Bermuda, they are going strong into the European stock of flowering bulbs of all kinds, which can be brought along during the winter and for Easter with a minimum of space and heat.

From invoices received, Henry A. Dreer, Inc., expect their full orders of European bulbs. All Holland shipments are coming via England, and it is believed transportation charges will be at least three times greater than normal rates, and perhaps more. A great demand for this stock is anticipated owing to the many advance orders that have been received.

The Moore Seed Co. finds offerings of spinach from local growers to be of good quality. Owing to scarcity of labor in marketing crops, much of it went to seed, which is now offered by the truckers as low as 40 to 50 cents per pound. K.

SOUTH FLORIDA truckers were transplanting pepper plants into the field September 20.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, September 24.—Cucumbers 2-dozen box, 80 cents to $1.00; celery, crate, 35 to 50 cents; head lettuce, 2-dozen $2.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $1.50; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 40 cents to 75 cents.

New York, September 23.—Celery (state) per bunch, 15 to 50 cents; cucumbers, 25 cents to $2.00 per basket; mushrooms, $1.50 to $3.00 per basket; tomatoes, per carrier, 50 cents to $1.50; lettuce, per package, 30 cents to $1.25; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50.

Vegetable Prices.

From reports received by the bureau of markets of the United States department of agriculture for the period, September 17-23, the vegetable movement was active and values fairly steady. The price movement in potatoes was somewhat uneven, most changes being in the downward direction, Minnesota sacked whites declining to $2.40 for carlots at Chicago. New Jersey Giants ranged from $2.75 to $3.15 per 100 pounds in eastern markets. Maine Cobblers weakened slightly in Boston and New York, closing at $2.55 to $2.75. Maine Green Mountains ranged firm at $3.25 to $3.60 per barrel in bulk from wagons at Presque Isle. Maine Cobblers were offered at $2.09 to $2.12 per 100 pounds bulk f. o. b. The general range in distributing markets for sweet potatoes was considerably lower, closing at $5 to $5.75 per barrel for Virginia Big Stem Jerseys. New Jersey stock declined 25 cents, ranging $1.75 to $2 per bushel hamper in eastern markets and $2.65 to $3.25 in middle-western and northern cities. Cabbage values continued the heavy decline, prevailing since the opening of the fall shipping season. New York Domestic remained nearly steady at $15 per ton in bulk f. o. b. Rochester. Colorado stock again declined at shipping points to $1 per 100 pounds trackside. General declines continued in consuming markets. New York Domestic sold $5 to $7 lower at $15 to $30 per ton. Wisconsin Holland Seed declined about $10 in southern markets, closing at $40 per ton in New Orleans. Onion markets ranged generally lower. Easter yellows sold at $2 to $2.50 per 100 pounds in consuming markets, closing generally weak, with some recovery in New York. Middle-western yellow stock was also slightly weaker at from $2 to $2.50 per 100 pounds. California shipping points declined 10 cents to $1.40 to $1.60 and Rochester, N. Y., had a similar drop, closing quotations being from $1.85 to $1.90 per 100 pounds sacked, f. o. b.

Varietal Character in Garden Vegetables.

Address by Will W. Tracy, D. Sc., of the United States department of agriculture, delivered at the thirty-sixth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association, Chicago, June 15-20, 1918.

In discussing the most profitable methods of growing high-quality seed of garden vegetables, we wish to refer to some facts in regard to plant life which may be known to you all, but the importance of which, as influencing the varietal quality of seed, is not generally recognized. First, as to the comparative effect of differing local climatic and soil conditions on the character of the growth of different plants. An observing man interested in plants will notice distinct differences in the wild vegetation of prairie, upland, mucky, sandy or otherwise different soils in the same locality, where they would all be subjected to the same climatic conditions, and on which seed of the same wild plants would likely be sown by wind or birds in about equal proportion, but because of difference in the soil, moisture and exposure of the plots plants of some single species, which thrive the best in those particular conditions, have in some cases outgrown and driven out all the others. Such variation in adaptation to even slightly differing conditions is not limited to wild plants, but is often very strongly developed in garden varieties grown in different locations, or even in individual plants of the same variety grown side by side, and is often carried in the seeds so as to have a material influence over the character and economic value of the plants developed from them.

In the case of garden vegetables commonly propagated by seed, a horticultural variety is not made up as with apples, strawberries and potatoes of vegetative parts of the same individual, so that the plants have identical possibilities and limitations of development, but of a multitude of individuals which are believed to have more points of resemblance than difference, and so may be grouped together as a sort, though each plant may carry, in a more or less dormant condition, distinct characteristics which it transmits through its seeds and may be developed in succeeding generations. The seed grower endeavors to produce an unlimited number of plants, each carrying and transmitting through its seed, as nearly as possible, identical potentialities and limitations of development, and groups them together under a distinguishing name as a variety.

Differing climatic and soil conditions have a great influence over the development and transmitting of such variations. If we grow a plant of some well defined sort of garden vegetable where there is little chance of its seed being influenced through pollenization from any other plant, and plant its seed in isolated spots in California, Idaho and Florida, there often will be no observable difference the first year in the different lots of plants or in the appearance of the seed they produce, but if the lots of seed are the second season planted side by side in each location there often will be sufficient difference in their development to effect the value of the crop, and very generally the crop from the locally grown seed will be the best.

The results obtained in a great many such trials have convinced us that very generally, though in different degrees with different vegetables and in different places, local conditions do influence the development of varietal character, and with most vegetables and in most places it is possible to grow seed in the immediate vicinity which will give larger yields and better quality than can be secured from that grown elsewhere.

The art of seed growing, however, is by no means identical with that of profitably growing and marketing vegetables, and it is seldom that even the most successful market or home gardeners care to grow the seed they use. Experienced planters, however, very generally appreciate the importance of using the best seed obtainable, having learned, often through costly experience, that with many species seed from certain localities and of certain stocks will give them the most satisfactory returns, and they expect their seedsmen to furnish them, from year to year, under the same varietal name, seed of as nearly as possible identical character. In order to do this, the seedsmen must not only use from year to year seed grown from uniform stock seed, but that which was grown in as nearly as possible identical climatic and soil conditions.

We believe that there is often a great difference in the degree to which individual plants transmit any desirable quality, and that the best results will generally be obtained by line breeding from superlative individuals, but it has also been our experience that line-bred plants in a few generations generally fail in vigor and productiveness and that it will always be best to constantly renew our stocks through selected individuals from the general crop. We also think that bulk or certainty of yield should by no means be the only or even the most important factor in the location of a seed crop.

Many experiences have convinced us that seed stocks from certain locations, like Hartford county, Conn.; Jefferson county and eastern Long Island, in New York; Port Hope, Ont., and La Conner, Wash., did not become noted through accident or because of exceptional ability on the part of local growers, but rather because the local climatic and soil conditions were more favorable for the development of certain qualities, and that superior stocks can still be grown in those sections, though possibly not in such abundance or at so low prices as in the past, and that it is wise for the seedsmen to secure his stock seed at least from locations which experience has shown to be favorable for the growth of the best varietal form. We also believe that, while it may be commercial wisdom for the seedsmen to get the stock he offers grown where it can be produced at the least cost and that it may not be wise for him to publish the location, yet a prospective purchaser making the inquiry is, we think, entitled to a truthful report, not only as to where the stock offered, but the seed used, was grown; and we believe that such a course would do much toward the throwing of the trade of the most intelligent growers to the most careful seedsmen.

Tomatoes.

To realize the trend of affairs, one must look back once in awhile and make comparisons. This occurred to us the other day, when looking over our market for tomatoes. Where only a few years ago, at this time of the season, Earliana was supreme, it was entirely absent this year. We venture to say that there was not one basket of Earliana on our wholesale market. The arrivals showed about equal quantities of Bonny Best and Beauty. We believe that the large production of greenhouse tomatoes in this territory has had more to do with ousting Earliana than any other factor. The public soon gets used to the beautiful greenhouse product, and absolutely refuses to buy the inferior Earliana at any price.

Earliana lacks vigor for staking, and on the ground the fruit does not finish up nice enough for keen competition. Thus the early outdoor growers have learned to stake Bonny Best in competion with the greenhouse crop. Prices so far have ruled high for all offerings, indoor and out, and growers are satisfied in spite of the high cost of production. We have had a serious shortage of rain in this section, (Ohio), hence those growers who can irrigate are reaping a harvest. It is remarkable that most growers of staked tomatoes have installed watering systems, realizing that perfect returns are impossible without water. Black rot or dry rot, as it is commonly called, is the dread malady of drouth stricken tomatoes. We have found, as have others, that a good heavy mulch of coarse manure is a great help in conserving moisture, with or without irrigation. As one grower expressed himself, "We like to mulch, as we can use our regular supply of manure to good advantage—it benefits the crop in many ways—and finally, that piece of land is manured for next season."

Remarkable is also the complete disappearance of the bushel basket or box as a tomato carrier. Most of the offerings are in 20 to 25-pound baskets, the only drawback to this system being the scarcity and high price of baskets. We must eventually insist upon the return of these packages under present difficulties.

Illinois First Great Apple Show.

The Illinois First Great Apple Show, to be held in connection with the sixty-third annual convention of the Illinois State Horticultural Society, at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, November 19-22, should prove of unusual interest as a new departure of educating the general public in the apple industry of the state, together with the use of apples in the conservation programme of the government and the necessity of apples as food.

The premium list, recently issued, copies of which may be had upon application to A. M. Augustine, executive secretary, Normal, Ill., includes much interesting information concerning the industry in general and the coming exhibition. Under the heading "Progressive Apple Growers of Illinois" are included a list of about 70 firms and individuals, with orchards varying from four to 1,800 acres, with the varieties grown in many cases.

The exhibition will be divided into sections for plates, trays, boxes, baskets, barrels and booth exhibits. The varieties open to entry in the various classes include the following: Akin, Arkansas Black, Banana, Ben Davis, Black Ben Davis, Black Twig, Delicious, Fameuse, Gano, Grimes, Huntsman, Jonathan, King David, Minkler, Maiden Blush, N. W. Greening, Rome Beauty, Salome, Stark, Wealthy, Willow, Wine-sap and York Imperial. The scales for judging are as follows:

Plates and trays—Uniformity, 20; color and finish, 30; condition, 20; freedom from blemish, 30.

Boxes and barrels—Uniformity, 15; color and finish, 20; condition, 15; freedom from blemish, 20; packing, 30. Packing boxes: Bulge, 10; tightness, 10; alignment, 10.

Baskets—Uniformity, 20; color and finish, 20; condition, 20; freedom from blemish, 20; packing, 20.

Booth exhibits—Artistic arrangement, 50; comprehensiveness, 20; quality of specimens, 30.

In all divisions there are represented nearly 200 classes, first and second prizes being offered in each, the amounts varying from $2 to $30, in addition to gold and silver medals. The officers of the show are W. A. Brayton, Mt. Morris, general chairman; A. M. Augustine, Normal, secretary, and J. W. Stanton, Richview, treasurer. Professor B. S. Pickett, University of Illinois, Urbana, is superintendent in charge of installation and exhibits.

Rose American Pillar.

This is a variety of much decorative merit, and one that can be utilized successfully for hiding an objectionable object, owing to its vigorous growth. It is not unusual to see sucker-like growths from the base that reach 12 feet during the current year. From such shoots as these huge panicles of bloom are obtained. Trained against a lattice-like fence with a southern aspect, the whole of the flowers show to the front, which enhances its appearance. The rosy pink blooms with a pure white eye are distinct from any other variety, and certainly attractive. The stock is easily increased by cuttings eight inches long, taken in September from half-ripened shoots that flowered during the current year. These, if dibbled into gritty soil, quickly take root, and by the following November twelvemonths will be suitable for putting where they are to flower. No rose that I know pays better than this for liberal treatment in manure, deeply dug soil and frequent doses of liquid manure during the growing season. In exhausted soil the annual growth is sparse, and the foliage assumes a pale tint instead of the dense green hue so noticeable in vigorous-growing plants; indeed, the contrast and background of foliage affords a splendid setting to the rosy pink blooms.—E. M. in London Garden.

Omaha, Neb.

NOTES.

Local florists are more and more learning to solicit business in channels where it was not looked for in the past. An example in point was that during last week the new Conant hotel, just built and opened here, was induced to buy a large quantity of flowers and send them to patients at all the hospitals in this city. Mrs. Mary H. Conant and her son, Harley, proprietors of the hotel, gave the flowers. More than 30 baskets of choicest stock were sent to the hospitals by the hotel. It was an advertisement, of course, but it must be admitted it was a good one. Some of the leaders in trade here say that if the florists would push their business to the front in such cases, they could readily work up new business and a demand for flowers.

The florists are going into the fall season with their greenhouses in good shape, and are gradually and steadily adjusting affairs for the coming of winter when some of the greenhouses will be closed down while others are operated to carry through a limited amount of the choicest stock.

Saturday, September 21, was Belgian baby day, and hundreds of Omaha women sold flowers on the streets.

A. E. L.

Harrisburg, Pa.

On North Third street, we have several flower stores, all of which do a fine business. Ruth Maeder, J. K. Longnecker and W. L. Keeney all report an excellent trade and by the looks of the new paint in this locality big things are anticipated during the coming season.

Charles L. Schmidt, 313 Market street, has returned from his plantation on the James river in Virginia and is making extensive alterations. His windows this week contain wonderfully fine vases of Golden Glow chrysanthemums.

Utley's The House of Flowers, 321 Walnut street, has been redecorated and many beautiful antiques have been added to the arrangement. The window this week is filled with the large aster, Penchblow.

The Bouquet Shop has an unusual window at this writing of blue and yellow. Blue pottery and Mexican marigolds are used in profusion. A new feature at this establishment is a pair of antique candlesticks with glass prisms.

The Berry Hill Flower Shop on Locust street is showing few flowers but is making a fine display of evergreens for fall planting and a collection of boxwood is attracting much attention.

Memorials for our boys (God bless them) who have hit the "Long, long trail," are being featured these days.

CLUB MEETING.

Members of the florists' club held their September meeting at the establishment of Fred A. Danker, 744 Central avenue, by invitation of Mr. Danker, who was formerly president of the club. The members decided to hold a flower exhibit at the November meeting; a schedule of exhibits will be ready at the October meeting. The arrangements will be in charge of F. A. Danker as chairman of the special committee. Under good-of-the-club, Thomas F. Tracey, manager of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, gave a short talk on his wedding trip. Mr. Tracey and his bride, who was Miss Margaret Wilson of this city, were married on September 14. On their honeymoon, the couple visited Buffalo, Rochester, and other cities in the western section of the state. Mr. Tracey reported on what he saw at Buffalo among the wholesale trade. The members decided to invest some of the funds of the club in the Fourth Liberty Loan and also to go into the loan quite heavily as individuals. Harry Benschel of Ballston Spa, proposed at the July meeting, was elected a member. Following the business session the members were entertained with refreshments and cigars by Mr. Danker.

NOTE.

The city officials have decided to replace the oriental plane trees on the Plaza and along some of the streets of the city with maples. This will be done next spring. The plane trees did not fare well here last winter. Some were killed by the cold, and others have been broken by the wind. The city has an extensive nursery on New Scotland avenue, from which the stock for re-planting will be taken.

Liberty—Here is a fern that is distinct, differing for every other Nephrolepis. The fronds are quite distinct, the cut of the foliage being an entirely different pattern from any other variety; very fascinating and beautiful. Have never seen a single frond revert. Best of all, its foliage is a decided blue cast not seen in any other fern, giving you something new; strong grower; ranks with Boston and Roosevelt. We are the introducers of Roosevelt, Splendida and Teddy Junior, all popular sorts, but in Liberty we have the best of all; will be disseminated in 1919.

DEMAND ON PAR WITH PREVIOUS YEARS.

The retailers have no complaint about business, and it seems to be quite as good as at the corresponding season of previous years. They are handling a good quality of chrysanthemums, largely from the local growers. Here as elsewhere, the draft is calling quite a number of young men from the trade.

NOTES.

James J. Plunkett, of Connelly & Plunkett, Inc., has been called to the colors and is now at Camp Green, North Carolina. Manager Hoffman has installed a handsome service flag of his own design in their show window, made of immortelles, a blue star on a white field with a red border, and it is an attractive feature.

During the summer months, Phillips Brothers thoroughly renovated and re-decorated their store. It is now well stocked with seasonable cut flowers and presents a handsome appearance.

Dennis A. Murphy, of McLaughlin & Murphy, 181 Clinton avenue, is now secretary of the Essex County Florists' Club. The business of this firm seems prosperous.

The S. A. Rogers Co., 457 Broad street, have given up the cut flower business and now deal exclusively in seeds and nursery stock.

August Begerow has been making improvements in his store, and we also found him busy with funeral work.

Charles Luthy has a good store at 363 Springfield avenue and is a constant buyer in the New York market.

The Rosery Floral Co. keeps a fine stock of cut flowers and plants and is having good business.

W. R. James, Clinton and Elizabeth avenues, has a good store and finds business improving.

A. F. F.

Irrington, N. J.

Persson Brothers have a great stock of the leading chrysanthemums coming on and are cutting early varieties. We found them busy planting a large area in pansies. Edwin Persson is in the last draft, but hopes to be able to finish the chrysanthemum season before being called.

R. Plebany & Son have a fine stock of chrysanthemums coming on and their winter sweet peas are making good growth. They have secured some coal, and hope to get their 50 per cent.

Edward Jacobi, Jr., formerly the popular secretary of the Essex County Florists' Club, is now in the American army, in France. He is greatly missed by the home folks.

At the range of E. W. Fengar, the usual large stock of chrysanthemums were noted.

A. F. F.

NEWARK, N. J.—The regular meeting of the Essex County Florists' Club will be held at Roever's hall, Elizabeth and Watson avenues, Thursday evening, October 10, at 8 p. m.

AMERICAN DAHLIA SOCIETY.

Annual Meeting and Exhibition, New York, Sept. 24-25.

Well Staged Exhibition of Fine Stock.

Owing to the short time available before going to press, many important features of the annual meeting and exhibition of the American Dahlia Society, held in conjunction with the American Institute of the City of New York, at the Engineering building in that city, were of necessity omitted from my brief report in last week's issue, page 476. The exhibition was well staged and showed much fine stock. In the American Institute section two displays by Judge J. T. Marean, Green's Farms, Conn. (John Harding, Gr.), 50 of one variety and 25 of another type, were awarded first prizes and were the best collections in the show. Among the most attractive blooms in these displays were the following: Spanish Beauty, Juno, Venus, Judge J. T. Marean, His Lordship, La Grosse Bete, Catherine Wilcox, Dakota, Corona, Pluto, Goldfinch, Lady Betty, John Harding and The Nigger. In the Institute section, N. Harold Cottam & Son, Wappinger's Falls, N. Y., took eight first prizes. Others who were represented in the blue ribbon classes included John M. Slocumb, New Haven, Conn.; C. Louis Alling, West Haven, Conn.; John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y.; George L. Stillman, Westely, R. I.; Mills & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y.; W. D. Hathaway, New Bedford, Mass., and I. W. Sailer, Richmond Hill, N. Y.

The silver medal offered by the Toronto Horticultural Society for the best seedling dahlia, any type, was awarded to John P. Rooney, 93 Bedford street, New Bedford, Mass., for the peony-flowered dahlia Mrs. Frederick Grinnell, seedling of 1911. At previous shows in different parts of the country it had been awarded one gold, two silver and two bronze medals and a number of first-class certificates.

Peter Henderson & Co.'s first prize for the best bowl or vase decoration of peony-flowering or decorative dahlias, with foliage, was awarded James H. Bowman, Paterson, N. J.

The stock intended for the show by R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., did not arrive until the second day. Notwithstanding the delay, it was in good condition, was placed on exhibition, and awarded a special prize. In this collection there was good stock of Futurity, King of Autumn, Paul Bonyan, Hampton Court and others.

The Charles H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J., was awarded special prizes by the American Institute for the new roses, Columbia and Premier.

Mills & Co., Mamaroneck, N. Y., were awarded a special prize for seedling dahlias of 1917 and first for a collection of gladioli.

Fred. Etter, Harrison, N. J., was awarded a special prize (American Institute) for a vase of the dahlia Rene Cayeux.

George L. Stillman was awarded an Institute first prize for 24 ball-shaped flowers. He also exhibited much other fine stock. We are in doubt whether to call his double-headed dahlia, Siamese Twins, a novelty, a curiosity, a freak of nature—or all three. Two flowers on one stem, joined at the back of the calyx, are at least novel.

The collection of 25 varieties staged by John W. Slocumb was noteworthy. Slocumb's Red is a fine production, and there were a number of promising seedlings.

No award was made on the American Dahlia Society's premium for "the best unnamed and tested seedling dahlia, which, "if deemed worthy and the winner willing to be called Dahlia J. Harrison Dick, in honor of our late secretary." There were a number of entries for this premium, but it is a reasonable conclusion that none was considered "worthy" by the judges. Among those who entered seedlings in competition for the name "J. Harrison Dick" were Mrs. Charles H. Stout, Short Hills, N. J.; Leonard & Weber, Trenton, N. J.; Mrs. E. G. Layng, Short Hills, N. J.; George Fedder, Hillsdale, N. J., and C. F. Cartledge, Locust Valley, N. Y.

Mrs. Payne Whitney, Manhasset, N. Y. (George Ferguson, Gr.), made a fine exhibit of caladiums, which added variety to the show and was awarded a special prize. She also took first for a collection of flowering annuals.

John Scheepers & Co., Inc., received a first prize for his everbearing raspberry, La France, grown on the T. A. Havemeyer estate, Glen Head, N. Y.

In addition to the numerous prizes for dahlias, N. Harold Cottam & Son, Wappinger's Falls, N. Y., took first for grapes and pears. Mrs. W. O. Masten, Pleasant Valley, N. Y., took first for apples.

The Business Meeting.

The annual meeting, which was held on the afternoon of the first day, was well attended. Excepting a successor to J. J. Lane on the executive committee, the present officers were all re-elected and it was voted to establish trial grounds at Storrs, Conn., the work of preparation to begin the first of the coming year. The by-laws were amended changing the beginning of the fiscal year to January 1 and life membership in the society was fixed at $20. An invitation was received to hold the next annual meeting and exhibition at Syracuse, N. Y. The address of President Vincent and the reports of Secretary Lewis and Treasurer Austin were well received and there was general enthusiasm throughout the session. In the evening the officers, judges and press representatives sat down to a bountiful dinner at the Hotel Navarre.

President Vincent's Address.

By the kind hand of Providence we meet here again in our annual session, and while the year has had its trials and strenuous ones, it is my pleasure as president to have the privilege of welcoming you here at this our fourth annual meeting. The secretary's report will show you of our continuous success and the interest being taken in the society, and a fairly good increase in membership. The treasurer reports our finances in good condition, so with your help and assistance, we may look forward to continuous prosperity.

This year has not been without its lessons, both in the cultivation of the old and new varieties, and also in the uses to which the dahlia can be put, and we want the slogan of our mother society, the Society of American Florists, kept up—"Say it with flowers," and "dahlia flowers whenever in season,"—as the dahlia has come to be regarded as a flower of quality when grown in its fullest perfection, and we know that it will always repay for all the care and attention that can possibly be given it.

The late Harrison Dick.—Much has been said and written regarding our loss in the death of our beloved secretary, J. Harrison Dick. He came into our society just at the time when an able hand was needed to steer our enterprise, although not strong physically, and burdened with other duties, he consented through friendship and love of the work to help and assist us, the American Dahlia Society, in our efforts to make good. The sympathy of our society and others has been expressed to his widow and child, and it is our earnest wish that they may never lack for friends. It has been suggested and sanctioned by our executive committee, and I sincerely hope it will be carried out, that the best new dahlia of 1915 origin, if agreeable to the introducer, when selected by the judges, be named after our late secretary, as an honorable recognition of his worth and work for horticulture, and my sincere hope is that it will be a good commercial variety that will perpetuate his name for many years to come.

R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.
Pres. American Dahlia Society.

Our Present Secretary.—Shortly after the death of Mr. Dick, the executive committee met in New York and several names were proposed for secretary. Our present one, Jasper R. Lewis, was selected and requested to finish Mr. Dick's unexpired term, which he agreed to do, compensation, etc., left until the annual meeting. Mr. Lewis has ably filled the position to the satisfaction of all concerned as the result shows, as he has handled successfully the many difficult and different matters left in his hands, and no matter who you may elect as your presiding officer for the coming year, I certainly would like to see Mr. Lewis retained, as I know he is trustworthy and competent to fill the position.

California and other Societies.—To our California members and friends, we owe a debt of gratitude that is hard to express as they have been of great assistance to us both in membership and co-operation. As we do not all live on the Pacific coast, but in other sections where conditions are not adapted to growing dahlias, we cannot help but envy our friends living in a climate that gives them such a wonderful growing season. Our earnest desire is that their society may continue to thrive and their splendid seedlings may always be worthy of the high praise they are receiving everywhere. The Toronto Society is surging along and every year shows increasing interest. Culture and observation will show the varieties best adapted to their northern climate. We wish them success and are willing to help them in any way possible, and we thank them for the silver and bronze medal their society offered us this season. To the various garden clubs and like organizations, we extend our deepest desire for their success and co-operation, and anything that the officers of our society can do either as judges or in any way for the promotion and love of the flower and growing of same, will be done. The New Haven and Boston horticultural societies had exhibits fully up to the standard of any former exhibits, and the vegetables shown at the same time made both exhibits useful and educational.

Flowers and their Mission.—A great deal has been said and written about flowers being non-essential and superfluous since our entry into the world's war. Most of these articles are by writers who have never understood the full mission of flowers to our homes or hospitals, where our loved ones are lying sick or wounded. Great Britain and other countries have advocated the growing and use of flowers for the above purposes, and we think the American flower lover and growers are advocating these flower shows at this time believing that with all the cruelty of war something is needed to brighten life and make it more like living, and many sore hearts are finding solace and quiet recreation in their gardens, more than they can in any other way. Let the cultivation of flowers go on, do your bit, read of them, plant them, grow them, show them, and get others interested in a like work. Something has also been said about using the land for flowers that might be used for food purposes. That might be true if land were scarce, but in this wonderful country of ours, there are yet millions of acres of land uncultivated, enough to spare to grow all the vegetables the entire world might need. Why, then, begrudge a small portion of the land or time for the flower garden?

American Institute.—We are greatly indebted to the American Institute, its officers and their worthy secretary, Mr. Eagleson, for their kindness and co-operation in every way possible towards making this exhibition the grand success it is this year and in the past years that we have exhibited under their auspices, and I believe that I express the sentiments of every member of the society when I say that in this period of our history we are more than thankful for their kind help, and our earnest wish is that they may never tire of well doing in having these wonderful shows which are undoubtedly beneficial to mankind. I am also indebted to our executive committee and others for their kind assistance throughout the past year.

Final.—I am proud to be your presiding officer again this year. Let us come together during this meeting to the material benefit of ourselves and all mankind, so that when we leave this wonderful city we may return home rejoicing in the knowledge gained, the friendships renewed and the new ones made, which will cement us in stronger bonds to the ends of our lives. Generosity of thought and action is an attitude of the florist, because we live close to nature, and no body of men and women anywhere stands more ready to extend a helping hand to a brother or sister in trouble. We become more broad minded as we mingle with the world, more united for progress and the general distribution of our discoveries in order that our fellow tradesmen may be benefited.

Let us strive to increase the life of flowers universally, not only for our own selfish or money making purposes, but for the elevation of mankind. Neither should we confine our efforts to our country but let us make use of them freely whenever we can extend our cult from country to country the world over, in the endeavor to bring about that peace and good will which will ultimately reign throughout the world and bring us into one brotherhood of communion and fellowship.

I thank you again for your attention and welcome.

Secretary Lewis' Report.

The report of your present secretary is only for the period from April 11, 1918, to the present date. Following the loss of the society's late secretary, J. Harrison Dick, a close personal friend of myself, the executive committee, at its meeting on April 11, appointed me secretary for the remainder of the year. I have been glad to bridge the gap, first in memory of my good friend, and secondly to help President Vincent, whom I have known for a number of years.

Owing to the sudden death of Mr. Dick, it has been quite difficult to take up the burden as efficiently as it might have been done under happier circumstances. Your present secretary has therefore done his best to keep up with the more important work of his office, and with this apology passes on to his formal report.

The various meetings of the executive committee have been duly reported in the bulletin of the society. Joseph J. Lane, a former secretary of the society, and a member of the executive committee, on account of entrance into military service last May, announced his retirement from office, and the committee at that time adopted a resolution to keep on the active list all members who entered the United States military service, remitting their dues for the period of the war.

Membership Contest.—The silver cup which was donated by Richard Appel of White Plains, N. Y., to be awarded to the member who secured the greatest number of new members, has been easily won by George L. Stillman, of Westery, R. I., who from April 1 to date has sent in the names of 16 new members, with many others before that date. Mr. Stillman showed much interest in the contest, and it is to be regretted that some of our other members did not set him a faster pace. Other members also secured additional applications, President Vincent having the next greatest number after Mr. Stillman.

The Bulletin.—An issue of the bulletin was published for March, but was considerably delayed in its appearance for the reason already given. The number of advertisements in that issue showed the amount of work Mr. Dick did on behalf of this society. In fact, the March edition was at least self-supporting. Another bulletin issued early in September, was not so satisfactory from the point of financial support. At the May meeting of the executive committee, it was voted to publish another bulletin in November, to contain a full report of this annual meeting and exhibition. I. S. Hendrickson suggested the advisability of issuing the bulletin every second month during 1919. This would give advertisers a definite arrangement and plan for their advertising, and would also permit the dissemination of more cultural information about our flower. As a national society, we should certainly publish all the news and educational matter obtainable that is of value to dahlia growers, but to make this possible greater support must be given the bulletin financially. Even if it has to be issued at a loss for each number, as the official organ of the society it should be continued, bettered and enlarged in scope. Your secretary considers the bulletin the strongest link between the members. Through it the society can render great service to present members, and continue to attract new ones. Its value cannot be emphasized too strongly.

Membership.—The present muster of the society is a little short of 300, but in addition to its numerical strength an encouraging feature is the fact that since your present secretary has had charge of the membership list, not one member has asked to be dropped, whereas each week brings new members into the fold. I would recommend that some membership campaign be undertaken for the ensuing year, with a competent committee in charge. Mrs. Charles H. Stout, of Short Hills, N. J., has again kindly offered to donate a silver cup for the 1919 exhibition, and on behalf of the society the secretary has accepted.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery.

GREAT GATHERING OF RETAILERS AT HAND.

As the time draws near for the third annual meeting of this wonderfully live and active organization of the retail florists of the country, at Cleveland, O., October 8-9, there is great preparation among the craft in that city, who will do their utmost to make the stay of the visitors profitable and pleasant. One of the features will be the store window decorations, illustrating and exploiting the purposes of the organization. These displays, as arranged during the convention week in Detroit last year, attracted great attention, both from the trade and general public, and were voted a great success. There will also be a number of new features, not the least of which should be the list of suggestions for the betterment of the service, the best of which is to receive a prize of $50. Under the able and energetic management of President W. F. Gude, who will bring down his gavel, opening proceedings at precisely 10 a. m., and the assistance of Secretary Pochelon, who will be sure to present some bright and novel ideas for the good of the organization, there will not be one dull moment during the two days' sessions.

It is astonishing how comparatively few of the men engaged in the retail business realize the great importance of being associated with such an organization as the Florists' Telegraph Delivery. The most progressive, active, up-to-date florists in all the large cities and towns of the country hold membership in this "help one another" association. There is nothing philanthropic about it, however. The basic idea is "help me deliver this order, and I will go you fifty-fifty on the profit." The florist's business is his livelihood, not just an occupation; the fruits of his labor should be coined into good, hard dollars, money necessary to keep the wheels of trade moving. The wide-awake florist lets no prospect escape; he is out for business all the time and transactions, however small, receive his best attention, as there is no telling what the tiny seed sown may grow into. The association was itself at one time and for quite a while after its organization,

Albert Pochelon, Detroit, Mich.
Secretary of Florists' Telegraph Delivery Ass'n.

just an idea, practical and altogether right from a business standpoint, but it received little encouragement from the trade in general. In the last five years it has, however, made rapid strides forward, the business of the past year being estimated to have been well over $2,000,000. By those in authority, active, strong, well balanced business men of the trade, the possibilities of the work of this organization as a means of opening up avenues of opportunity is considered incalculable. Each addition adds to its strength, and in many cases opens up new fields of usefulness, as well as helps to develop the old.

Those who desire to have new customers dropping in every day, and enlarge their territory so as to embrace the entire country, can do so by becoming members of this association of fellow florists. The cost is trifling, and a mere nothing as compared to the advantages. There are a number of instances where florists in small communities have had, at the time of the death of a prominent citizen, a large influx of very profitable business, which was made possible by their membership in this body. While there is great material advantage in the orders received from out-of-town correspondents, yet it is the trade worked up in one's own territory that promises the greatest results. Comparatively few of the now quite large membership appreciate the possibilities of the business that may be worked up in their own local fields. The association's emblem is seen in some show windows high up out of the way; in other stores it hangs on the wall in the show-room or office. Many do not display it at all; they belong to the association, fill what orders are sent them, send out those that come along from their own customers, generally in answer to whether it is possible to have such deliveries made. There is, of course, nothing up-to-date about this, but unfortunately such a lethargic condition exists. Men will go to sleep at the switch, and in spite of all the good work of their enthusiastic and inspiring secretary, do not fully wake up to the great advantages of their membership.

All stores should put before their customers and the general public at every opportunity the purposes of the association. Not five per cent of possible flower buyers know that within the hour they can have flowers delivered in any city or community of this great country. To be able to do this is for the trade a great accomplishment, something to be proud of. Therefore, each member of the organization should, by every possible means in his power, exploit and feature this idea. Striking window displays, which illustrate this service, will bring customers for out-of-town deliveries, who at the time had no use for flowers at home, but through the purchase become friends of the store and regular patrons.

Every piece of stationery should carry the imprint of the emblem and the notice of membership in the association. A leaflet, explaining the methods of the organization, its great scope, and the rapidity of its telegraph delivery service, should be sent to all customers at least once a year, and always on hand to give to all interested persons.

The convention can take up nothing better than the matter of this local publicity. With every member making an intelligent effort to exploit the purposes and explaining the telegraph delivery of orders in distant cities, according to approved plans, together with window cards and other stock literature to be furnished at cost to the members, a great message would be successfully put across.

More F. T. D.'ism.

Our meeting at Cleveland, O., October 8-9, ought to merit the largest attendance we have ever had, due to the war and conditions occasioned by the war. The shipping conditions, which are so unreliable, due to the congestion of rail traffic, must be met with, and how much may we be thankful to the F. T. D. and its organization in being able to transmit our orders from one to another with the fullest confidence of their being properly filled.

Nowadays, this means much, in having the confidence of 600 members, located all over the United States and Canada, and feeling that any order taken will be carried out to the fullest detail as though it were done in your shop. And all this, in a few short years, brought about in a most interesting manner by the leaders who have the foresight and a spirit of co-operation to help one another, and who met from time to time and learned to appreciate each other's efforts so that they gave the best that was in them not only to merit the business, but also the friendship.

It was at these conventions, where everyone present entered into the spirit of all for one and one for all, that brought the success of the F. T. D. to its proper level, and take it from me, boys, when you meet the bunch at Cleveland, you will meet the liveliest crowd connected with the flower-business. From the moment our President, William F. Gude, takes the gavel to open the meeting, up to the time our Secretary Pochelon says "meeting adjourned," will be found inspiration and instruction for still further co-operation.

Now, what has brought about the success of the F. T. D.? One of the most important things I know of is the service rendered by the members. By that I mean, that if one member transmits an order to another, there has never been a time that if the order did not go through right, but what the member who received the order, was ready to make good and send another, gratis, with the proper explanation, so that the good-will was held by all parties concerned—customer, sender and receiver of the order. This means much to those who are members to know that there is dependability, and should warrant the making of more members for our association.

This get-together spirit once a year by our members cements a friendship that is lasting, and is worth more than all else, for the price of fellowship is not purchasable, and only by personal contact can it be brought about. So that for a retailer, who can attend our F. T. D. gathering, there is a real treat in store, both from a friendship as well as instructive standpoint. So here's success to the F. T. D. meeting at Cleveland, where abound some of the livest wires in the business and from whom we can gather and learn how to "Say it With Flowers."

Yours for the Fourth Liberty Loan,
HENRY PENN.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

There should be an increased effort to make the store as attractive as possible. Add to what has been done before by some distinguishing feature. A handsome plant basket, made up of stock that will be none the worse for a few days' crowding, or one of choice ferns and vases or moss, in which can be placed a quantity of the Tritoma Pfitzeri. This is one of the most showy of all the outside fall flowers and sure to attract attention. Instead of growing ferns, autumn leaves may be used with good effect. The idea is to make this a show piece, something to attract attention, and make an impression that would not be possible with the commonplace, ordinary stock.

A vase of 25 Columbia roses, (be sure they are specials), featured as a new rose, will prove a drawing card. A nicely printed notice costs but a trifle, but will add 100 per cent to the effectiveness of the display.

There are still splendid dahlias, which, if well handled, are good stock to carry. A vase of flowers of striking form and colors, arranged expressly to draw attention, will help in the sale of standard sorts.

The Fourth Liberty Loan is now in full swing. It is both patriotic and good policy to take an active part in this movement. Florist clubs all over the country are working hard within their organizations to make a good showing. A liberal use of the posters, together with Old Glory and the flags of the allies, should be prominent features of the store and window decoration.

An important matter is that of securing better prices on all classes of goods. Some, in fact, far too many, judge others by themselves. They feel they would not like to pay more than a certain sum for this or that, and so fear to ask it of their customers. This is poor business policy. The way to get a good price is to ask it. People are not going to voluntarily offer $1.25 for an article they can get for $1.00. There is not a line of goods anywhere, except possibly, garden truck or flowers, when overstocked, that has not greatly increased in price. The changes upward in all lines are so universal that people expect to pay more and seem to accept the advance as a matter of course.

All made up work should, and can easily, have from one-quarter to one-third added to the price. The figure must be stated in a confident matter-of-course tone of voice that leaves no opening or suggests that it is a feeler, or is subject to discount.

Keep the window up to its highest standard. Advertisers are very solicitous as to their position in the paper. They want select locations next to reading matter, so that their message will be noticed, and perhaps read by those not looking for it. Just so it is with the window; it must be made so attractive that the indifferent pedestrian is prompted to stop and take a look, and you get your story to him. An artistic display in the window reflects the genius of the store, which should always be in keeping with the class of trade or clientele that is desired.

Economy.

The old adage, "A penny saved is a penny earned," should be amended for use in the flower business to read, "A penny saved is three pennies earned," as the turnover is at least 83 before a gross gain of $1 is secured. In these troubled days, when the carrying on of business is just one trying situation after another, economic management should be the keynote in every department from that of buying to the final delivery.

Plan to save, for to do it effectively there must be a system. In the first place, there should be close buying. Staple articles handled by a number of houses, such as paper, twine, boxes, stationery, tags, etc., should be bought in quantities that will be sufficient for the season. Such purchases insure lowest prices with a further reduction for payment of bill on presentation. In no way can money be made to return a greater interest than in discounts received for cash payments. In addition to lower prices on quantity purchases, there is the advantage of having the stock on hand; many sales are missed when customers will not leave orders because they cannot see the goods desired. If the sale is made, then there is the added expense of telephone, time and car fare in securing the articles, and probably additional cost in last minute delivery. This breach of economy, costs, telephone five cents, boy's time at least ten cents, car fare ten cents, which equals 25 cents, the equivalent of 75 cents in sales.

Each store should carry a line of delivery boxes, muslin lined, corrugated straw board with waterproof coating—a little more expensive in first cost, but a great saving in the end. The quantity of new cut flower and design boxes that are in their first service, destroyed or rendered unfit for first-class use, is an important item of expense in many stores.

There is great economy in planning out the business of the next day. The delivery of the stock required in plants and cut flowers, may be secured by telephoning the grower the day before, which if neglected, would likely entail the necessity of a special messenger from the store. Probably the greatest saving is effected in the careful handling of cut flowers; roses, carnations and other flowers that are roughly used in placing in or out of jars or vases snap off at the slightest touch, when away goes 5, 10 or 15 cents. Something may be gained by putting these away to be wired up for design work, but there is still much loss.

A great saving may be effected in counting out all stock necessary for designs or baskets before the work proceeds; to keep on adding flowers until the piece is thought to be good enough, while the practice in many stores, is a very poor business method.

To take an account of all flowers that go to waste each day, should be in the hands of one who will attend to it. The record of loss here will make for economy, keep the buyer on his mettle, and insure the best possible care of the stock.

It is the little things that count; just a nickel a day amounts to over $15 a year. Sit down now and figure out how many nickels might have been saved in the course of yesterday's business. It will surprise you.

THE ROSE.

Canker Control.

Rose canker, most easily recognized by brown dead areas in the bark of the stems, is a serious disease of greenhouse roses which was first described in 1917, although it has probably been long prevalent in America, but has escaped notice largely on account of its obscure symptoms and consequent difficulty of diagnosis, according to Bulletin No. 183 of the Massachusetts agricultural experiment station, Amherst, which records results of investigations of the disease and describes successful methods for its control.

Two types of cankers occur on the stem and branches higher up. The larger ones start from wounds, especially the stubs which are left after the blossoms are cut. Cankers from these stubs run back down the stems. The disease may stop at the first live branch below, but very commonly it continues to progress downward, and each successive branch dies as it is encircled. Cankers may also start from other wounds besides cut stubs. They are usually oval in outline and may be several inches long. The second type of aerial canker does not originate with wounds, but starts directly in the healthy green bark. First, small round purple areas appear, sometimes singly, but more often in groups. As these increase in size the centers become light brown and the margins remain dark, giving a "bird's-eye" effect. When they occur in groups they coalesce and form large irregular dead areas in which, however, the individual cankers may still be distinguished for some time.

The depth of the canker varies, depending on such factors as the age of the part attacked, size of the infection court, environmental conditions and probably others. This is particularly a disease of the bark, and commonly the discolored area will be located outside the cambium entirely. But in more severe cases it may extend to, or entirely through, the pith. If the shoot is young and has not yet hardened, the canker goes deeper and the entire shoot dies. This is frequently evidenced in the sudden wilting and dying of shoots which have grown up rapidly from below the surface of the ground. Older shoots are rarely killed outright.

Only occasionally have we seen entire plants killed by this disease. One, several or all of the shoots of a plant may be attacked. Dead "brush" and dead small shoots are usually much in evidence in affected houses. The seriousness of the disease, however, lies not in the number of plants killed but in the fact that affected plants are small and weaker, resulting in diminished yields of inferior roses. The diseased plants cannot be forced, no matter how much fertilizer is applied and how well they are cultivated. New shoots do not grow from beneath the surface of the soil, but all come from the tops. These latter symptoms are the ones which the florist usually notices first, and, in fact, may be the only ones he notices.

Diagnosis of this disease is rendered difficult by two natural developments in the life of the rose plant which may easily be confused with disease: (1) Many varieties of roses naturally turn black at the crown very early; this, however, is a superficial blackening and rarely runs up much above the surface of the ground. (2) The bark of all rose stems cracks with age, especially at the base, just as the bark of trees does.

These two developments often resemble canker so closely that even one experienced in diagnosis may be misled.

CONTROL MEASURES.

In the light of all that we know about rose canker and its causal pathogene, the following measures are recommended for its control:

1. Carefully inspect the rose house to see if canker is present. If not, employ every means to prevent its entering—import as few roses as possible from other houses; examine carefully every plant brought in; reject any with suspicious dead areas in the bark.
2. If it is present on the roses it cannot be eradicated from the infected plants. The only hope lies in starting new plants from clean cuttings, in clean soil, and guarding against infection at every step in the plants' development.
3. Dip the cuttings in Bordeaux mixture.
4. Sterilize the pots by dipping for 10 minutes in boiling water.
5. Sterilize the potting soil and cutting bench soil by steaming to a temperature of over 50° C. for 10 minutes or more. Suspected manure should be treated in the same way.
6. Use raised benches, not ground beds.
7. Remove old soil if diseased roses have been grown in it, and soak the benches thoroughly with (1) formaldehyde at the rate of one pint to 25 gallons of water or (2) boiling water.

Rose Pruning.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you kindly tell me the proper way to prune roses to prevent blind wood? We have been told that the cut must be made above a perfect leaf and also that this is not necessary.

Colorado.

F. E. S.

Replying to "F. E. S." regarding the pruning of roses to avoid blind wood. We will say that the usual way to prune the indoor roses is to leave from one to three eyes of the current year's growth on the plants, and to thin out all the very small, twiggy wood, leaving only the several of the strongest growths. It sometimes happens that a plant will make only one strong cane; in this case, we usually leave sufficient wood at the top of the cane where it has branched, instead of pruning the cane like a walking stick. However, one will often have to contend with more or less blind wood, no matter how intelligently the pruning is done, as the variety grown has much to do with the blind wood that follows pruning. Hadley being of the varieties that throw many blind growths. Again, by the constant propagating of blind wood as cuttings from year to year, the stock of any variety will run to blind wood almost entirely. So it is readily seen that pruning has really very little to do with the plant producing this blind wood. Very often the strong, blind growths can be pruned back to two or three eyes. The following growths will often set buds.

FLORISTS' PALMS.

Fall Culture of Palms.

The month of October brings with it the necessity for artificial heat in the palm houses in all the northern portion of the country, the date for starting the fires, of course, depending on the condition of the weather. It is poor economy to postpone firing in the hope that the cool wave will pass over, for while that may occur, yet in the meanwhile the stock may have had a check from which it will suffer for months to come. When it is found necessary to shut down the houses in order to maintain a temperature of 55° it is much better to make a fire and give air enough to keep a night temperature of 60° with a slight heat in the pipes. This will provide a growing atmosphere, and the foliage will dry off better after syringing and will not be found hanging with condensed moisture in the morning. A temperature of 60°, with a fresh and buoyant atmosphere, will keep the stock in a growing condition, and with the kentias in particular will help greatly, for these plants are now making their best growth. Seedling stock, both of arecas and kentias, and also of Cocos Weddelliana, may well be kept a few degrees warmer, for the young plants are more tender in root than the larger and better-established specimens of the same genus.

From this time forward the watering and syringing should be finished before noon if possible, unless the weather is unusually warm, though this is not intended to indicate that plants that are found dry in the afternoon should wait until the following morning for water, for the only safe rule to follow in regard to watering is that of giving palms a good drink when they are dry, whether that be in the morning or afternoon. Shading becomes less needed as the sun loses its power, and should be allowed to thin down somewhat now, for although the trade demands richly colored foliage, it also requires foliage of good texture that will endure handling.

To those retailing palms it may be worth repeating that to be satisfactory in the dwelling a palm should be well rooted, or in other words, a potted plant will wear much better than a newly-potted one, provided that it is given water enough, and it will therefore pay the retailer to offer stock of this character rather than the less satisfactory plant that is not well established.

In species the present season does not show any special novelties among commercial palms, the kentias, both Forsteriana and Belmoreana, being as usual in the lead, the first named having been more called for of late years among those who want a quick-growing palm that combines both beauty and usefulness, while the buyer who wishes a hardy palm of the most graceful character and comparatively dwarf habit finds Kentia Belmoreana the most appealing palm on the market.

Areca lutescens seems to be regaining some of its former favor, and has found a better demand this season. This does not seem strange when taking into consideration the fact that a well-grown areca is one of the most graceful palms in the trade today, and in all probability the temporary loss of favor suffered by this species was more due to faulty growing than to inherent weaknesses in the plant. Some years back it was discovered that areas could be very rapidly grown by means of strong heat, abundant moisture, and the free use of strong fertilizers, but this knowledge was in some instances much overworked, with the result that lots of thin-leaved and weak constituted stock were thrown on the market, and naturally proved highly unsatisfactory to the purchasers, and caused a quite natural reaction against this plant as a commercial species.

There is a great difference between plants that are grown by such methods and those that have been given more rational treatment in light and airy houses, and this difference is becoming more recognized in an increased demand for good areas. But palm growing is a rather deliberate operation in the minds of many, for many moons elapse between the seedling and the salable specimen.

The canary palm, Phoenix Canariensis, is still imported in considerable quantities for the benefit of those who do much decorating in public places, but prickly palms are not much in demand for use in the dwelling, and in this particular many of the phoenix are serious offenders. Scaevolaria, ptychospermas, chamaedoreas, caryotas, and geonomas are rarely seen in the retailer's stock, for they do not wear like the kentias, and with the exception of Cocos Weddeliana the cocoas family is almost unrepresented. On the whole we use but a very small percentage of the 1,200 or more species of palms that are known to the botanists.

Work or Fight Classification.

Elimination of men from employment in non-essential industries by characterizing them as "slackers," according to the New York Times, and the consequent addition of nearly half a million men to labor forces available for war work is planned by the United States employment service. Community labor boards throughout the country were notified September 23, by N. A. Smythe, director of the service, to prepare and have published lists of industries in which women could be substituted for men. The boards were urged to hold up to public shame any man who continued in work not essential to the prosecution of the war.

The industries in which women can take the places of men are expected to follow the general lines laid down recently by the war labor policies board and include such work as accounting and cashier service and salesmanship. The local boards will be guided largely, it was said, by conditions in their own communities in issuing the lists of industries in which the work should be done by women. To the local boards also will be left the method of dealing with men who remain in the industries classed as non-essential, but it was said the "work-or-fight" order would be resorted to for all men within the draft age limits, while for others community sentiment would be relied upon.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—A. Bartholme, among other florists in this vicinity, is experiencing great difficulty in the fuel situation. With his order placed in April, promises of delivery are all the satisfaction he receives, and ability to secure any part of the supply looks doubtful.

THE S. A. F.

President Totty's Liberty Loan Message.

Fellow Florists:

Have you contributed to the Fourth Liberty Loan? If not, why not?

Give thanks to your Creator,—

That you have the privilege of contributing to such a marvelous emancipation of humanity.

That you are permitted to back up our glorious army at the front, the boys who stop at nothing—and always get what they go after!

Never mind where we came from; it's what we are that counts. Now is our chance to show the world that we are Lieut. Chas. T. Johnson.

Son of C. W. Johnson, Chicago.

100 per cent Americans and 120 per cent patriotic—ready with the last dollar we have to stand by the Flag.

What does it matter if our coal has to be curtailed if the government has to use it for some other purpose more vitally necessary for the moment? What matters it if many of our best employes have had to leave us for service "Over There," and we have nothing left but girls and the men over draft age to do our work? Look at the wonderful age we are living in.

We always knew what America was, and what it stood for. Now the whole world knows and looks on in delighted wonder. The name "America" will be one to conjure with in years to come, standing for nothing but "Equal Rights for All," and fighting for nothing but a "Glorious Principle."

Some of us, with our noses to the grindstone, cannot look out on God's glorious sunshine and use the broader aspects of life and read the epoch-making era through which we are passing.

Our business will not suffer in the long run. The rebound from death and desolation will be quick and lasting, and we shall make more money in the future in the business of plants and flowers than we ever dreamed of before. Faith and vision are all we need. Let the weeding drop out if he wants to. The florists are not whiners. They are real men, and the way they are working for our Fourth Liberty Loan will prove it.

Let us do our utmost to help administer the "final punch" to militarism, so we can once more settle down to our normal vocations.

In conclusion, the following from the Literary Digest covers the situation far more than any feeble words of mine can do:

"Americans! Here in your God-given land of liberty, far from the furious battles and the countless hospital-beds of France, what flame leaps to your eyes when you say 'My Country, 'Tis of Thee'? Have the words filled your soul with a passion of love and holy zeal which makes service of country the greatest thing of life, the only thing worth while, these days? Are you ready and eager to enroll in the army of 25,000,000 men and women now summoned to carry the Fourth Liberty Loan to Victory?"

CHARLES H. TOTT, Pres.

National Publicity for Flowers.

One of our Cincinnati friends sent us a clipping from a newspaper in that city covering the following item: "We don't need flowers to win the war," said officials of local draft board, No. 3, in refusing to grant exemption to Richard G. Kootz, manager of a floral business. "We cannot fire flowers at the Germans and win the war, although they may be they would prefer flowers to bullets," said Chairman Zimmerman. "We can leave the floral business to our crippled heroes when they return and to women."

In contrast is the following clipped from the report of an address by Miss Maude Wetmore, national chairman of the National League for Woman's Service, at an enthusiastic campaign meeting held at the Hotel Biltmore, New York, September 18. "We have had a wonderful opportunity lately. It was given us by the florists of the country, 30,000 strong. They gave us the opportunity to be their spokesmen at the bedsides of the sick soldiers. They asked us to give to them the message which they were sending, and they asked our women to be the ones to transmit that word of sympathy which is so wonderfully expressed and represented by a flower. All over the country today the florists of this country are giving free of expense thousands of flowers to the sick soldiers as they are returning home. To me it is a very wonderful and very beautiful thought, and I am sure that it is one of interest to all of you today."

And this, by Lt. Col. E. G. Northington, commandant of the reconstruction hospital, Fort Douglas, Utah, referring to a generous donation of flowers made to the post hospital by the Miller Floral Co., of Farmington: "There is nothing so cheerful, so brightening in their influence upon sick people, as flowers, and the offer of the Farmington growers, to supply flowers for the soldiers who may be confined to beds and wards of the post hospital, is deeply appreciated by Colonel Northington and all members of his staffs of doctors and nurses, as well as by every patient."

Few among our florists have any idea of the many stupid and ill-considered statements our promotion bureau is called to challenge and upset, or the thought of what might be were we obliged to do without our organized publicity service in these times would be more general. The public is ready to admit that there is better use for our flowers right here at home than to fire them at the enemy—and the more the public sees of our slogan "Say It With Flowers" and reads of the work the florists are doing, the less willing will it be to believe that flowers can be really considered non-essential.

Let not anyone think that our publicity work begins and ends with our magazine advertising. Our bureau is called upon to organize and make effective much outside assistance which can only be obtained through ourselves being organized.

Are you, Mr. Reader, yet a part of our organization? Have you subscribed to our publicity campaign fund? If you have not, why not? Is there any part of our work which has not been explained to your satisfaction? The object of our weekly articles so kindly published for us, and for you, by our trade papers is to let you know what we are doing, and we are urgently requesting every florist who has not already subscribed to come forward with his "bit," now, the time when we most surely need it, if we are to carry out the plans and extend our usefulness. We are still short of the required amount of money to complete our 1918 programme, but with just a little effort on the part of those our work is to benefit, we can go ahead under full sail. Do not be half-hearted, do not be thought a non-essential.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Credits and Collections Committee.

President Charles H. Totty has appointed the following committee on credits and collections:

Robert C. Kerr, Houston, Tex., chairman and southern retail representative.
Frederick Lautenschlager, Chicago, secretary.

C. L. Washburn, Chicago, western commission representative.

Frank X. Stuppy, St. Joseph, Mo., western growers' representative.

S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia, Pa., eastern representative.

Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich., western retail representative.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

EXAMINING COMMITTEES.

President Wm. W. Vert announces the committees to examine new chrysanthemums for the ensuing year as follows:

Boston, Mass.—William Nicholson (chairman), James Wheeler, Alex. Montgomery, Ship flowers to chairman, care of W. J. Thurston manager, Easton Flower Exchange, 1 Winthrop square and Otis street, Boston.

New York—Eugene Dailledouze (chairman), Wm. H. Duckham, A. H. Herrington, Ship flowers to New York Cut Flower Co., 55 Twenty-second street, New York, care of chairman.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A. B. Cartledge (chairman), John Westcott, S. S. Pennock, Ship flowers to A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Cincinnati, O.—R. Witterstaetter (chairman), James Allen, J. C. Murphy, Ship flowers to chairman, Jabez Elliot Flower Market, care of janitor.

Chicago—N. J. Wietor (chairman), E. A. Kanst, Thomas W. Head, Ship flowers to chairman, 162 North Wabash avenue, Chicago.

Shipments should be made to arrive by 2 p. m. on examination days to receive attention from the committee. Must be prepaid to destination and an entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week they are to be examined, or it may accompany the blooms.

Seedlings and sports are both eligible to be shown before these committees, provided the raiser has given them two years' trial to determine their true character. Special attention is called to the rule that sports to receive a certificate must pass at least three of the five committees.

The committees will be in session to examine such exhibits as may be submitted on each Saturday during October and November, the dates of which will be October 5, 12, 19, 26 and November 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30.

Washington Rulings and Regulations.

PAPER RESTRICTIONS.

Orders for the conservation of paper, affecting every florist in the country, have been issued by Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the war industries board. Economy in the use of paper has been the subject of consideration with the board for some time, but it has been necessary to hasten the issuance of regulations because of the realization that the government would soon be obliged to divert to the munitions manufacturers, a large quantity of chemical pulp formerly used in making tissue and wrapping papers. Florists are requested to limit their use of tissue paper as much as possible, eliminating its use, where possible, as packing in boxes. They are also requested to reduce their use of boxes as much as can be done without injury to the trade, using as light a weight box as possible. All retail stores have been directed to discontinue the unnecessary wrapping of merchandise, thus reducing their consumption of paper, as well as to economize in their use of office stationery and other paper. Instructions have been sent out directing them to use no more paper than necessary in wrapping merchandise; to use as light a paper as is serviceable, and to re-use paper taken from parcels received. Florists are also requested to use lighter weight office stationery and smaller size envelopes; to write on both sides of the paper for long letters; to use half and three-quarter sheets of paper for short letters; to use the backs of letters received for carbons of replies, and to make use of spoiled sheets and the backs of envelopes for scratch pads.

ELECTRIC SIGNS NOT EXEMPT.

Florists and others throughout the country who desire aid in the fourth loan drive by converting their electric signs to advertisements for Liberty bonds must not violate the lightless retail regulations, according to an announcement just made by the United States fuel administrator. While Dr. Garfield declares his appreciation of the spirit that prompts the tender of such assistance, and is well aware of the good work that can be done by such advertisements, backed by the names of the strongest merchants in each community, the coal situation, he asserts, is so serious that not even to further the sale of bonds, can the lightless night order be lifted. The Fuel Administration has received a number of requests from the owners of large electric signs that they be permitted to use them nightly for the purpose of advertising the fourth loan issue. In response, Dr. Garfield has ruled that not even to further the success of a government activity can the government suspend the order, pointing out that, if such exceptions were made, government activities now cover such a wide range that very shortly the exceptions would be so numerous as to defeat the purpose of the order.

Illinois Centennial Celebration.

Plans recently completed by the executive committee directing Chicago's part in the state centennial celebration show a week crowded to the limit with patriotic activities, all centering around the historical pageant, which will be staged at the Auditorium during the centennial week, October 7-12, and witnessed free of charge on three evenings and one afternoon. The pageant consists of 12 dramatic scenes depicting the history of Illinois, with picturesque dances and settings, and a chorus of 300 voices to assist. The scenes range from ancient Indian mythology to the warlike settings of modern times, and the climax is a stirring appeal to the patriotism of the state.

The week's programme opens with a dress rehearsal of the pageant at the Auditorium on Monday evening. On Tuesday evening there will be a patriotic rally at which Prof. Thomas G. Masaryk, the Czecho-Slovak leader, will speak and a naval band will play. Every day at noon there will be patriotic meetings held at the theater under the auspices of the centennial and Liberty Loan committees, and a list of prominent speakers for these is in preparation. One of the noonday meetings, for which the date has not been set, will be under the auspices of the Roman Legion of America, and a parade which has been arranged for Saturday afternoon, October 12, is also under the direction of the Roman Legion. The nights set for the pageant are Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and Saturday afternoon will probably be devoted to a matinee for school children. Contributions of $50 to the pageant fund entitle the owner to a box in the Auditorium theater for one performance, which will be awarded by the drawing of lots.

Centennial fifty-cent pieces have been struck off and will be sold at the theater as well as at all the banks, department stores and hotels.

University Training Corps Inductions.

An important official notice of a new ruling of the war department, just received by the University of Illinois, where a unit of the students' army training corps is to be installed, sets aside some conditions of registration as previously announced by the university.

The committee on education and special training of the war department, in charge of the students' army training corps, has ruled, under date of September 27, 1918, that "no Class One men, physically qualified for general military service, who registered prior to September 12, 1918, may be inducted. Other registrants prior to September 12 may be inducted by application to committee."

The Late Mrs. S. S. Skidelsky.

It is with deep regret that we hear of the death of Mrs. S. S. Skidelsky, wife of S. S. Skidelsky, the well-known plantsman of Philadelphia, Pa., who passed away September 25 from pneumonia, following an illness of but six days. The deceased, a most estimable woman, was married to Mr. Skidelsky eight years ago, and a host of friends, both in and out of the trade, will sympathize with him in his deep bereavement.

Fourth Liberty Loan.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S MESSAGE.

Again the Government comes to the people of the country with the request that they lend their money, and lend it upon a more liberal scale than ever before, in order that the great war for the rights of America and the liberation of the world may be prosecuted with ever increasing vigor to a victorious conclusion. And it makes the appeal with the greatest confidence because it knows that every day it is becoming clearer and clearer to thinking men throughout the nation that the winning of the war is an essential investment. The money that is held back now will be of little use or value if the war is not won and the selfish masters of Germany are permitted to dictate what America may and may not do. Men in America, besides, have from the first until now dedicated both their lives and their fortunes to the vindication and maintenance of the great principles and objects for which our Government was set up. They will not fail now to show the world for what their wealth was intended.

President "Says It With Flowers."

A large bouquet of flowers on a stand in the center of the main ward of the army debarkation hospital at Ellis Island, New York, September 29, had a card attached with the following: "The President and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson." Before returning to Washington from a recent visit to the metropolis, the President inquired about the 700 men in the hospital and sent the flowers conveying his regards and best wishes for the speedy recovery of the patients. At about the same time, a member of a local draft board in Cincinnati "started" the daily press of that city with the statement that "as flowers could not be used as bullets, they were non-essential. The thoughtful example of the chief executive of the nation in using them to bring cheer to the soldier sick, seems to fully cover the situation, however.

Christmas Shopping Restrictions.

According to Commerce Reports, at a recent conference at which retail interests were represented, it was stated the average forces employed during the year would not be increased during the Christmas season nor store hours lengthened. They also agreed to urge the purchase, except for young children, of useful articles, to spread the period of buying for holiday presents over three months, and to restrict deliveries and induce customers to carry packages wherever possible.

The Society of American Florists, it appears, was not represented at this meeting, and the problem of filling Christmas orders for cut flowers and plants in their limited period of sale, on the same basis as the purchase of umbrellas, suspenders and handkerchiefs, necessarily involves different planning.

Baskets to Canada Under Embargo.

According to a communication from the Dominion Comptroller at Ottawa, Ont., the efforts of the Toronto Retail Florists' Club to import baskets en bloc from the United States have been unsuccessful, as shown by the following ruling:

"Regarding the importation of baskets from the United States, I beg to advise that baskets are the only commodity mentioned in the list of restricted imports from that country, and as the object of such restriction is to decrease as far as possible the importation of anything that may be regarded as non-essential during war-time, it has become necessary for many firms to adjust their business to comply with the requirement. The War Trade Board is not in a position to approve of the importation of baskets for florists' use."

Steps are being taken by Toronto florists to have their baskets manufactured there, and while they may not be as nicely finished as the imported article, they will no doubt fill the bill.

NO GREAT CHANGE IN THE MARKET.

There is no great change in the market since last week, consequently stock of all kinds is exceedingly scarce and it is almost impossible to fill all orders in full. American Beauty roses are in fair supply and clean up early at high prices. Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia find ready buyers, and there is never a surplus at night. Ophelia, Sunburst, Champ Weiland, My Maryland, Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Double White Killarney, Hoosier Beauty, Milady, Hadley, Mrs. George Shawyer, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mrs. Moorefield Storey, Montrose and other varieties grown for this market are in exceedingly good demand and command very satisfactory figures. Carnations are selling fast at surprisingly good prices considering the quality of the stock offered, but are scarce and are not much of a factor in the market. Asters are none too plentiful, and the gladioli season is about done. Chrysanthemums are gradually becoming more plentiful, but so far have cleaned up steadily at high prices and no one should have any reason to complain of his returns. Lilies never were so scarce at this season of the year as right now, and the demand probably never was so good. Orchids are a trifle more plentiful, but are holding their own, which is also true of lily of the valley, bringing all of $3 per 100 for the fancy grade. Violets, daisies, snapdragons, sweet peas and a long list of outdoor stock included in the offerings come in handy during the extreme scarcity of indoor stock. The demand for funeral flowers was remarkably brisk the past week, both as far as the local and out-of-town demand is concerned, due probably to the result of the wave of Spanish influenza that is rapidly spreading over the country and has had such telling effect in this vicinity. Green goods are in demand and play an important part in the funeral work this week, consequently some items at times are scarce. Ferns are good property and will be high in price this season and in somewhat short supply compared to a year ago.

NOTES.

Dr. Charles Whalen, former city health commissioner, startled 100 physicians of the North Shore Medical Society Tuesday night, October 1, when he declared that before Christmas the influenza epidemic will claim fully 15,000 victims. He estimated 60 to 70 per cent of the population of this city will be afflicted. Dr. Whalen warned the physicians to take the utmost precautions with all cases. "It will take the most painstaking efforts and the concentrated power of the local physicians to save the city from a catastrophe," he said. "I feel confident that the medical fraternity will leave no stone unturned to combat the disease."

Joe Bieber and wife, who have been spending the summer at Point Place, O., returned home this week.

August F. Poehlmann and wife announce the marriage of their niece, Frieda L. Poehlmann, daughter of the late John W. Poehlmann and sister of Lieutenant John Poehlmann, who is now stationed at Camp Pike, Ark., to Harold F. Diller of Rantoul. Mrs. Diller assisted T. E. Waters in the supply department of Poehlmann Bros. Co., a great part of the past year, where she made a host of friends who wish her every success in her matrimonial venture.

Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, was initiated in the Elks, September 26, when Frank Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, came all the way up from St. Louis, Mo., to see the fun. Sam Seligman was also in town for the occasion and presented Mr. Zech with an order emblem that he prizes most highly. Dan Simonds, of the Ogden Floral Co., was also at the big doings and from all reports it was "some time."

A. L. Vaughan & Co. report that their sales Saturday, September 28, were the largest for any one day outside of the holidays since the firm has been in existence. William Timme is the latest addition to the staff at this house. A large shipment of boxwood was received this week, which is keeping the boys busy, during their spare moments, bunching same.

Fred Lautenschlager, chairman of the Florists' Liberty Loan Committee, announces that up to October 2 subscriptions numbering 756 and totalling $108,500 had been received with many more to hear from. The trade is expected to subscribe for at least $300,000, so anyone who has not yet purchased a bond should do so through the committee as early as possible.

Miss L. A. Fonner, of O. A. & L. A. Tonner, has made arrangements with some of the proprietors of pecan groves in Georgia to market their entire crops and is now ready to book orders for same. Several of the Tonner family, as well as others, own groves in the Jackson pecan district in Georgia.

Peter Hoefelder, of Kennicott Bros. Co., will leave for Jefferson Barracks, Mo., with the drafted men from his district October 3. The employes presented him with a beautiful wrist-watch as a token of remembrance before his departure.

J. A. Budlong has had no trouble in disposing of the yearly chrysanthemums this season at high prices compared to other years, which was due mostly to the splendid quality as well as the general scarcity of this line in this market.

CHICAGO

Cut Flowers and Greens

Kroeschell Bros. Co. has purchased $30,000 worth of government bonds of the Fourth Liberty Loan through division 19, which is one-tenth of the florists' quota. The firm itself took $20,000 worth and the employees $10,000.

D. F. Simonds and Julius R. Butzow, proprietors of the Ogden Floral Co., 1917 West Harrison street, dissolved partnership September 24 by mutual consent. Mr. Simonds, senior member of the firm, will continue the business.

H. Van Gelder, manager of Percy Jones, Inc., has been confined to his home the past week with Spanish influenza. He has been greatly missed at the store and all of his many friends are hoping for a speedy recovery.

Wietor Bros. are offering a good supply of roses and carnations, but will soon be strong on chrysanthemums and pompons, which they grow probably the largest quantity of in the middle west.

Heaton Nichols and wife have the sympathy of many friends in the death of their only child, Alfred, a fine young man, who joined the Canadian forces about two years ago and was killed at the front September 10.

Kyle & Foerster were well pleased with their total sales last month, which was the best September they ever experienced. The sales September 28 were triple those of the corresponding day of 1917.

Peter Reinberg is in fairly good crop with roses, especially Champ Weiland, Milady and Richmond. The out-of-town demand for stock is extremely heavy, not to mention the brisk local call.

The florists' club will meet at the Randolph hotel, next Thursday, October 10, at 8 p. m. Everybody in the trade is invited to be present whether they are members or not.

George Weiland, of Evanston, has been pretty busy this week with funeral work, which called for a large quantity of stock and frequent trips to the market.

Martin Amling, of Maywood, was one of 45 men at Camp Grant selected for the heavy artillery, all of whom will be given a special course in this branch.

E. C. Pruner, well-known traveling representative of Poehlmann Bros. Co., has spent twenty-five years in the florist business and is still going strong.

Joseph Pfeffer of the Weiland-Risch Co., has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his mother-in-law whose death occurred this week.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting a good supply of white pompons in addition to extra fine Golden Queen chrysanthemums.

Fred Thom, 1639 Milwaukee avenue, left for Jefferson Barracks, Mo., with the drafted men from his district, October 1.

The John Kruchten Co. is offering a good supply of boxwood, which made its appearance at their store this week.

Mangel, the Palmer House Florist, reports an exceedingly brisk demand for funeral work the past two weeks.

Vaughan's Seed Store reports continued brisk demand for all bulbs, especially freesias, callas and lilies.

H. C. Wullbrand and wife will visit their pecan groves in southwestern Georgia, this month.

SEPTEMBER CLOSES WITH GOOD BUSINESS.

The last week in September certainly put a good finishing touch to a month, the fore part of which was not very satisfactory. Within the past fortnight, the thermometer came near touching the freezing point, and what stock was not chilled is drying up due to the lack or rain. Thus, with the outside cut flowers at an end, with the indoor cut, with the exception of roses, at low ebb, and a steady increase in local as well as shipping business, prices all around took quite a jump. Carnations are still short stemmed, but at this writing, anything in form of a flower, especially useful in funeral work, would keep on moving. The few lilies that reach the market are quickly disposed of at very good prices.

NOTES.

The local committee having charge of the Fourth Liberty loan, among the craft, includes Gust Rusch, Wm. Zimmermann, Fred Holton and C. C. Pollworth. They say that all the florists ought to do their utmost in helping Uncle Sam, as they have much to be grateful for in view of the consideration given them by the government thus far. Now, every one, the shoulder to the wheel.

With the whole office force, including H. V. Hunkel, at the Holton & Hunkel Co., on the sick list last Monday, the clerical work was at a stand still for half the week. H. J. Seal, the head of the force, was absent all week. While this firm has been heavy on roses right along, the cool nights have helped to reduce the cut.

Fred Hesse, one of the so-called "old timers," with a store at 392 Grove street and greenhouses at his residence, 407 Twenty-seventh avenue, has disposed of his florist business to take effect October 1. Lack of good help was the main reason. He will at once go into the auto supply manufacturing line.

The Cudahy Floral Co. has discontinued the growing of carnations altogether this season. These houses are planted to tomatoes, a hobby of Manager Scott. This firm is right on crop with American Beauties, and the other variety of roses will produce heavily in the near future.

H. W. Koerner, the gladioli and dahlia specialist, is still consigning numerous gladioli to Gust Rusch & Co. While he is cutting some dahlias, the crop will fall far short of other seasons, the plants being backward, due to the dry growing conditions this summer.

Henry Schimmels, who has been conducting a cut flower store at 474 Twelfth street for the past few years, was married September 28. For the last two months, he has turned over the store to his brother, while Henry is working at a more essential line.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. laments the lack of stock to fill orders these days. While they are cutting quite a few roses, their carnation supply is still far short of demand. A few early chrysanthemums clean up in a hurry daily.

James E. Mathewson, of Sheboygan, Wis., had so much funeral work two days last week that he found it necessary to be in this market personally early Monday morning. He had some difficulty in securing his share of lump coal.

Growers of asters in this vicinity have not lost any flowers caused by rain and dirt. Still, several were handicapped by the aster disease, called the "yellows."

Walter Baerman, eldest son of Gust Baerman, has been transferred from the training camp due to a defective knee to do government work in this city.

The regular florists' club meeting will be held October 3 at the usual meeting place.

BUSINESS SUFFERS SLUMP.

Business slowed up somewhat the last few days, no doubt on account of the beginning of the Liberty Loan campaign. We can look forward to a light slump for the next few weeks, until conditions become settled again. Flowers of all kinds show a continued improvement in quality. Roses are in excellent condition, and the cut is plentiful. Russell, Ophelia and Columbia make up the bulk. Carnations also show some improvement, but the supply is still very limited. Violets are coming in more freely, but have very little demand and the keeping qualities are very poor, as they are still soft. Gladioli are still coming in and have a good call. Dahlias are seen in great variety and size, and have a very good general demand. Outdoor stock of the perennial varieties is plentiful and makes fine window display stock. Lilies and lily of the valley are equal to the demand. Asters have about disappeared from the market. In greens, the market is well supplied.

NOTES.

F. C. Weber, Jr., states he expects St. Louis to be well represented at the coming F. T. D. convention at Cleveland. This promises to be a big and important meeting, and it would be well worth while for any retail florist to avail himself of the opportunity to hear what other retail men throughout the country are doing.

The next florists' club meeting will be held at the greenhouses of W. A. Rowe, at South Kirkwood, October 10. All members are urged to attend, as the meeting will have a number of interesting features.

The florists' club service flag now has 55 stars and is being constantly augmented by additions. At the last meeting it was voted to display this service flag at all meetings of the club.

A number of the local florists are among the official salesmen for the Fourth Liberty Loan Bonds. The Windler Wholesale Floral Co. is one of the downtown district headquarters.

DEMAND GOOD IN ALL LINES.

Brisk business in all lines characterized last week's trade. The calls for flowers for social purposes and pre-nuptial affairs were many, and there was a very good demand for hospital flowers, while funeral work was exceedingly heavy. The very cold weather, however, put a damper on the production and there was a great scarcity of cut flowers. This was especially felt in funeral orders, as there were very few lilies available. Roses and snapdragons seem to be the mainstay of business these days, as carnations are scarce. Some good varieties of roses are appearing, especially Hoosier Beauty and Milady. Columbia continues to arrive in excellent shape, and Killarney, Shawyer and Richmond are other good varieties. Chrysanthemums are scarce, as a great many of the growers planted only the late varieties, and the unproductive weather has lessened the cut of the early chrysanthemums.

NOTES.

Herman Leitz, of the New Haven Floral Co., is again an active Liberty Loan worker. He reports that the people are responding very generously, many doubling the amounts of their subscriptions to the last loan. Winter stock is looking very good at the New Haven greenhouses. Some excellent

SUPPLY SCARCE AND PRICES HIGH.

The coldest September we have experienced in 78 years has played havoc with outdoor stock and many varieties of fall flowers, which are usually prominent at this season, are hard to get. Carnations and chrysanthemums are not plentiful enough as yet to help out much, and consequently roses keep advancing in price. Present prices, possibly the highest on the continent, quote American Beauties at $40 per 100 for firsts, $30 for seconds and $20 for thirds; Russell, $25, $15 and $10; Ophelia, Richmond, Hoosier Beauty, Sunburst, Shawyer, Columbia, Winnett, and Killarney, $15, $12 and $8 per 100; Longiflorum, $20 per 100, and rubrum and album, short, $6, long $10 per 100. Business keeps up well, considering that there are no social activities. A number of weddings are booked for October, but they are by no means elaborate. The coal situation does not improve. Nine thousand applications have already been placed in this city for coal for homes which have not as yet received any coal, and orders placed as early as April are unfilled. Many of the smaller growers who use anthracite are in the same position, and there are many rumors of closing for the winter.

NOTES.

Sergt. Thos. Piper, who was at one time connected with Pitcher & Manda, and at the time of his enlistment was foreman for H. G. Dilleuth, is reported wounded. In June, 1917, Sergt. Piper was stricken with pneumonia while training in England. He is a veteran of the South African war, and holds three medals and nine bars. He went overseas with the second contingent in May, 1915, and in December was wounded by shrapnel. The extent of his present wounds is not known.

The retail florists club will hold chrysanthemum shows in the individual stores, similar to last year, which proved so successful. November 8-9 are the days scheduled and advertising matter is being prepared. All the other florists' special days will be advertised through the club.

J. A. Neal, having spent the summer at the farm, is about through with the harvesting, and is coming back to his Yonge street store.

WACO, TEX.—T. J. Wolfe, the well-known florist, reports the labor shortage a serious problem, but with a fair supply of coal now on hand he feels somewhat relieved in that quarter. The first rain during the year fell recently, the state having had practically a three-years' drought.

Milady and Columbia roses are being cut here, and the chrysanthemum stock shows promise of a very prolific season.

The Flick Floral Co. is receiving some extra fine Hoosier Beauty and Richmond roses from their greenhouses. Their chrysanthemums are of very good proportions for early varieties. This firm's new heating system, using the electric vacuum pump, will be a great saving of fuel this winter.

Miss S. L. Nelson, the capable secretary for W. J. & M. S. Vesey is again at her post after a two-weeks absence on her annual vacation. H. K.

OUTSIDE MARKETS SUPPLY LOCAL NEEDS.

The condition of the market at present is wretched; the demand has exhausted the local supply and large shipments are now arriving from New York and Philadelphia to meet requirements. Prices are anything the growers and wholesalers demand, as a rule far above anything in the history of this city. The influenza epidemic is prevalent throughout the east, and dark, rainy weather has caused a shortage of flowers.

NOTES.

William Penn has returned to his desk after a week's illness. At the store of Penn, The Florist, the force is completely overcome with the extra rush of business, orders being turned down on account of not being able to get them out in limited time. Three of the workers are laid up with heavy colds.

Welch Bros. Co. took the shortage in hand in time and large shipments of roses, lilies and other flowers were secured from New York. This firm has added five salesmen to the floor force.

Thomas Galvin's force has never been busier than they are at present with funeral orders. The staff is working until 11 o'clock at night trying to keep up with the demand.

Pierce Bros. have been fortunate in having a good crop of roses coming on just at the time of the shortage and are now reaping the harvest at good prices.

John J. Cassidy is having one of his busiest periods and is unable to get wire designs in sufficient quantity to fill orders. Sprays are being substituted.

B. A. Snyder & Co. have been receiving shipments from both New York and Philadelphia and are doing everything possible to keep up with the demand.

Joseph Mangolis, with the firm of H. M. Robinson & Co., is ill at his home, an influenza victim. He is improving, it is now reported.

Carl Borowski, a well-known grower with a large range at Roslindale, died recently at Camp Devens, a victim of Spanish influenza.

SALES GOOD BUT SUPPLY SHORTENS.

Stock has shortened up somewhat, but in some lines, is a little more plentiful than it has been up to the present. Business is good and is keeping the market cleaned up pretty well. Roses are plentiful and meet with a good demand. The carnation supply is not as heavy as it was at the last writing. Lilies are scarce. Asters continue to come into the market and they are good, too, when you take into consideration the lateness of the season. Some gladioli may be had, also dahlias are in heavy supply. Cosmos, too, is plentiful. A few early chrysanthemums, in yellows, may be had.

NOTES.

The florist trade and friends of Thomas Hardesty and wife were greatly shocked by the sudden death of their son, Robert Warren, who was killed when a train struck an auto in which he was a passenger, September 21, and sympathize with the parents in their bereavement.

C. J. Ohmer, wife, and son, James, did not get to start for their home at West Palm Beach, Florida, this week, as they had planned, but will leave later.

Fred Brueggemann, of P. J. Olinger's range at New Castle, Ind., was in the city the early part of this week on a visit.

Ray Rudolph has been sending some yellow chrysanthemums to C. E. Critchell's. They have been good.

Visitors: L. Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago; J. C. Nielsen, representing Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago; A. S. Cohen, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York; J. T. Herdegen, Aurora, Ind., and Walter Tapper, Fairmount, Ind.

DAILY CLEANUP AT GOOD PRICES.

Business has been very good, and nearly all lines close out each day at satisfactory prices. There seems to be a surplus of short roses, which are about the only flowers that do not move fast. The street fakirs are on the corners each day with large quantities of them. American Beauties have a very good demand, with short and medium grades selling best. There is a heavy call for lilies and, while there are numbers of them being received, there is still a shortage. The top price is $15 per 100. Dahlias are arriving in larger quantities and are received in perfect condition, but are short of requirements. Their wonderful color and size make them very popular in this market, and fine displays are seen in nearly all of the stores, attracting much attention. Asters, now small and short, are about over for this year, and the same is practically true of gladioli. Carnations of good quality are seen and sell well. Chrysanthemums may be expected soon in large numbers. Most of the growers are well prepared with them this year. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

NOTES.

E. J. McCallum has received word that his brother, George, who has been at the Great Lakes naval training station for but two weeks, is confined in the hospital with pneumonia. Late reports indicate he is slowly improving.

James Higgins is now representing the A. L. Randall Co., of Chicago, in this vicinity. His territory includes western Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia.

Max Schreiber, of McDonald, Pa., is cutting the first chrysanthemums of the season. He has many new varieties this season that should prove good sellers.

John Dietz, a partner of John Kiel, of East Liverpool, has the sympathy of the trade and friends in the death of his wife, which occurred September 28.

A. L. Lorch, of Allison Park, is cutting the finest carnations seen here this season.

George Franks left September 29 for New York to attend the funeral of an uncle.

Carl Bether, of Canal Dover, is still sending excellent gladioli to this market.

Randolph & McClements had several large wedding orders last week.

Carrie Jordan has disposed of her new Lexington automobile.

GOOD STOCK MOVES FREELY.

There has been quite a demand for Easter lilies, but due to market conditions, a large part of the orders must go unfilled. These flowers are scarce and clean up as quickly as they arrive. It develops that some of the growers have discontinued making shipments of Easter lilies because of their inability to get them to Washington in good shape. Chrysanthemums are slow in coming in. With asters off the market, dahlias in short crop, and the Easter lily condition as above stated, the market is rather bare of flowers for use in funeral work. A few Yellow Frosts are coming in with the white varieties, but they are knotty and of decidedly inferior quality. Dahlias that are arriving are for the most part good and sell well. During the past week or 10 days, there have not been enough Russells and Hadleys to fill all orders. Those that are offered are good and sell at fair prices. Radiance is exceptionally fine and Mock is very attractive. Excellent short-stemmed Wards are to be had. Ophelia is popular, and figures well in the day's sales. For the first time in a long while, orchids were in sufficient supply last week to be looked upon as a factor in the local business. Cattleyas have been exceptionally scarce up to this time, and their supply will continue spasmodic because of their not being produced at all in this vicinity. They are bringing $9 per dozen. Zinnias, and small supplies of cosmos are helping to fill out the stocks of flowers offered and are welcomed.

NOTES.

Horace D. Hetherington was gassed and is also in the hospital. The third brother is William M. Hetherington, who is still on the fighting line.

The police last week apprehended a woman formerly employed in the family of James E. Dalgleish, of J. H. Small & Son, who had left that employment about four years ago, taking with her an antique breastpin valued at $500. The pin was the property of Mrs. Dalgleish. The servant, when arrested charged with the larceny of silver and linen from a local hotel, admitted having taken the breastpin.

All of the local stores have given over a considerable amount of window space to the showing of Liberty Loan posters and script signs urging the people to go the limit in the purchase of bonds. A committee of members of the florists' club is being formed to canvass the whole trade in the District of Columbia to sell bonds.

J. K. M. L. Farquhar and H. B. Ruppert, both of Boston, Mass., were visitors last week. Joseph W. Heacock, of Wyncote, Pa., also called on a number of his friends in this city.

STOCK SCARCE; WEATHER BLAMED.

There is great scarcity of flowers in this market, which condition has existed for the past week. The blame is placed on the weather man who has reduced the temperature so that even the great enthusiasm caused by the launching of the campaign for the Fourth Liberty Loan had no effect in warming things up. The demand, however, appears to be all O. K. and prices have a distinct upward tendency. Those who have been in the market for years say they never knew such a scarcity at this time. Roses are perhaps the most plentiful flower, but they also are shortening up. Fires will soon be on regularly and conditions should improve before long. The quality of the stock is very good for the season, specials in all the leading varieties being offered in limited quantities. There is a fair quantity of American Beauties. Columbia continues to improve, all growers being delighted with it. Carnations are getting into form, and asters are almost over. Dahlias, which should dominate the market at this time, are scarce, there not being near enough to go around. Some very handsome flowers are seen, however, which bring as high in the stores as $4 per dozen. The great majority, however, sell for 75 cents to $1.50 per dozen retail. The reason for the scarcity is attributed to the hot, dry spell of August last, which retarded their growth. Provided the frost holds off, there should be good crops from now on. The hardy aster is used considerably; a well flowered, fine blue offered by Tom Potts is a great favorite and is seen in all the stores. Chrysanthemums are in good demand, but there are few, as yet, except Golden Glow and Smith's Advance. Gladioli are offered and outdoor snapdragon. Easter lilies are in great demand and bring the top price of $15. The first of the single violets are in, not much for size, but delightfully fragrant. They are from R. M. Eisenhart's range at Torresdale. Saturday last saw a great clean-up, there being no surplus at any time, and nothing for sale anywhere after 12 noon.

LABOR SHORT BUT BUSINESS CARRIES ON. While all branches of the trade have a great many things to contend with, lack of labor being perhaps the most serious, the demand keeps up wonderfully well. H. H. Battles, who has lost 22 of his good men to the service or war industries, and who closed his Century Flower Shop, manages in some way to handle his large business and has all he cares to attend to. Pennock Brothers find plenty of business with good prospects ahead. The help problem is their only difficulty. J. J. Habermehl's Sons at the Bellevue-Stratford had the best summer and early fall store trade of their career. A beautiful piece of work turned out recently was a replica of a gold aviation badge, wings and propeller, for the funeral of one of the heroes of this branch of the service. The wings were of Golden Glow, which when worked up, was placed in a large panel of magnolia leaves, with a border of fresh flowers. It was very much admired. Victor Ridenour has been very busy through the late summer and early autumn.

Charles H. Grakelow has not a word of complaint; lots of business, something doing all the time. He is much pleased with his membership in the F. T. D., which brings a lot of good work. Elmer Gehring, of Frankford avenue, found this summer's business fully up to that of last year. Frank Ross, who has three stores, finds the trade to be very good, his main trouble is, in common with all the others, a question of competent help. It would seem from the reports of these live men that it will pay to "keep the home fires burning," which, when the boys get home, will speed up with renewed activity.

NOTES.

A. E. Harvey, of Brandywine Summit, Pa., was in town the past week and reported the craft in the "cold carbon belt" to be in good spirits. Allowances of coal were for the greater part in, and most houses look in promising condition. This season's indoor tomato crop had turned out well, prices averaging about 16 cents per pound, which was a little above that of recent years. Mushrooms had been a good crop last winter, prices netted 35 cents, which was satisfactory to the growers. Although manure costs almost twice that of former prices, most growers had taken the risk and had renewed their beds for the winter season. Sweet peas will follow tomatoes in nearly all the houses.

Easter lilies have been a standard cut flower for years, first during the late winter and spring months, and after cold storage had been found efficient, they have been a staple the season round. Only the past few months, however, has it been discovered that they should not be allowed to open on the plants, but must be cut in the whitened bud. In this condition they pack and are handled without bruising. It appears it takes even the best of us a long time to adopt new methods.

Stephen Mortensen, who planted 5,000 of the new rose, Columbia, is delighted with the way it is coming along. Although up to September 26 fires had not been started, there was no sign of mildew. Where plants had been cut back, they were breaking with clean, fine virgin shoots. He looked for it to supersede Russell on account of its freedom from black spot.

The florists and seedsmen's quota for the Fourth Liberty Loan is $250,000—one would wonder where it is going to come from, but the leaders say it will have to be put across. Chairman A. A. Niessen, of the florists' section, is working like a Trojan, while the various committeemen are vigorously covering their districts and meeting with good success.

One of the rose growers, who had his allowance of coal, has also put in $1,200 worth of hickory and oak wood, which he figures will, with perhaps an additional car or two of coal, which may be allowed growers later on, give him almost 100 per cent production. When asked if he had found wood efficient, he said: "No, it is purely a gamble."

Lloyd A. Reid, Edward Reid's son, who joined the Students' Army Corps of Lafayette College only a week ago, is at home dangerously ill with the Spanish influenza. This dread disease is making sad inroads in the neighborhood of this city, being epidemic in several of the soldiers' camps. Mr. Reid is also suffering from a heavy cold.

Samuel Lilley has resigned from the Charles E. Meehan force, and will handle the carnations of the Chalfonte Cut Flower Co., of which he is president. Edward Dornheim, also with Mr. Meehan, has, in accordance with government wishes, taken a position to help production of war materials.

One of the retail florists in the center of the city was sent for by the local representative of the federal fuel commission last week and questioned as to how the trade felt on a voluntary early closing movement to conserve coal. Nothing has so far developed from this slight investigation.

Charles Morby has closed his store at Chelton and Germantown avenues. His friends wonder at this action on his part, as he is declared solvent. Mr. Morby has a good personality, is a thoroughly practical retail florist, and appeared to be doing a nice business.

Mr. Jones of the J. J. Habermehl's Sons force, speaking of flowers as essential, said: "They are admitted with their cheering color and fragrance to the bedside of the sick, when their nearest relatives and dearest friends are forbidden."

Harry Betz had a distinguished visitor a few days ago. No less a personage than Chas. W. Schwab, who called for something from his line of ornamental evergreens. Harry says he now demands a quarter admission from visitors.

Great reports came in Monday from the committee who represent the craft in the sale of the Fourth Liberty Loan. Sales are being made in many unexpected places. It is too early yet to speak of amounts, but results look very promising.

Carl Cofus, of the Jos. Heacock Co., had to refuse certain telegraphic orders the past week for the first time in his experience at this time of year. The rose houses at Roelofs look good and fine crops will soon be on again.

The Leo Niessen Co. find the parcel post most effective in the quick delivery of cut flowers to even quite long distances. From 50 to 75 boxes are sent out in care of Uncle Sam daily, all with special delivery stamp.

The L. A. Geizer business and stock at Overbrook has been sold to Richard Vanden Hengle, landscape architect, who will make this store his office and headquarters.

John Berger has been off for a week, laid up with ptomaine poisoning. He had a serious time of it, but is now able to be on deck again, a trifle shaky, but game.

Alfred A. Rust, son of David Rust, has joined the Students' Army Marine Corps, of State College, Pa. He will take up electrical engineering. K.

Philadelphia Florists' Club.

The feature of the October meeting was the address of E. T. Cole, of the federal fuel administration, who had requested the privilege of addressing the members. His description of the various conditions that had been brought about by the somewhat drastic conservation rulings convinced all present that they had previously known very little regarding the existing situation. The speaker told of the great work accomplished in saving coal and explaining its economic use by cutting out much unnecessary heat and light, the skip-stop of street cars being an example, one stop eliminated, saving power enough to run the car three blocks. He declared that the administration had decided that flowers are essential and advised the trade to be prepared next spring to show the administration what they had done to conserve fuel and also maintain the importance of their business.

Robert Craig made an eloquent appeal for the business, showing how the trade was doing everything possible in the way of conservation, both in fuel and labor, carrying on the work with the help of women, girls and elderly men. Patrick O'Mara, who was present, stated that he had never before heard the coal situation presented in such a lucid manner. He made a great plea for flowers, which, with the sentiment they carried, made it possible to "Say It With Flowers" on all occasions.

Arthur A. Niessen, chairman of the florists' committee for the Fourth Liberty Loan, made a special plea, saying that to put their quota "over the top" would do more to establish and win a favorable place for the trade in the government records than anything else they could do.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: Mark P. Mills, president; Edward A. Harvey, vice-president; George Craig, treasurer; Robert Kift, secretary.

INCREASED DEMAND AND PRICES ADVANCE.

The noteworthy features in the wholesale district during the past week were, a light supply of stock, a heavy demand from Boston buyers, and a considerable rise in prices. Both white lilies and lily of the valley went to $15 per 100. The cheapest varieties of No. 2 roses brought $2 per 100, extras $6, and in some instances $8. In such roses as Columbia, Russell and Francis Scott Key, prices were much higher. Several Boston buyers were in the market nearly all the week. It appears that the large number of deaths in and about that city from Spanish influenza and pneumonia has created an unusual demand for funeral work. The best special American Beauty roses kept around $30 and $35 per 100 and the best cattleyas at 50 to 60 cents per flower. The supply of carnations is light and the best bring $2 and $3 per 100. No great volume of chrysanthemums has yet arrived, but the quality is improving. This week will finish the asters.

September 30.—The market is fairly active this morning, due largely to the scarcity of stock. Compared with the demand, orchids are about the only flowers that are plentiful, and prices are declining. In roses, there has been a limited number of sales, higher than our quotations. Lilies continue to be ready money at the rate of $15 per 100, wholesale. There is a considerable stock of dahlias on the market, but as they are the only outdoor flowers that are now of any account they are in demand at good prices. There is yet a limited quantity of delphiniums, asters, zinnias and hydrangeas, but their finish is at hand. As previously noted, chrysanthemums are slow in arriving. On account of the heavy demand for funeral stock, No. 2 roses are wholesaling at $4 and $5 per 100; No. 1 are quoted at $6 and $8.

NOTES.

A man of national prominence has said that while the Liberty Loan campaign is on, "everything else will be chores," and so far as this city is concerned, it looks that way. The campaign was opened on the night of September 27 by President Wilson in an address at the Metropolitan Opera House. Vice-President Marshall followed, September 28, in a stirring speech dedicating the Altar of Liberty at Madison Square. This Altar of Liberty is to serve as a rallying point for demonstrations in behalf of the loan. Though hurriedly constructed, it is in a sense, a work of art, being over 20 feet high and ornamented with emblematic figures and appropriate inscriptions and having a large map of the Western Front painted on its face. The view from Madison Square far up Fifth avenue will not be soon forgotten by those who have considered it as a vista. Thousands, probably tens of thousands of flags flutter in the breeze—on which are inscriptions of appeal for the loan.

I think it was the secretary of the Massachusetts state board of agriculture, who some time ago, scoffed at the proposal to employ city men on farms. Well, if he could come to "l'il ole" Manhattan, he might change his mind. Manhattan, be it known, is not a farming country—city we should say—the sky-scraping office buildings, big hotels, theatres and private residences, cover most of the land. What is covered by the saloons may soon be vacant, but that is another story. Regardless of this crowding, amateur gardeners this year, on 1,500 individual plots, each 20x20 feet, grew vegetables to the total value of $22,385. That is the report of the war garden committee, directing the amateurs under the auspices of the park department. As a help, model demonstration gardens were established in Bryant park and Union square. Doubtless much of the work was done by boys and girls.

A large bouquet of American Beauty roses was placed on a stand in the center of the main ward at the Army Debarkation Hospital at Ellis Island. Men from their cots might see the flowers, and the news soon went around that the card attached to them bore the names: "The President and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson." Officers said that before the President went back to Washington Saturday he asked about the 700 men on the island and then sent the flowers along with his regards and best wishes for the speedy recovery of the wounded men.

Not the least interesting of the many features of the Liberty Bond campaign are the war relics, posters and paintings exhibited in many of the leading stores. Some of the paintings are by skilled artists, and are pathetic portrayals of the horrors of war; others have a touch of humor. In Myer's window, Madison avenue and 58th street, there is a canvas 3x5 feet which bears a song:

Buy—a—bond, Buy—a—bond;
Buy—a—large—one—for—a—baby;
A—small—one—for—a—baby;
Come—buy—one—for—your—country;
Come—all, Buy—a—bond!

An evening newspaper states that one bet of $1,000 even that Alfred E. Smith will be elected governor has been reported. Charles Thorley placed that sum, taking Mr. Smith's side, with H. B. Dooling, who bet on Governor Whitman. According to the city directory, there is only one Charles Thorley—that is the well known Fifth avenue florist, and we believe him to be rich enough to lose $1,000 without feeling it.

Miss G. Durkin, bookkeeper for J. S. Fenrich, and her assistant, Miss M. Brophy, were seen at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, September 24, selling boutonnières in the campaign of the National League for Woman's Service. Both have a happy way of calling: "Wear a flower for a boy!" Mrs. Curtin, the lady in general charge of that section of the room, was well pleased with their receipts.

John H. Traendly, a nephew of Frank H. Traendly, who gave up a good position to enlist as a private in the regular army when the United States entered the war, has recently been made a lieutenant in the machine gun company. At present, he is at Camp Hancock, Ga.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building on the evening of October 14. Members of the Liberty Loan committee are likely to make reports, and there will be other interesting features.

As usual, the Dards store, Madison avenue and 44th street, is actively participating in the Liberty Loan campaign. Mr. Dards is on important committees, and Manager Perry has arranged a window decoration appropriate for the occasion.

William A. Scharf, of Bayshore, L. I., formerly head man for Alex. M. Westwood, in the Pennsylvania Terminal, has been made a corporal in the United States army, and is now supposed to be in France.

The Orchid Florist Co., of which C. Changuris is proprietor, has removed from 106 to 100 West 57th street, corner of Sixth avenue, where they have an exceptionally attractive store.

Mrs. W. J. Long has returned from her vacation, spent with her parents in Nova Scotia. She reports that the casualties among Canadian troops from that section have been heavy.

On account of the closing of so many private conservatories, and the necessary curtailment in commercial ranges, indications point to cheap palms for this season.

Charles Matthews, for many years a salesman in the wholesale district, but for the past year engaged in other business, is back again as salesman for Riedel & Meyer.

Andrew Scott, nephew of Alexander McConnell, and for a number of years prominently connected with the store, is now with Wadley & Smythe, 491 Fifth avenue.

A meeting of the Liberty Loan committee of the New York Florists' Club was held at the office of Secretary Young on the afternoon of September 27.

Though there is, as a rule, a scarcity of roses, H. E. Froment is receiving a good supply from the Coddington ranges, Murray Hill, N. Y.

Patrick Welch, of Boston, spent several days of the past week in this city and bought heavily in the market, stock being scarce in Boston.

C. A. Schaeffer, well known in the trade of this city and Yonkers, is now with P. F. McKenney, Fifth avenue and 42nd street.

Louis J. Reuter, now with Peirce Brothers, Waltham, Mass., spent several days of the past week in this city, buying for his firm.

The first box of Rhinebeck violets, we have noticed, reached J. S. Fenrich September 28, and were good, considering the season.

E. J. Van Reyper, recently with Riedel & Meyer, is now in the George C. Siebrecht store as salesman.

In addition to other good stock, Traendly & Schenck are receiving the rose tied Rover.

William P. Ford is handling a good stock of chrysanthemums.

The Hun Fears Organized Attacks!

Then let's organize our saving. Let's save by companies and regiments instead of individually.

Let's show him what Americans can do through War Savings Societies.

In eight months 116,433 Societies with 6,070,000 members have been formed.

We Have Just Begun!

Now how about you? Do you belong to a Society? Have you formed one among your friends or employees?

Will You Organize a Society?

Remember, a society of 20 members, each buying only one U.S. S. a month for a year, will equip 50 American soldiers with rifles

May we count on you? May we send you more complete information? TO-DAY?

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held June, 1919.

MAIL orders for bulbs are reported unexpectedly good.

VISITED NEW YORK: President Miller of the American Bulb Co., Chicago.

FURTHER shipments of French and Dutch bulbs are expected this week.

BEAN crop of 1918 is estimated to exceed last year's by five million bushels.

CANARY seed, because of an embargo placed on its importation, has advanced from 20 cents to 25 cents per pound.

ONION SET growers in the Chicago district have about completed housing the crop with prices easier.

IMPORTERS who have Chinese narcissus bulbs now in Canada are endeavoring to get permission to bring them into the United States.

LEONARD H. VAUGHAN, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, is planning to attend the New York meeting of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, October 8.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade October 2 were as follows: Timothy, $8.00 to $10.50 per 100 pounds, no change from last week.

IT is reported that the War Trade Board, as well as the Japanese authorities in Washington have given final refusal on the importation of Japanese lilies this season.

VISITED CHICAGO: Lester L. Morse, of C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Calif., en route to the Wholesale Seedsmen's League meeting to be held at New York, October 8.

CHICAGO seedsmen's quota of Liberty Bonds has been placed at $140,000, and while this seems a large sum compared with that of other lines, the seedsmen expect the full amount will be subscribed.

JOHN C. BODGER, of John Bodger & Sons Co., Los Angeles, Calif., writes, September 23, as follows: "The recent heavy rains did not reach us. Asters, however, are about the only items we have out which rain would affect."

TOLEDO, O.—Clover made a 5 to 10 cent advance October 1, closing at $27.00, a drop of 25 cents during the week. Cash timothy was steady, selling at $7.05. September closed at $5.05, October $5.00, December, $5.20, March $5.35 and April $5.35.

A REPRESENTATIVE of the Holland Bulb Growers' Association, who speaks with apparent authority, says no bulbs will be sold this season below the prices fixed by the association last May and surplus bulbs, if there are any, will not be offered at auction.

Peacock-Gundestrup Suit Decision.

In a communication last month, Knud Gundestrup, proprietor of Gundestrup's Seed Store, Chicago, announced that the damage suit started about two years ago against him for $10,000 by the Everett R. Peacock Co., seedsmen of the same city, has been decided, and Gundestrup's Seed Store found not guilty. As will be remembered, and announced in these columns at the time, the suit was filed in the above amount, it being alleged that by insinuations against the credit of the Peacock Co., by Gundestrup, the former had been slandered.

Philadelphia Seed Trade.

The H. F. Michell Co. is holding its vegetable and outdoor flower show this week. The exhibits, received on Monday, were well up to the high standard of this annual feature. The dahlias were particularly fine, nothing better having ever been seen in this city. There was also a splendid display of vegetables, many of the specialties grown from seed furnished to private gardeners, prizes being offered by the firm. The show received favorable notices in the daily press, and as usual, was well attended.

Howard M. Earl, after an association with the W. Atlee Burpee Co. covering a period of 25 years, in charge of the department of production, overseeing the extensive seed farms and stocks grown under contract, severed his connection with the firm, September 27. K.

Washington Rulings and Regulations.

The war trade board has issued a ruling affecting hemp, canary and alfalfa seed, placing them on the list of restricted imports. All outstanding licenses for the importation of these seeds have been revoked as to ocean shipments from abroad after September 18, the importation of hemp and canary seed by ocean shipment from abroad after that date being totally prohibited. No licenses will hereafter be issued for the importation of alfalfa seed for ocean shipment from abroad, except for such shipments as the seeds stocks committee of the department of agriculture may approve, and applications therefor must be submitted to the committee for its recommendation before action is taken by the war trade board. The board estimates that a saving of 1,800 dead weight tons will be effected by the restrictions on these seeds which come, in the case of hemp seed, from China, canary seed from Argentina, and alfalfa seed from Russian Turkestan.

Seven hundred and forty metric tons of bulbs and 1,250 tons of timothy and other grass seeds (not including clover seed of any variety) will be exported annually to Denmark, under an agreement which has just been concluded between the war trade board and a Danish special commission. The agreement covers all articles to be exported to Denmark from this country during the period of the war, and is conditional upon no exportation of such articles to the central powers.

Seed Conditions Affecting Production.

The Maryland State College of Agriculture, College Park, under date of June, 1918, has issued Bulletin No. 216, entitled "Conditions Detrimental to Seed Production," calling attention to the fact that at no point in the production of crops can greater results be obtained with less effort and expense than with the seed. The bulletin is limited principally to a discussion of the factors that affect seeds directly, and included in its 50 pages are sections devoted to hereditary defects, foreign seed, immaturity, premature germination, effects of soils and fertilizers, injury due to high and low temperatures, lack of pollination, injury by animals and plant parasites, disinfection, selection for disease control, chemical injury and conditions affecting special crops, such as beans, beet, cabbage, corn, celery, carrot, cauliflower, cucumber, etc.

GREEN BAY, WIS.—The Green Bay Seed Co. has been incorporated by C. A. Olson, formerly of Milwaukee, and will specialize in clover.

DENVER, COLO.—The Barteldes Seed Co. will move to a new location at 1616 Champa street, where a cut flower department will be added to the firm's extensive seed business.

THERE may be a shortage of sugar, but farmers should not, on that account, neglect to harvest the pumpkins.

THERE are 1,000 women and girls enrolled in the New York State Woman's Land Army, living in 40 units established by the organization in agricultural sections.

HALEDON, N. J.—Liberty corn, which has red, white and blue kernels, is on exhibition here, ears being sold to curious visitors, to whom the grower claims his method of producing the colored ears is a secret.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, October 1.—Cucumbers 2-dozen box, 80 cents to $1.00; celery, crate, 35 to 50 cents; head lettuce, 2-dozen, $1.50 to $2.75; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $1.50; tomatoes, 4 baskets, 40 cents to 75 cents.

New York September 30.—Celery (state) per bunch, 15 to 20 cents; cucumbers $1.00 to $2.00 per basket; mushrooms, $1.50 to $3.50 per basket; tomatoes, per carrier, 30 cents to $1.75; lettuce, per package, 25 cents to $1.25; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50.

Tomatoes After Frost.

Following frost, tomatoes may be pulled up plants and all and hung tops downward in a dark place, preferably a cellar. When treated in this way the fruit will ripen nicely and slowly and will be available for table use for a long time after the plants have been removed from the soil. Fruit that is very immature should be removed from the vines and may be used for pickling and in other ways. If facilities for hanging the vines are lacking, the tomatoes nearing full growth will ripen satisfactorily if wrapped separately in paper and stored in a dark place.

Cabbage for Kraut.

From returns received to July 1 by the United States department of agriculture from 116 firms and individuals engaged in manufacturing kraut, or about 117 per cent of the total number reporting in 1917, it appears that 6,801 acres of cabbage have been contracted for thus far this season, as compared with 6,008 acres reported by the same firms in 1917, representing about 68 per cent of the total acreage reported to the bureau in that year. The total acreage reported in 1917 by 99 firms, representing about 48 per cent of the number engaged in manufacturing kraut, is 8,880 acres. Of this acreage 557 acres, or about six per cent, was reported as not planted or abandoned, leaving a net acreage for harvest of 8,323 acres. A comparison of the acreage reported thus far this season with that reported by the same firms in 1917 shows an increase of about 13 per cent. If this rate of increase prevails throughout the contracting period, it would appear that a total contracted acreage of 10,034 acres may be expected.

Vegetable and Fruit Markets.

Reports received by the bureau of markets for the period September 24-30 showed that the extremely heavy movement of potatoes continued and the volume also increased for apples, grapes, onions and celery. The heaviest movement in potatoes was from the west and the great lakes region and markets supplying those sections tended lower through the week. Minnesota sacked whites declined sharply, closing the seven day period at $2 per 100 pounds for carlots in Chicago with the general declines in other carlot and jobbing markets. Moorhead, Minn., quoted Red River Ohio's at 20 cents lower than the previous week at $1.75-$1.90 per 100 pounds. Colorado and Idaho shipping points declined briskly, going as low as $1.25 per 100 pounds sacked. Maine Cobblers and Green Mountains ranged $2.12-$2.15 trackside at Presque Isle and prices advanced to $2.70-$3.00 sacked in New York and Boston. Sweet potatoes again declined about 75 cents at shipping points, ranging from $3.50-$4 per barrel. The onion movement was draggy and prices ruled low. Eastern and northwestern yellow stock followed a weaker range at $2-$2.25 per 100 pounds in consuming markets. Cabbage prices remained fairly steady at the lower level reached the previous week. New York Domestic was quoted unchanged at $15 per ton f. o. b. Rochester. Colorado stock held at $1 per 100 pounds trackside.

Winter varieties of apples are now moving from various producing sections. Michigan Concord grapes sold higher at 27-35 cents per four-quart basket f. o. b. Benton Harbor. Peach shipments are becoming light with New York and Colorado Elbertas ranging $3.25 to $4 per bushel in consuming markets. Pear values held firm with New York and Michigan Bartletts steady at $3.25-$3.50 in consuming markets.

Safety in Mushrooms.

There is no simple test for distinguishing between edible and poisonous mushrooms, according to specialists in the United States department of agriculture. For example, the common belief that any mushroom may be eaten with safety if the skin can be peeled readily from the cap, is quite unfounded. Peeling of this character is possible with many poisonous species. The presence of insects on mushrooms, too, is no proof that they are safe for human consumption. Insects infest some of the most poisonous as well as some of the best species of fungi. Again, there is a common belief that if poisonous mushrooms are soaked or boiled in salt water, they will do no harm. This is a dangerous and unfounded supposition.

The only safe mushrooms to eat are those which are gathered by a collector who knows exactly what he is doing. In order to make easier the all-important distinction between poisonous and nonpoisonous growths, the department has just published a new bulletin entitled, "Some Common Edible and Poisonous Mushrooms," Farmers' Bulletin 796. The illustrations and text of this bulletin should enable collectors to avoid doubtful species. The authors point out, however, that it is most important to pick only those which it is absolutely certain are harmless. No attempt should be made to gather rare forms or those species which are not readily recognizable.

The most common edible mushroom is known to scientists as Agaricus campestris. This variety is not only cultivated commercially, but is widely distributed and is abundant in the wild state. The cap is fleshy and hemispherical in shape, but later becomes expanded and nearly flat. It is smooth, in color white or light brown, and the flesh is white and firm. The gills are white at first, later become pink, and finally turn a blackish brown. The stem is stout, smooth, and furnished with a ring. This type of mushroom is readily recognized, but there is some possibility that it may be confused with an Amanita, of which there are several varieties, most of them extremely poisonous. The risk of mistaking the common mushroom for one of these may be avoided if the fungus is not picked until the gills are pink or turning brown. The gills of the Amanita remain white. These poisonous fungi, however, may be distinguished from edible mushrooms with white gills by the presence of a veil or of a volva, a membranous envelope or sack which completely surrounds the plant in the young state. After this volva breaks away, a part remains on the top of the cap around its margin as scales and as a broken cup at the base of the stem. Certain edible varieties do have such volvas, but, as they are rare and the poisonous species common and dangerous, the only safe plan is to leave alone all the fungi which possess this feature.

In addition to describing the varieties of edible mushrooms, the bulletin already mentioned gives a number of recipes for their preparation. Many people, it is said, believe that mushrooms are best eaten with no other seasoning than salt, pepper, and butter. The fungi may, however, be prepared in any of the ways which have been found suitable for oysters.

HAIL CAUSES MUCH DAMAGE.

A severe hail-storm swept across the eastern section of this city on the evening of September 25 and seriously damaged greenhouses of the florists and gardeners in its path. The ranges of Chas. P. Mueller and of Frank Cluff had about one-third or more of the glass broken. It so happens that the bulk of the glass devoted to market gardening lies in the path taken by the storm and the damage was quite general. The lateness of the season, combined with the condition of the glass market, makes the situation a fairly serious proposition. Chas. P. Mueller began hustling at once the next morning, and by noon had located 20,000 or more feet of glass needed for his repairs. At the Menges greenhouses, which are devoted to vegetable growing, it was estimated that 1,000 boxes would be needed for repairs. The damage done by broken glass to stock in the greenhouses of the florists' places was surprisingly light, and unless severe weather sets in, the direct damage will not be heavy.

SEPTEMBER SALES HIT AVERAGE.

September, as a month, gave seasonable weather, and crops that survived the summer, took on new life and gave a fairly good account of themselves. Business was up to the mark in volume, probably a little better, and as there is no doubt about the expense account being larger for each month, compared with last year, the extra volume is needed. However, on the whole, the Kansas florists have little cause for complaint, and it is quite possible that the extra hustling and attention to increased efficiency will result in increased benefits, when conditions become normal again. American Association of Nurserymen.

J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex., President; J. Edward M. on, Morrisville, Pa., Vice-President; Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Secretary and Counsel. Forty-four annual convention will be held at Chicago in 1919.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Alfred Finck, for the past eight years in charge of Natatorium park, has resigned his position and purchased a farm.

SMITH'S FERRY, MASS.—Lyman S. Briggs, for more than 40 years engaged in the nursery business here, died recently at the age of 71 years.

ALBANY, ORE.—The Albany Nursery Co. is reported to have petitioned for permission to reduce capital stock from $25,000 to $5,000, to lessen taxation.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The city commissioners have accepted the offer of the park and boulevard association to turn over 111 acres in the Reeds Lake district and west of the river for park purposes.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.—At the twenty-first annual meeting of the Southern Nurserymen's Association, held here, H. Cobb Caldwell, of Atlanta, was elected president for the ensuing year, and that city selected for the 1919 meeting.

Privet Hybrid.

The accompanying illustration is from a direct sun-print and shows two branches of hardy hybrid California privet (No. 22) grown by the Elm City Nursery Co. Woodmont Nurseries, Inc., New Haven, Conn., and two branches of the regular California variety, the resemblance, it is said, being so close that it is difficult to tell one from the other. This holds equally true, it is claimed, of the two forms in character of growth, with the advantage in favor of the new hybrid, which has a pronounced tendency to branch more freely from the ground. This new hybrid (California x Ibota) is quite as hardy as Ibota.

The original plant is a stately specimen eight years old. Both this and the plants propagated from it have never suffered in the least from winter injury, although exposed under the same conditions that killed California privet to the ground last winter.

French Forests Sacrificed.

Timber cutting for the use of the American army is proceeding on a vast scale in some of the great forest regions of France, as well as in Switzerland and Spain. The cutting of a tree in France has been, in peace times, little short of a felony, and no tree could be removed until another vigorous sapling was ready to take its place. But the stern requirements of war have compelled a change in this conservation of the forests, and the French are yielding the trees they have so long safeguarded.

California Nurserymen's Proceedings.

The Transactions and Proceedings of the California Association of Nurserymen, covering the seventh annual meeting of that organization, held at San Jose, October 10-13, 1917, has been received, much of interest being included in its 62 pages. In addition to the general business of the meeting, and the president's address and reports of other officers there are several instructive papers, among them the following: "California Nurserymen of Second and Third Decades", by E. J. Wickson, Professor of Horticulture Emeritus, University of California; "From the Nursery Row to the Orchard Row," by Elmore Chase, Deputy Inspector, Sacramento County; "How to Make Labor Content", by Max J. Crow, Gilroy; "The Vegetable Garden as a Home Beautifier", by John Vallance, Oakland; "Some Desirable New and Rare Plants", by D. W. Coolidge, Pasadena; "Standardization of Commercial Nursery Products", by Wm. T. Kirkman, Jr., Fresno; "Methods of Prevention of Tree and Plant Diseases", by Earl L. Morris, San Jose, and "State Laws and the Nurserymen", by George H. Hecke, State Horticultural Commissioner.

Short Hills, N. J., Dahlia Show.

The Short Hills Garden Club held its tenth annual dahlia show at the Short Hills club house, September 28. There were good exhibits of peony-flowered, decorative, cactus, single and seedling dahlias. Creditable exhibits of other garden flowers, fruits and vegetables were also noted. The prizes were ribbons, as the club members felt that "on account of war conditions, expense should be curtailed as far as possible." Prominent among the winners of blue ribbons were Mrs. Stout, Mrs. Renwick and Mrs. Layng. Active in the arrangements at the show were Mrs. Burlingame and others. There was an admission fee to the show, and the proceeds were donated to the Short Hills unit of the Woman's Land Army. C. H. Totty, Madison, Bertrand H. Farr, Wyomissing, Pa., and W. A. Orton, dahlia expert of the United States department of agriculture, were the judges. The officers of the Garden Club are: Mrs. John A. Stewart, Jr., president; Mrs. Charles H. Stout, secretary; Mrs. A. H. Marckwald, treasurer; Mrs. W. A. Meikleham, chairman show committee. A. F. F.

NOTES.

James J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., spent several days in this city the week of September 22. He brought with him samples of the terrace ferns, cocoa palms, kentias, rubber plants, and other foliage varieties that require considerable heat through the winter. Mr. Karins made his headquarters at the Albany Cut Flower Exchange and florists from this city, Troy, and Schenectady visited the salesroom in considerable numbers and bought freely. The Dreer concern is closing out a large amount of this class of stock because of the necessity of shutting down many houses next winter through the order of the fuel administration which limits their usual amount of coal. Mr. Karins is selling the plants rather than to try to carry them over.

Fred A. Danker, of 40 Maiden Lane, was in New York on the evening of September 24, and attended the special meeting of the New York Florists' club at which President Schenck and Secretary John Young spoke at some length on the Fourth Liberty Loan. Mr. Danker brought home with him some of the cards on which florists will make reports of the amount of the bonds they buy. In regard to business, locally, Mr. Danker said that the outlook this fall is good; that at the close of the chrysanthemum season he expects flowers to be scarce. His orders for shrubs, evergreens, and perennials, he said, are sufficient to keep his nursery force on Central avenue busy until winter is here.

According to Thomas F. Tracey, manager of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, 611-613 Broadway, wholesale florist, he has little to complain about this fall. He said that his establishment was handling a large number of Ophelia, Ward, Russell, Hadley, and Sunburst roses. He called attention to the fact that they were getting $8 a hundred for asters, an unusually high price. One of the reasons for this is the scarcity of the flowers.

Frank M. Briere, who conducted a retail florists' shop at 218 Lark street, the past six months, has discontinued.

BUSINESS MAINTAINS HEALTHY TONE.

Business continues good although most of the demand is for funeral work, with some transient trade in ferns, palms and house plants. Frosts and rains during the past two weeks have greatly injured outdoor stock. There are some asters, however. Greenhouse flowers have been scarce, with roses especially hard to get, but during the past few days some excellent Prima Donna, Francis Scott Key and Marylands can be seen. Gladioli still hang on, although the quality is inferior. The new crop of carnations

Liberty—Here is a fern that is distinct, differing for every other Nephrolepis. The fronds are quite distinct, the cut of the foliage being an entirely different pattern from any other variety; very fascinating and beautiful.

Have never seen a single frond revert. Best of all, its foliage is a decided blue cast not seen in any other fern, giving you something new; strong grower; ranks with Boston and Roosevelt. We are the introducers of Roosevelt, Splendida and Teddy Junior, all popular sorts, but in Liberty we have the best of all; will be disseminated in 1919.

NOTES.

Fred C. Haupt, at a recent meeting of the florists' society, advocated not opening accounts except with heavy buyers or persons of unquestioned responsibility, in order to save losses and labor expense. Cash for all small purchases, according to his plan, is the proper way to conduct business, especially under present conditions.

The New Nanz & Neuner Co., the oldest florist establishment in this city, established about 60 years ago, will close its retail store for the duration of the war and fill all orders from the greenhouses.

The Jacob Schulz Co., in addition to featuring flowers for all purposes, is doing considerable advertising in the daily papers exploiting the sale of evergreens, window-box plants, etc., with good results.

The F. Walker Co. supplied the decorations for the annual banquet of the King Solomon chapter of the Royal Arch Masons.

The Kunzman Floral Co. is building two houses, each 32x110 feet, which will be devoted to sweet peas this winter.

Many attractive window displays are appearing in the flower shop windows featuring the Fourth Liberty Loan.

The fall openings of the stores, while not elaborate, are helping out to some extent.

The Wm. Walker Co. now has a young lady chauffeur for delivery service.

D. L. Swift, of New Albany, is cutting fine Radiance and Kaiserin roses.

Ed. Kunzman has been cutting fine dahlias, for which he finds ready sale.

H. G. W.

Providence, R. I.

TRADE GOOD WITH ADVANCING PRICES.

Business during the past week has been good. The call for funeral work has been heavy and prices have advanced accordingly and some lines have shortened up. Inclement weather has had the effect of limiting the outdoor flowers. Asters are selling at prices varying from $1 to $2.50 per 100, while roses jumped from two to six cents over night. Gladioli are done for, only a few late ones coming in to market now. Carnations are better with longer stems and larger flowers. They sell on sight with demand far greater than the supply.

H. A. T.

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.—Mrs. James M. Lamb, who has conducted the Sunnyside Floral Nurseries here since the death of her husband, a pioneer florist of this city, died August 31. The business will be continued by her daughters.

Next Annual Meeting at Buffalo, N. Y.

Well Attended and Snappy Meeting.

The ninth annual meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association opened Tuesday morning, October 8, in the ball room of the Hollenden hotel. President Wm. F. Gude occupied the chair and seated on the platform with him were Vice-President Philip Breitmeyer, Charles Graham, Secretary Albert Pochelon and Irwin Bertermann. The meeting room ceiling was profusely decorated with American flags and those of the Allies and large groups of stately palms were on either side of the stage, over which hung a portrait of President Wilson. There were over 100 members and other florists in attendance, many of whom came from far distant points, among other cities represented being Winnipeg and Montreal, Canada, Boston, Mass., Des Moines, Ia., and St. Paul, Minn. The greatest enthusiasm was manifested by all in the anticipated gems of information and pointed suggestions that were unfolded as the meeting progressed, all designed to further the usefulness of this wide-awake youthful organization, whose work is rapidly being reflected everywhere in the retail trade.

The opening session was called to order by F. C. W. Brown, who extended a hearty welcome to the visitors on behalf of the local craft and then turned the meeting over to President Gude, who, after a few words of salutation, read his address. His admonition, "Say It With Flowers and Buy More Bonds," so often repeated throughout his address, brought applause of approval. Telegrams of regret at not being able to be in attendance were read from Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; J. W. Grandy, Norfolk, Va.; F. C. Weber, St. Louis, Mo.; Albert Knopf and A. F. Borden, Los Angeles, Calif.; W. L. Rock, Kansas City, Mo., and Charles H. Grakelow, Philadelphia, Pa. A telegram of regret was sent to Mr. Grakelow, whose absence was caused by serious illness. Secretary Pochelon read the report of Treasurer W. L. Rock, a military sextet rendered "Keep the Home Fires Burning," and the secretary's annual report then followed. Secretary Pochelon complained of the fact that out of 600 questionnaires sent out, but 188 were returned answered, although from these it was learned that the transmission of orders between the members is of surprising magnitude and fast increasing. Vice-President Philip Breitmeyer, who followed, spoke in high terms of appreciation of the work done by both Secretary Pochelon and President Gude, and referred to the active co-operation rendered the association by its Canadian members. On behalf of the members of the F. T. D. he extended the association's gratitude to the secretary for his efficient work. He also recommended that a committee be appointed from the F. T. D. to work out a plan with a similar committee of the Society of American Florists whereby the membership might be increased to the mutual advantage of both organizations. Irwin Bertermann recommended that this committee consist of President Gude, George Asmus, Philip Breitmeyer and himself.

The report of the window decoration contest was then announced, the judges being W. W. Gammage, W. J. Smyth and E. A. Feters, the first prize being awarded to Knoble Bros., second honors to the J. M. Gasser Co., and third to the Smyth & Feters Co. Others mentioned who arranged windows were: the Jones-Russell Co., A. Graham & Son., Park Flower Shop, Taylor Arcade, C. M. Wagner and the Avenue Flower Shop. Then followed the rotary system of introduction of those present.

In the nomination of officers, H. G. Dillemoth, of that committee, named the following: For president, Wm. F. Gude; for vice-president, Philip Breitmeyer. Directors: A. F. Borden, Los Angeles, Calif.; Charles H. Grakelow, Philadelphia, Pa.; W. J. Palmer, Buffalo, N. Y.; J. W. Grandy, Norfolk, Va.; George Schulz, Louisville, Ky.; Vincent Gorly, St. Louis, Mo.; Samuel Murray, Kansas City, Mo.; Charles H. Brown, New York; J. S. Wilson, Des Moines, Ia., and J. W. Furrow, Oklahoma City.

Irwin Bertermann suggested that the secretary be given more financial assistance. George Asmus, referring to this, called attention to the recent personal tour of the country by the secretary of the S. A. F., in which he secured support for the publicity fund for that society from over 90 per cent of those called on and recommended similar action on the part of the F. T. D. Philip Breitmeyer suggested that the board of directors be empowered to use such funds as necessary for such a purpose and the secretary given full support. This led to the adoption of a resolution giving the board full power to aid the secretary to such financial extent. Adam Graham here addressed the meeting, highly complimenting President Gude, and spoke reminiscently of his efficient career since he appointed him a director in the Society of American Florists in 1896.

At the Tuesday afternoon session, Floyd E. Waite, representing Mayor Davis, who was out of the city, addressed the meeting and extended the freedom of the city to the visitors. He extolled the florist vocation and gave unstinted praise to all, who by the use of flowers carry good cheer, and referred feelingly to the brave boys across the water. W. W. Gammage responded in the name of the F. T. D. Then followed a discussion of various methods of keeping records, nearly all of them varying with each other, and on motion of Henry Penn, a committee of three was authorized to devise a satisfactory book form or method for that purpose. It developed that the transmission of these orders has during the past years assumed a surprising magnitude, one florist reporting a business of over $28,000 in this division alone and is still increasing notwithstanding the adverse conditions of war times.

The questionnaires as returned to the secretary were then read, and their consideration led to a spirited and general discussion, many recommendations resulting for the betterment of the F. T. D. service and the benefit of its members. It was deemed most desirable that the secretary be informed by all members the total amount of business done through this service at least once a year, and on motion of Herman Knoble, this was made obligatory upon the members.

On motion of George Asmus, a fee of five dollars annually will be charged to florists of foreign countries, not including Canada, for participation in the benefits of the association. At 4 o'clock adjournment was taken to accept the invitation of the J. M. Gasser Co., to visit its establishment at Rocky River.

At the evening session, which opened promptly at 8 o'clock, Herman Knoble read an address on "Publicity" and Major O'Keefe, of Boston, Mass., addressed the meeting.

Wednesday's Proceedings.

The greater part of the Wednesday morning session was devoted to the discussion of systems in the operation of florists' establishments, together with suggestions for the improvement of the F. T. D. service. It was also decided that a censorship be established to guard the ethics of florists' advertisements and publications. Following a suggestion by Vincent Gorly, it was decided to adopt a standard calendar with the language of flowers. William C. Glockner was awarded the prize for the best suggestion to advance the development of the association.

At the election of officers, President Gude, Vice-President Breitmeyer, Secretary Pochelon and Treasurer Rock were re-elected, and A. F. Borden, Los Angeles, Calif.; Charles H. Grakelow, Philadelphia, Pa., and W. J. Palmer, Buffalo, N. Y., were chosen directors. Buffalo was decided upon as the place of the 1919 meeting.

At a luncheon of the members to day over $9,000 was subscribed for Liberty bonds.

President Gude's Address.

Permit me to thank you for your presence here this morning, which is an evidence of your paramount interest in this work, which I claim is not only of a material nature but of that higher and nobler calling of "doing unto others as you would they should do unto you"; for the betterment of all mankind throughout the world, irrespective of any financial gain.

"Say It With Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

The last year has been an eventful one. Many unexpected problems have arisen among the growers and producers of flowers throughout the country, consequently the producers and distributors have also been much disturbed, and finally the retail florists, whose interests we represent, have had all sorts of unusual problems confronting them since our meeting in Detroit last year, but in general the retail trade has little to complain of and much to be thankful for, as we are in a business which has many problems to solve which each one must solve for himself, largely on account of the peculiar conditions which arise and the unusual requests that are made of every retail florist. Therefore these gatherings, such as we have here this morning, are more needed now than ever before in the history of our business, because there is no way that we know of that will better facilitate the lightening of our burdens than the fact of getting in touch here on this floor with each other and evolving new thoughts and new ideas which should be brought out here and can be discussed to our mutual advantage.

TELEGRAPH DELIVERY ORDERS.

I believe this business in 12 months has more than doubled in volume that of any previous 12 months since the existence of our organization, hence the necessity of more up-to-date methods of business among many of our members, and especially non-members. I refer particularly to the transmission of orders, either by telephone, telegraph or mail, apparently handled by many of our members and non-members and the failure to keep copies of the same that can be used to settle disputes with the telegraph companies and parties who receive orders to execute. Quite a few cases have come to my notice in the past 12 months that would have been much easier adjusted if copies of the original orders could have been produced. Another important item which many of our florists seem to neglect is that of promptly acknowledging orders so that the sender of the order can satisfy his customer that his commission has been attended to. Another serious reflection is the careless manner in which many florists seem to keep their accounts. I know from personal experience that it is frequently necessary to write to florists and ask them if they received an order, why they have not acknowledged it, if they have filled it, and will they not kindly send a statement so that we can settle up. All of this would not be necessary and it would not exist if our members would be more accurate in transmitting orders and more prompt in acknowledging the same, and sending out bills at once in accordance with our constitution and by-laws. By so doing it might inspire our non-members to whom it is frequently necessary to send orders, because there may be no F. T. D. member in that particular locality.

"Say It With Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Another feature which is of utmost importance is the prompt and careful filling of orders when they are received and the little details and instructions which are to go with them carried out to the letter. It is really deplorable to think that any employer or employee should fill an order any old way, with the idea in his mind, "What difference does it make? Nobody will ever know how much was paid for it," and will execute it to make the biggest profit, irrespective of whom it may hurt. The motto of every individual or corporate member of this organization should be "He who serves best profits most." Is there anything in the transmission of orders that will inspire more confidence in your customer than to write the order of transmission in his presence, give him the name of the party you are going to send it to, if desired, and insert the exact amount of money which you received, plus telegraph charges, or charges deducted, transmit the order and take copy of same for future reference? Several cases have come to our notice where orders have been executed for less than the amount transmitted, and sometimes with inferior flowers and service, without any explanation to the sender of the order.

"Say It With Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Are flowers non-essential? I should answer positively, No! Because flowers signify life itself, and we know that without flowers there would be no fruit of any kind. So flowers are used to cheer the human race everywhere, from childhood to old age, and are used to express our sympathies when our loved ones finally pass over to that great beyond of a higher life. There are no words in our language that have expressed thoughts, sympathies, kindly feelings and good cheer like flowers can and have, especially in these trying times, with so many loved ones away from their homes serving their country for you and me, or when members of families become sick or injured or pass away. It is then that flowers play their greatest part, and in many cases do more to heal the wounds inflicted than any other agency in existence. Oh! What more wonderful part can our association play right now, when our loved ones are hurt or become sick on foreign soil, than to send to mother or nearest kin a few flowers to cheer and help heal the wounds of those who are fighting our battles and giving their all?

"Say It With Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Indeed, I am told that our Canadian brothers have worked up a wonderful and beautiful custom and sentiment along these lines, and if there is no profit, counting our gains in dollars and cents, could anyone imagine anything more beautiful or inspiring, or more beneficial in upholding the morale of our soldiers and sailors all over the world, than by telling their mothers and fathers in God's own language that we stand unitedly backing them?

FOREIGN RELATIONS.

The possibility of sending flowers, and doing good to mankind all over the world, is simply immense, and there is opportunity everywhere waiting to be grasped. Why not amend our by-laws so as to cover international conditions for the whole universe? As regards the use of flowers in wartime, indeed they were essential in ordinary times, and they are much more so in wartime when the world seems sad, for the beauty and fragrance of flowers give strength to the spirit and lighten the heavy hand of sorrow, and those who supply the world with them at this time are benefactors and deserve the praise of their fellow beings.

WINDOW DISPLAYS.

The movement that was started some time ago to stimulate window displays and recognize ability in this direction has been given another forward step at this convention. Prizes have been offered by Sam Seligman, New York; Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, and Chas. H. Grakelow, Philadelphia. Any florist who will carefully study the florist window displays in this city will no doubt get ideas which, when taken home and put into effect, will bring him more than his trip to Cleveland cost him.

ASSOCIATE MEMBERSHIP.

Secretary Pochelon has heretofore brought up the question of making some provision in our constitution for associate membership. There are few associations of any importance in any line of industry that have not found it expedient to receive associate members. No doubt this question will be considered by this convention favorably, but it remains to determine the conditions on which such associate membership will be given. In connection with this is the kindred matter of foreign membership. Perhaps at this time, while the war is in progress, there may be some difficulty in adjusting this matter; but it should not be allowed to sleep, as its importance is manifest to all.

"Say It With Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

As to the matter of the relations of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association to the Society of American Florists, unquestionably the two organizations can mutually assist and forward each other's purposes and objects. This is forcibly illustrated thus far in the publicity campaign.

"Say It With Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

The financial condition of this association, as shown by the reports of the secretary and treasurer, is highly satisfactory; but no association can afford to neglect the future, and your president would recommend that at the earliest possible date steps be taken toward the establishment of a permanent fund. This will give the association better standing and is in all respects highly favorable.

MEMBERSHIP, PRESENT AND PROSPECTIVE.

The condition of the membership will be reported in detail by Secretary Pochelon, and I need not refer to same except to say that our membership has been growing steadily. During the past six years it has increased to more than 10 times the initial enrollment of 57. Members should lose no opportunity to interest and bring in new members. "In union there is strength," and the more we increase our membership the greater will be our usefulness to the public, and the greater the rewards we may expect to derive.

COST FINDING AND OVERHEAD.

In the great campaign that has been going on, notably in the last five years, in this country looking toward greater efficiency in all lines, investigations into costs and overhead have been playing a considerably greater and greater part. This is a matter that we cannot afford to ignore, and too much credit cannot be given to the work of those far-seeing members who have been interesting themselves to bring this matter properly before you. Your president predicts that the work of this convention will see another forward step taken in this matter, with corresponding benefit to our entire membership.

"Say It With Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Conservation is a term that has been so often used during the present war that we sometimes pass it over too lightly and fail to appreciate its full meaning and vital importance. The fast crowding events of the last three years have only served to more strongly emphasize the necessity of conserving in all lines. We understand the conservation of coal and of fuel generally. We realize the necessity for conservation of food and of all our natural resources; but it is just as necessary to conserve man power and capital and to stop waste wherever it may be found. It has been well said that "the cost of merchandise, overhead and operating expenses have gone up, and will increase still further. In order to maintain normal profits, it is obvious that it is necessary to cut down expenses as far as possible, stop losses, avoid lost motion, eliminate waste, and work faster." No store can hold on to the old, worn-out methods and yet operate at the speed that is required by present-day conditions. The war has called thousands of trained workers out of stores; the new employees are untrained. One of the most difficult problems that the florist of today has to meet is how to carry on business more efficiently than ever before, yet with less help, and at the same time avoid all waste. The florist owes it to himself, as well as to his country, to make certain that neither his time, his goods or money is wasted. If he is to actively co-operate with our government in this crisis, and at the same time benefit himself, he must conserve labor, eliminate waste, and speed up his business. He can only achieve this through evolving a more efficient system than he has heretofore used.

AIMS AND OBJECTS OF THE ASSOCIATION.

A writer in one of our prominent trade papers recently had this to say of the Florist Telegraph Delivery Association: "It stands for the closer union of retail florists, for mutual help, a standardized method of bookkeeping and accounting, a better system of credits, enlarged sales channels, the exchange of the best thought on floral matters; in short, it means the breaking down of cut-throat competition and the substitution of genuine co-operation, to the end that the florist business everywhere shall develop more normally, healthfully and broadly."

"Say It With Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

That portion of humanity which has not as yet been made receptive to the business tendency of the age is prone to consider such aims too altruistic, too Utopian for any use; but the fact that, in rapid succession, men and firms not hitherto actively enjoying its benefits are becoming members (to see how it pans out) is the prima facie evidence that the association is on the high-road to success. When these renew their membership, it is their usual comment that they are sorry they did not join years before, because they have profited so largely in their first year's experience. The history of the association further shows that scarcely has a member dropped out on account of being dissatisfied with the results derived from membership.

FLOWERS IN THE HOSPITALS.

At a recent meeting of the New York Florists' Club, Mrs. J. C. Clark Curtin, chairman of the committee on home and overseas relief of the National League for Woman's Service, described the distribution of flowers to sick and wounded soldiers and sailors at the different hospitals in and around New York. She expressed the thanks of her organization to the New York Florists' Club, who had given liberally to aid Charles H. Grakelow, Philadelphia, Pa.

Director-Elect Florists' Telegraph Delivery Ass'n

this work, and read several letters from the wounded who had been cheered by gifts of flowers. This is true of another committee, notably in Washington, D. C.

NON-ESSENTIALS.

Charles A. Hinsch, president of the American Bankers' Association, at a recent convention of that organization held in Chicago, had this to say of non-essentials: "Every single line of activity runs into all the others. Every question is tied up with all the others—questions of banking, financing, transportation by land and sea, and by lake, river and canal as well, questions of industrial and agricultural production, of wages, efficiency, of social content and social unrest, and the still subtler questions concerned with the health, vigor, education and morality of the people—all are linked together. So it is that we cannot conduct the war without also conducting 'the war after the war.' It is not permitted that we live only for today. Prudence demands that the work of next week and next month be so ordered that the work of next week and next month be developed rationally and normally. Whatever our inclinations, we find ourselves inevitably looking forward."

BUSINESS ETHICS.

Questions are constantly arising between members that may lead to differences that will prove embarrassing unless they receive broad-minded and intelligent treatment. The policy of this association has been, and it is hoped will continue to be, broad-minded and liberal. It is recognized that this is an organization for service, and that if we are to be of any use to ourselves, or to our communities, we must at all times furnish the very best services at the least expense consistent with fair and reasonable profits.

"Say It With Flowers" and Buy More Bonds!

Secretary Pochelon's Report.

Our worthy president, William F. Gude, has instructed me not to read a long, tiresome paper, but to read you a few lines from the Cleveland Plain-dealer. I must admit that I have never had the pleasure of watching our Cleveland boys at the card table do any plain dealing, but I can thoroughly assure you that they can trim other florists good and plain in bowling.

Our president has given me strict orders, instead of talking to you too long, to give you just one plain sermon and preach the "gospel of F. T. D." to you in true Billy Sunday style; and I hope that when I get through you will all walk up the "sawdust trail" to the pulpit and solemnly swear allegiance to our organization, and that you will faithfully promise to go home from this Cleveland meeting to work, co-operate and preach the gospel of the F. T. D. to your fellow florists.

The text of my sermon today will be "The F. T. D. Canal Boat." At first I thought of starting with Noah's ark, but time limit prevents this. "The Canal Boat F. T. D." was sailed by that able captain, J. A. Valentine, but it was a cumbersome affair. The crew he had to work this boat with was absolutely too small, aside from carrying too large a number of passengers who, even in the roughest kind of weather, would not give a helping hand. His annual allowance was only about $205, and no one can blame him for becoming downhearted and tired of his job. He appointed Irwin Bertermann as captain, who looked for a new crew to sail this boat. Captain Bertermann and crew took it into their own hands to sell this old craft, over the heads of the directors, and bought a great lake steamer, which a good many of our members thought was just a pleasure steamer, and more and more passengers were crowded on board this ship, with very little increase in the crew.

This F. T. D. ship was sailed around the Great Lakes, prospered, finally stopped at Chicago, and Captain Gude was appointed at that most enthusiastic meeting in the hot month of August, on the hottest day of the year, during the Society of American Florists' convention at Houston, Tex. He soon felt that we ought to have a good sized ocean-going boat to carry our passengers, which by that time numbered 500, and the crew of about 50. Things were going along fairly well, with the exception of here and there a sneaky submarine explosion, or the noise of an undermine explosion, and after sailing this craft for about one year he could find his bearings almost blindfolded. He called a meeting in Detroit for all the directors and stockholders of the F. T. D. ship, and this meeting was so enthusiastic that he accepted the captaincy for another year. After consulting with Purser Will L. Rock, he said the time would soon be here when we could buy a boat of a still better type; and, behold, last week orders came from Washington that our F. T. D. ship, from the Cleveland meeting on, shall be, as it ought to be, one to measure up to the spirit of our great country—a fast cruiser, submarine and mine-destroyer, burning oil in order to save coal for the florists. I wired back to our captain, "What will we do with our big bunch of passengers?" A quick official reply came back: "Transfer every F. T. D. passenger to cruiser. Reason—In war time no warship shall carry passengers; make a working crew out of the whole outfit. In other words, make every member work or fight for the F. T. D." Sighting or hearing of any small mines, underhanded submarines or other obstacles put in the way of this last F. T. D. cruiser, our captain, not afraid of anything, managed to run right over them without as much as doing the least little harm to our hull.

Can you find a better or more courageous captain than Captain Bill Gude? And, as we are at war, would we make so sad a mistake as to change our president in this country? No! Would you think it wise to change the president in our F. T. D. work? No! Rather than make a change, help to get a still better boat and become a volunteer in his crew. Become a worker like his first mate, Philip Breitmeyer.

Ladies and gentlemen, let this sermon sink deep into your thoughts, and every one of our F. T. D. members can do a great deal to keep this cruiser at full speed ahead at all times.

As I have made a great many notes and questions to put before you, I will now make a few remarks and also will impress some figures, etc., on your minds, which will take some time for you to digest, and a great many things will come up during our Cleveland meeting, where I shall be only too glad to answer any and all questions as far as I am able to do so.

MEMBERSHIP.

Our membership has not increased a great deal, and not at all the way it ought to, comparing the great amount of new business we have developed, not alone for our members but for all retail florists throughout the country, and, strange to say, we on many occasions have to send or fill orders for retailers who are not members. But can we make them see the benefit, and why, oh! why does it take so long for some of them to join us? I have almost come to the conclusion that, even with the great publicity campaign of the S. A. F., which, I am more than glad to say, our members are supporting loyally, a great many retail florists do not yet see what great benefit they are deriving from this great work and the money that is being spent by others. I think they ought to almost feel ashamed in not doing their bit to help carry the burden.

The slogan "Say It With Flowers" has become a valuable asset to every man and woman who grows or sells flowers, and no better advertisement could be gotten up for publicity from florist to the people. But a different publicity we must adopt for ours from florist to florist, and I think the only proper and feasible slogan that comes to my mind is "To say it with a club."

There are several ways of carrying on such publicity. The most direct, and best of all, is one that only costs our members a little co-operation and very little work. How many times are you compelled to send an order to a retailer in a town where we have no member, and how many times do you receive orders from retailers who are not members? Just there and then is the time for you to strike; write him a note and ask him why he does not join and work with us. At the same time, put his address on a postal card and notify your secretary. The second way of reaching the retail florist is by publicity through the trade papers, and every time one of our members states that his business from out-of-town sources has grown to a larger amount than last year you are setting some retailer to thinking. The third is by keeping him supplied with our membership list and keep sending him literature from the F. T. D. office. Some have taken three, four and five years, but finally joined us. A number of good retailers have promised and threatened to join us six and seven years ago, and still they are not with us.

W. J. Palmer, Buffalo, N. Y.
Director Elect Florists' Telegraph Delivery Ass'n

We have lost members. Some are overseas today and are doing their best to help our country; some have been forced out of business; some have just given out through loss of help. The answers to our questionnaires can tell volumes about the help situation. Our help is over there, fighting the battle for us, and it is our foremost duty to keep the "home fires burning" and keep things a-going so when they come back they will find their places open for them again.

A few days ago we lost our F. T. D. member at Edwardsville, Ill., J. F. Ammann, president-elect of the S. A. F., who closed his shop for patriotic reasons. Ladies and gentlemen, if our F. T. D. president would do anything like that, I would almost be tempted to call him a "slacker." The example set by Mr. Ammann is to be regretted. No matter how much our profession has to suffer through war, let us still "keep these home fires burning," and never let your courage fail you.

At all times be lenient with your fellow florist if he is the kind that deserves leniency; at the same time, be on your guard and watch the charges on your books. We all have to be a little more conservative in order to be fully prepared for the immense amount of trade which we will undoubtedly get after the boys come back.

Can any of us write a letter of appreciation better than to "Say It With Flowers"? Every kind of celebration will "Say It With Flowers." To every convalescent soldier or sailor boy we will "Say It With Flowers."

Our membership represents in the neighborhood of 400 towns. Has anyone of you an idea of how many towns we have in this great country? There are:

2996 towns of.....	1000 to 3000
711 towns of.....	3000 to 5000
599 towns of.....	5000 to 10000
351 towns of.....	10000 to 25000
182 towns of.....	25000 to 100000
42 towns of.....	100000 to 500000
9 towns of.....	500000 and over

I have correct and more detailed figures for the various states, etc., and will give you these later. Can you tell me that there are any towns in the United States and Canada today that have not one florist? I doubt it. Now let us all get together and see whether we can not enlist some of them. Ladies and gentlemen, I can read your answer. You will tell me that there are so many small florists who, according to your opinion, do not amount to much; yet do not forget that any or all of them can and will, sooner or later, send out-of-town orders for you and me to fill. Many times we need them for orders that we would not have time enough to ship from some larger florist. It is time that we, instead of finding fault with smaller florist concerns, help and educate them to see things our way. I know that some of these so-called smaller town florists are on a better and more up-to-date footing than some of our well known and old established firms are. The F. T. D. will not stop until we have enlisted every good, reliable retailer in all towns, small or large. This organization will not wait for the local members' indorsement of a new prospective member in any town, as there is too much petty jealousy, and many a good member on our list today would not be an F. T. D. member if we had gone by the recommendation or judgment of other members.

F. T. D. members and retailers, if you would only know what co-operation and concerted efforts in our line of business by all retailers in one town can do, you would never talk of a competitor again; there would be no such a thing, but only friends in the same line of business. In a great many towns, florists do not even know each other, for, if they did, they would find out soon enough that none of them is as black as the other one thought he was.

Other F. T. D. members say they will not have anything to do with Greek florists. Ladies and gentlemen, we have in this country no English, German or Greek florists. The time has come when we only have American florists and Canadian florists, and what are they all out for, if it is not for the sole purpose of increasing the sale of flowers, or to get the public to "Say It With Flowers"? Take a broad view of all these cases, and everyone will fall when little, nasty, petty, local jealousy is discarded.

SLOW REMITTANCES.

A good deal of criticism comes into our office on account of slow remittances. No one but yourself is to blame. The credit system in the florist business was about the poorest piece of guesswork that ever existed, and only through steady and everlasting education can this ever be remedied. The greatest help of late has been the tightening of credits in all business branches, and the average florist today is wailing to the fact that he was a great big fool. There are still some of this kind, and to a number of them you send an order, when, behold, in about six months you may get a bill, and then perhaps find that they have made a delivery for you. They will tell every traveling man that So and So owes them a bill, but why they do not send you a bill immediately after delivery is made is absolutely beyond my understanding. Some go even so far as sending their customers a bill only once a year, because they are afraid that they will lose a customer if they send a bill. Does this kind of florist ever figure that if he had all the money that is owed to him by his customers loaned out on six per cent or on Liberty Bonds he would have money enough to attend a good F. T. D. meeting and have money left and experience gained?

GAIN IN VOLUME OF BUSINESS.

The greatest surprise in regard to this matter has been revealed to me. Out of our entire membership, there were not more than 25 who can actually tell you what amount of out-of-town business they are doing annually. It is small wonder to me now that our organization is not more fully appreciated. The ones whose answers were in figures, I can safely state, are the retail florists you hear mentioned as being successful in all their different departments of their business. According to the majority of the answers, there is a great deal of increase of the out-of-town business, and some day our members will get down to actual figures and we will be able to tell what has been accomplished. In most cases they have roughly guessed at it, but as the F. T. D. has not got down to a guessing contest I will relate a few specific figures. Here is one amount of business for the last twelve months: 913 orders received, amounting to $3,909.03, averaging, each order, $4.25; 773 orders sent out, amounting to $4,829.27, averaging, each order, $6.25. This means a total volume of new business of $8,738.30 for one year. Six or seven years ago, I doubt whether this party had more than $500 or $600 worth of this kind of business. The party in question pays $20 annual dues, and naturally he is in a large city. If all F. T. D. members will keep close tab on their out-of-town business in this same city, they could pleasantly surprise themselves, as their business in this branch is probably just as large, if not larger.

Do not think that where there are a good many F. T. D. members in one town any one gets the "lion's share," and if he does get it it is for the simple reason that he sends out a great many orders on the reciprocity basis. Study how you can manage to send out more orders than anyone else in your town, and your figures will climb upward from year to year. There are some of our members' figures that run way over the $10,000 mark, and even in some of the smaller towns they have big figures to show.

One man said, in one of the trade papers, the amount of F. T. D. exchange orders was about $2,000,000 per year. He only guessed at it, because I think that it is even more than that, but, anyhow, he started something. A lot of our members wrote in to the F. T. D. office and stated that they did not get their share. I had but one answer for all of them, and that was: How much and how many orders have you sent out? Remember, in the F. T. D. you first must learn to put your share of work in before you can expect to get results.

FINANCES IN GOOD CONDITION.

Our finances are in fine shape, when you compare that seven years ago our income annually was $205 and we were then about $385 to the bad for the year. We have today in our guarantee fund nearly $9,000, invested safely by our treasurer in Liberty Bonds and other securities. We have bought $1,000 in Liberty Bonds in Kansas City, the home of our treasurer, Mr. Rock. We have purchased $500 in Washington, the home of our president, Mr. Gude, and we will this year buy $500 worth of the Fourth Liberty Loan in Detroit, the home of your secretary, and $500 will be bought in Cleveland, the home of our hosts.

To show you the progress our little organization has made, let me tell you that in the month of September, the secretary's office forwarded to the treasurer the neat little sum of $3,379.50. Pretty good for one month. This is the largest sum ever sent to the treasurer at one time.

You perhaps wish to know what we are doing with all the money we get hold of. We blow it all in as fast as we get it, with the exception of our income towards the guarantee fund. All other incomes are spent for your benefit to the best of our ability. We have shown you results, and have it from your own figures returned in the questionnaires. If all your investments will bring you as good results as your little annual dues in the F. T. D. bring you, you can safely congratulate yourself.

All your officers have done all their work for your benefit, and have done it voluntarily for the past eight years. They had to stand abuse, nasty criticisms and many other petty affairs, but they have fought your fight and feel that at last they are getting a little appreciation.

THE CLEARING HOUSE.

The clearing house has had a very busy season for the past 12 months, but has not had any serious trouble, because usually one letter from this source brings results with both members or non-members; ninety per cent of bills sent into the clearing house are paid. In most cases, it is negligence, or as it happens a little financial trouble on account of present conditions, but one remarkable feature, I must tell you today, is that we hardly ever get a bill through the clearing house, or have to collect from our Canadian members, and I do hope they will enlighten all American retail florists on this subject.

Hundreds of bills have gone through the clearing house, and our records are open only to our members as every discretion must be used to forestall legal trouble. Many retail florists, and even some of our members, have been taught to follow the straight and narrow path of the golden rule of paying bills promptly, and today many of them do not have their credit questioned for one minute. It is a great deal better policy to cure such evil than to kill and destroy a man's business. Let us rather help a brother member, providing he is of the kind who deserves help, than to give him another kick, if he has been a little more unfortunate than we have, and in nine out of 10 cases, we will be rewarded and make a very good member for our organization out of him.

One of the questions that was left out of the questionnaire was to be:

"Has the F. T. D. clearing house of past due bills been of any benefit to you, and to what extent?" Do you believe that this clearing house system can be made to be of greater value to our membership?"

I personally would say, Yes, for the simple reason that it is a step in the right direction to make cleaner and better business relations; it will also have the greatest and best effect on all retailers, who are not F. T. D. members, and will help to win some of them to join and work with us.

The correspondence in our files in regard to collections will speak volumes and no one has the slightest idea what an immense pressure we can put behind our organization, and I can safely state that the time will come when all good retailers must be F. T. D. members, not alone for the sake of sending and receiving orders, but for the sake of establishing a credit with all F. T. D. members, and for our own protection. I can see the time coming when we will only fill orders for F. T. D. members. The road we are traveling has not yet been touched by our American engineer corps, but when they get through with their job on the other side, they will see that we will also get better roads in this country.

DAILY THOUGHTS AS YOU GO ALONG.

President Wilson is doing his best to make the world safe for Democracy. Let the F. T. D. make all retail florists safe for our profession.

At the peace conference table, they will adopt our slogan, "Say it with Flowers," with the slight change of "Say it with a club trimmed with Flowers."

F. T. D. is like a religion. If you do not work sincerely, and believe in it heartily, you will get no more benefit from it than some of you who belong to a church but do not attend, work and co-operate with your church.

All members, who do not work and co-operate with the keenest interest, shall be made to pay the double amount of dues of those who work and study and improve our service.

When I first thought of sending out the questionnaires, I had absolutely no idea of starting a guessing contest, but evidently the largest number of our members thought that this is what I meant. But let me tell you, you gave your cards away, and showed me more plainly than ever that 80 per cent of our retail florists are still running their shops on the guess work system, and it is small wonder that some, and a good many do not even know whether a certain bill is paid or not. Remember, that in all respects we have long outguessed you, and we will sooner or later get you to work or fight—at least, for your own business. The F. T. D. is doing its best to make your business better and increase your sales of flowers, and you will not even give us a helping hand.

The sending out of our questionnaire has also helped the S. A. F. publicity fund. Several of our members have sent in their checks, which were immediately sent on to Secretary Young. But what is still better, most of the members who have not paid anything toward the publicity fund, have promised to do so as soon as possible.

The committee on S. A. F. publicity, I would like to advise to show more consideration to our Canadian F. T. D. members, who have come forward with liberal subscriptions, and why not spread our national campaign money also over in Canada?

We must also remember that in all advertising features, to be sure and "Say it with Flowers" in the United States and Canada. I notice in a great many writeups in the trade-papers Canada is left out. This must be overcome and our Canadian members must be shown consideration. Total sales of flowers in the Dominion today are larger than in England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland. Total sales in the United States and Canada are larger than in all Europe.

Our profession has forged itself way ahead of Europe. Our trade-papers are of much greater instructive and constructive value than any trade-papers of other countries.

The 25 per cent discount proposition should not be tolerated, and any one receiving such orders, or giving such orders, or even letters in regard to it, shall immediately and directly criticize such proposals. One retailer, not an F. T. D. member, started this 25 per cent. The following week another from the same town followed suit. I am glad to state that our entire F. T. D. membership stands solid against such business methods and has condemned it bitterly.

F. T. D. window displays and prize competition are worthy of a great deal of recognition, and it surely gives our out-of-town service a great deal of publicity.

Rotary florists, Kiwanis and other business men's clubs, are great fields for our out-of-town service.

How we can overcome the great many kicks about sending small orders such as $1, $2 or $3, to be delivered in large towns.

The F. T. D. emblem is too much advertised to change. Improve on it, and you will be better off.

Exhibits in the Meeting Hall.

An immense basket over five feet high was shown filled with specimen blooms of the new rose, Premier, by E. G. Hill Co. and Jos. H. Hill Co., Richmond, Indiana. The latter company also showed a vase of their new rose, "Mme. Butterfly." The Chicago Flower Growers' Association showed vases of Columbia, Liberty and Russell roses. The new solanums, Cleveland and Orange Queen, were shown by Carl Hagenburger, West Mentor, O. The Nauman Co. and The Friedley Co. of Cleveland made exhibits of foliage and blooming plants; the cyclamens and begonias staged by the latter were especially fine. The Jones & Russell Co.

Serv. ce Flag of the St. Louis Florists' Club.

showed a collection of daintily filled small baskets and vases. Knoblo Bros. had an exhibit of some beautiful effects in baskets and table decorative work. Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., had an exhibit of palms, ferns and crotons of unusual quality. Plant tubs and woodenware novelties were shown by M. Greenebaum, New York. Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, had on exhibition two F. T. D. paintings, which caused much favorable comment.

Polly Pry's Foreigners.

"I'd like to see some foreigners," sighed little Polly Pry.
"A whole shipload of emigrants go slowly walking by.
With funny kerchiefs on their heads and garments quaint and queer—I'd like to see them, standing round right in my garden here!"
"Oh, be upon you, Polly Pry!" said Aunt Milda Mott.
"To wish a lot of foreigners into your garden plot!
If you will look about, my dear, I'll show you full a score Already at your very feet while you've been wanting more.
Now here are Tiger lilies—they are natives of Japan—
And gay as any little Jay who ever waved a fan;
Your pansies—a resemblance you certainly must see
To Uncle Johnny-Jump-up, who came from Germany."
A Turk first brought your tulip into Europe long ago;
The forebears of your zinnias all lived in Mexico.
Siberia claims that sellas that you planted on your lawn;
Your sweet peas are from Sicily and far away Ceylon.
A J there's your calla lily with a kerchief on her head—
She holds the Cape of Good Hope as her native garden bed—
The tall and stately golden band is purely Japanese;
Your bluebells came from Europe and your hycluths from Greece.
Your June pinks used to blossom on Russia's distant hills!
About the Mediterranean first grew your daffodils;
Sweet william roamed from China to the Pyrenees, 'tis said,
Before he ever settled in your grandma's garden bed."

"Who ever thought that foreigners," laughed little Polly Pry.
"Were looking at me every day as I went walking by!"
The next time I am wishing, dear Aunt Milda Mott, I'll wish a few Americans into my garden plot."
—Florence Borce Davis, in St. Nicholas.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The most important matter in the business now, is a quiet but sure campaign for an advance in prices. It is all very well to say "It cannot be done" but as Wm. F. Gude is wont to quote, "the fellow who says that, is all the time being distanced by the men who are doing it." The way to get an advanced price is to ask it; not in an apologetic, "wonder if they will stand for it," tone of voice, but in a confident $1.25 or $1.50, like you said $1.00 last year. People know it costs more to raise flowers; they expect to pay more just the same as you do for your stock, and doubly so when the purchase is made outside the business. All that extra money paid for paper, string, stationery, boxes, salaries, light, heat and all the rest of it, must be gotten back in profits, for which prices have to be raised to bear the strain.

A few bright colored croton plants are good stock at this time; they have the autumn colors. A four-inch pot plant will, out of the pots and the roots mossed, make a fine addition to a basket of dahlias, chrysanthemums or other flowers. A croton spray is also a good finish in many a bunch, just where the ribbon is tied.

The stock of house plants should now be at its best, all nicely featured, to make the best showing possible. They are for sale, their mission is to decorate the home, and no opportunity should be overlooked to impress this important fact on all possible buyers.

How does the front look? Are the evergreens in the boxes and along the pavement line below the show windows? Are the tubs filled? Get a good stock of these fancy evergreens in the empty houses of some of the growers before they are browned by the early frosts. They sell much better when bright and green. Many people will be impressed by your display that would not otherwise think of them.

Are you featuring the F. T. D. idea? A wonderful out-of-town business can be built up when it becomes more generally known. It has to be ding-donged, time and time again, with every repetition at a different angle, before any appreciable returns are noticed. Every means should be taken to impress the fact that through the F. T. D., of which you are a member, flowers can be delivered within the hour in any city in the United States. It may seem slow at first, but every order induces others, until there will be business from this source every day.

Chrysanthemums are now becoming a factor and they should sell well. Arrange a dozen of a kind in deep vase baskets with autumn leaves. Tie with a bow of ribbon. A few baskets of this kind, standing about the store, are very decorative, and flowers may be sold from them the same as from vases, while the filled basket will now and then find a customer just because it was ready to be picked up.

It is at times a little trouble to get together, but new money, crisp notes and bright silver coin, fresh from the mint, is much appreciated by customers in change. A little box of flowers or a plant occasionally for the paying teller in your bank, will keep him interested in the service.

Impress upon everyone in the store the importance of 100 per cent service. Every order should be filled to the letter, perfect in all respects, and most important, go out on time. Nothing builds a trade up faster than satisfied customers.

Do not neglect the "welcome home" box of flowers. It is a source of pleasure to your customers, who are sure to drop in and thank you for the remembrance. It is a good way to open up the season.

Dahlias at New York Show.

As stated in our issue of October 5, page 513, the exhibition of the American Dahlia Society held in the Engineering building, New York, September 24-25, in conjunction with the American Institute of the City of New York, brought out much fine stock, but the falling off in quantity of the new or popular cactus varieties shown would indicate that this type has not kept pace in popularity with the peony and decorative varieties. Among the best blooms seen on the exhibition tables were the following:

Cactus.—Sweet Briar, pink; B. F. Fellows, dark orange; Wodan, salmon; Richard Box, lemon yellow; Ricord, coppery red; Margaret Bouchon, center white, outer petals lavender rose.

Decorative.—Charity, pure white, extra large; Venus, flesh pink; Dakota, coppery red; Corona, bright scarlet; Judge Marean, apricot; Sulphurea, sulphur yellow, extra large; Mildred Slocombe, lavender pink; The Millionaire, lavender changing to white in center; Nebelunghort, rose pink; Tom Dundy, red; George Walter, salmon; Attraction, lavender pink; Futurity, rose; Mammoth, red; Siamese Twins, freak double-headed red.

Peony.—Hampton Court, light pink; Mrs. Frederick Grinnell, pink; Sunshine, apricot; Mrs. Garoben, white; Wallers, rose pink; Mme. Hernott, white; Mrs. Wanaar, pink; Excelsior, orange, extra large; Proserpine, bright scarlet.

Pompons.—Ideal, yellow; Bella of Spring, dark pink; Amber Queen, orange; Daisy, apricot.

Show.—La Grosse Bete, crimson; John Harding, lavender rose; Catherine Wilcox, pale lavender. A. D. Livoni is still among the best, this variety winning second prize for the best pink.

The Greenhouse Beautiful.

Under the above title there has just been issued by the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago, a very attractive book, showing ground plans, with interior and exterior views, of some of the many handsome structures built by this firm for the embellishment of home grounds and practical educational work in prominent institutions of learning. A useful greenhouse or conservatory is good, but where this practical utility is combined with the artistic outline and finish shown in these buildings, the growing of plants under glass becomes a much keener pleasure to those directly interested and spreads a beneficent influence far beyond.

Florists, nurserymen and seedsmen are at times concerned with regard to the planning and erection of private greenhouses, and everyone called upon for advice in such matters will find it a great convenience to have Foley's book at hand. The examples shown therein cover a wide territory and one or more will be readily accessible for personal inspection. The illustrations show single greenhouses or ranges built for the following: J. W. Bettendorf, Bettendorf, Iowa; R. H. McElwee, Lake Bluff, Ill.; Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, Lake Forest, Ill.; Wm. Wrigley, Jr., Lake Geneva, Wis.; Albert C. Elser, Pine Lake, Hartland, Wis.; Major E. S. Moore, Lake Forest, Ill.; C. E. Schaff, Houston, Texas; E. C. Whart, Vincennes, Ind.; Ferdinand Schlesinger, Milwaukee, Wis.; L. B. Kuppenheimer, Hubbard Woods, Ill.; James H. Cogswell, Cleveland, O.; W. L. Velle, Moline, Ill.; Clyde M. Carr, Lake Forest, Ill.; E. H. Gold, Holland, Mich.; Mrs. H. K. Wick, Youngstown, O.; John Dupee, Coronado, Calif.; J. W. Corrigan, Cleveland, O.; O. C. Barber, Barberton, O.; Julius Rosenwald, Chicago; James Simpson, Glencoe, Ill.; E. M. Barton, Hinsdale, Ill.; Late Rt. Rev. Archbishop Quigley, Chicago; Mrs. Newell C. Stiles, Chicago W. A. Douglas, Oak Park, Ill.; University of Ill., Champaign, Ill.; Ohio State University, Columbus, O.; Iowa State College, Ames, Ia.; St. Mary's Academy, Notre Dame, Ind.; Culver Military Academy, Culver Ind.; Eastern Indiana Hospital for the Insane, Richmond, Ind.; Iowa Institution for Feeble Minded Children, Glenwood, Iowa.

The descriptive text and a chapter on specifications will be found most helpful and suggestive to beginners.

Nation of Idealists.

During a speech at a luncheon at the American Club, London, Lord Reading, British Ambassador to the United States, said in part:

"I am not sure that we all appreciate in this country what idealism is inspiring and stimulating the American people. We had not all recognized in earlier days that America was a nation of idealists. Too many had been inclined to think that they were materialists. We have learnt during this war that this is not true, and that America is ready to sacrifice everything for an ideal, provided that the ideal is noble and the cause is good."

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—George P. Buckley, well-known in this vicinity as a florist and gardener, died at his home, 1275 Atlantic avenue, September 21, age 70 years.

OBITUARY.

Peter Crowe.

Peter Crowe, originator of Adiantum Croweanum, introduced in 1904, and widely known as a successful rose grower, died at his home in Utica, N. Y., September 30, after a long and useful career. The deceased was born in Limerick, Ireland, 77 years ago, and early showed an aptness for gardening, becoming quite expert during the 10 years he was employed in the green-houses and gardens on the extensive estate of Lord Kinnear, near the city of Dundee, having moved to Scotland when 12 years of age.

In 1865 Mr. Crowe came to America, being employed for a period of seven years on large estates and commercial establishments in the vicinity of New York. In 1875, having decided to enter business for himself, he went to Utica, built a small range, moved it two years later to a tract of seven acres, and to which shortly afterward he added 19 acres of land, with a proportionate increase in glass. His son, William J., became a partner in the business, the firm being Peter Crowe & Son, but, following his death in 1902, Mr. Crowe, in order to relieve himself of work and responsibility, leased two-thirds of the houses to Brant Bros., who have conducted them from that time. Since 1902 Mr. Crowe had devoted his time entirely to raising ferns, his product being well known in the wholesale markets of New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, Detroit and Buffalo.

Peter Crowe was a member of the New York Florists' Club and of the Florists' Club of Utica. For many years he was prominently identified with the American Rose Society, served on its executive committee, and was an exhibitor at many of the shows, numerous cups, medals and other prizes being awarded his excellent entries. In addition to bringing his business to the front rank among the florist establishments in the state, he took great interest in civic affairs and worked loyally and untiringly for many of the improvements that have been made in Utica during recent years. He is survived by a widow, four brothers and two grand-daughters.

Theodore Shober.

The Philadelphia trade has lost one of its most valued members in the death of Theodore Shober, which occurred October 7, following an illness of only one week, pneumonia having developed from influenza. The deceased, who was 42 years of age, was of magnificent physique, six feet two inches in height, strong and robust and always on the job. He was of a most genial disposition, beloved by all who knew him. As foreman of the palm department at the range of the Joseph Heacock Co., at Wynonette, Pa., he was invaluable, having been with the company for 20 years and was recognized as one of the leading palm growers of the country, being especially expert in kentias. He was unmarried, and is survived by a sister, Julia.

Joseph Luneman.

Joseph Luneman, known to many florists and nurserymen in the United States and Europe, died October 3 on a farm in Gwynedd township, Montgomery county, Pa. Up till a year ago he represented the firm of Kallen & Luneman, of Boskoop, Holland, selling their products in the United States. After this country's entry into the war, he decided to settle down and fill a position with a nursery. He was very industrious and ambitious and during the past months labored hard, too hard, for his health had not been very good of late, and together with the many disappointments he experienced, his strength rapidly failed. He came from a fine and prominent family, his father being a member of the firm of Kallen & Luneman. The sympathy of all who knew him either in America or abroad will go out to his parents and relatives. He was a clean, likeable young man who naturally endeared himself to everyone with whom he came in contact.

Lieutenant Arthur Nichols.

Lieutenant Arthur Nichols, son of Heaton and Mrs. Nichols, formerly of Joliet, Ill., who enlisted in the Canadian army in 1917, receiving his training at Camp Warden, the aviation field near Toronto, where he won his commission, was killed in action, September 10, while fighting in the Chateau Thierry sector in France. Lieutenant Nichols, who was not quite 20 years of age, was well and favorably known in Joliet, having been engaged with his father, until recently a prominent florist of that city. A host of friends will receive the news of his untimely death with sincere regret, while the heart-felt sympathy of many both in and out of the trade is felt for his bereaved parents.

Charles Brown.

Charles Brown, prominent florist of Canton, O., died at his home in that city recently after a four weeks' illness from a complication of diseases, at the age of 47 years. He located in Canton 48 years ago and for 10 years was employed by the late President William McKinley, and for the past 33 years has been engaged in the florist business in which he took an active interest until his death. He was also identified with other enterprises. The deceased was a member of several fraternal organizations, funeral services being conducted under the auspices of the Masonic lodge with interment at West Lawn cemetery. A widow, Mrs. Florence Brown, survives, under whose direction the business will be continued.

Charles Gustavus Roebeling.

Charles Gustavus Roebeling, of Trenton, N. J., one of the foremost mechanical engineers of the world and well known in horticultural circles as the owner of one of the greatest private collections of orchids in the United States, whose serious illness was reported in these columns last week, died at his home in that city, October 5, age 69 years. Mr. Roebeling was president of the John A. Roebeling's Sons Co., one of the greatest engineering concerns in the world, but in his busy life he found time to make a specialty of hybridizing orchids and his efforts were wonderfully successful, his entries at the flower shows in New York, Philadelphia and other eastern cities being awarded many blue ribbons. Among the most noteworthy of the many great engineering feats performed by Mr. Roebeling were the completion of the construction of the Brooklyn bridge which was started by his father, and the designing of special machinery to transfer the obelisk Cleopatra's Needle, from its original place on the Nile in Egypt to its present site in Central Park, New York. As a memorial to his son, Washington A. Roebeling, who went down on the Titanic, it was Mr. Roebeling's custom to lavishly decorate the church at Easter which he attended with the choicest blooms from his conservatories.

Nathan R. Graves.

Nathan R. Graves, well known as a horticultural photographer, died at his home in Rochester, N. Y., October 5, at the age of 46 years, following a nervous breakdown. He was an expert in his calling and his pictures have been reproduced in the trade papers and in the reports of the Rochester park commission. He was a member of the Rochester Florists' Association, in which organization his loss will be keenly felt.

Mrs. Florence Eckel Weir.

Mrs. Florence Eckel Weir, president of the retail firm of James Weir, Inc., Fulton and Pierrepont streets, Brooklyn, N. Y., died October 2, after a lingering illness, of cancer. She was born in Augusta, Ga., 45 years ago, but had been a resident of Brooklyn for many years. She is survived by her husband, James Weir, two daughters and one son.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—The Schmidt & Botley, Co., Inc., has made extensive improvements at its establishment.

OTTAWA, ONT.—Five of the 12 houses at the Scrims' range are being dismantled and may not be rebuilt until the end of the war.

ST. MARY'S, O.—The range of Henry J. Vanderhorst on South Webb street will be dismantled owing to the illness of Mrs. Vanderhorst.

RACINE, WIS.—Christ Saaby has taken over the business of Clark Adams, on Washington avenue, the latter having entered other employment.

DENVER, COLO.—The City Floral Co. has made improvements at its establishment in the form of a lean-to, 16x100 feet, which will be devoted to pot plants.

KITCHENER, ONT.—C. H. Janzen, as a fuel conserving measure, will limit his production to five houses this winter, one of which will be devoted to vegetables.

PETERBORO, ONT.—At the annual exhibition of the florists of this city at the fair, Jordan E. Eddy, of the Peterboro Floral Co. made fine displays and were prominent among the prize winners.

MONTREAL, QUE.—The florists' bowling club has elected the following officers for the season: John Eddy president, Herbert J. Eddy, captain and secretary-treasurer. The club will compete in the city league, opening October 9.

THE men at the front are forging ahead and you would be glad to lend a hand on the battlefield. By purchasing Liberty Bonds you can aid them at home without risk.

PROBABLY never before in the history of the trade have cut flowers been so scarce and the demand so strong at this time of year, largely due to the unusual number of deaths caused by the influenza epidemic. Prices are at holiday figures, or higher, and the shortage of help is seriously felt at all retail establishments.

Non-Essentials Protected.

Last winter a good many people thought the government should pick out the businesses that were not essential to winning the war and shut them up out of hand, so that all capital, labor and material might be applied to essential businesses. Very little study was needed to convince the government that the matter could not be handled in any such rough-and-ready fashion. Since then it has been steadily expanding its war work, and that expansion has necessarily trenches more and more on businesses that could not engage in directly essential work.

Finally it has come to a point where, without any arbitrary classification by the government but simply by the expansion of most essential industries, some businesses are pinched almost to the point of extinction. And, the other day, Chairman Baruch of the war industries board asked Chairman Harding of the war finance corporation to take up the matter of giving support, in the form of loans or credit, to non-essential businesses, in order to keep them alive.

Far from wanting to wipe them out, the government finds it advisable to intervene for the purpose of keeping them from being wiped out; because all of these so-called non-essential businesses, though they can contribute nothing directly—save taxes—to war work, are inextricably woven into the national fabric of credit and commerce. The government does not want to start an unraveling of the skein. It does not want a lot of insolvencies. It does not want to raise wholesale doubts about commercial credits. It wants the least possible disorganization of industry, so that when peace comes the wheels can start turning again as smoothly and promptly as possible.—Saturday Evening Post.

National Publicity for Flowers.

On Monday, October 14, there will be on sale throughout this country and delivered to over half a million homes of the better sort the November issue of the Metropolitan Magazine. All florists are requested to secure a copy or copies of this number, remove therefrom our campaign page, in two colors, featuring chrysanthemums, and post it conspicuously in the store windows, or in other places where it will be seen by the public. Such posting will connect any establishment with the magazine publicity and should very materially stimulate a demand for chrysanthemums, which this season are in unprecedented supply. For the convenience of the trade, our promotion bureau has arranged for a supply of these pages, printed only on one side, and will mail two copies, packed in a strong tube, on receipt of 10 cents to cover the cost.

This prominent advertisement opens our fall programme for magazine publicity, and to get the best results from it the trade should link up their establishments with the magazine campaign through their own local advertising. It is best done through the use of the electrotypes the promotion bureau has supplied, which feature as closely as possible the magazine advertisements. So closely do they match that one of our subscribers actually reports a mail order wherein credit was given him for "Seeing your ad in the Saturday Evening Post and local papers."

The Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays are to be especially featured in some half-dozen magazines of large circulation, and plate advertisements for local newspapers will be provided; all that is necessary to complete them is the insertion of name and address.

The committees have planned to the last penny the expenditure of the fund at their disposal, which, sad to say, is so short of actual requirements as to make an important part of the publicity arrangements tentative. You, Mr. Non-subscriber, can help to change this condition very materially. Of course, we know you are buying Liberty Bonds—the money you pay for them you are lending to the government. Whatever you give to our campaign fund you lend to yourself—at an extraordinarily high rate of interest, easily collected.

Can you not see your way to advance yourself just a little money for your own good? JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

National Association of Gardeners.

BOSTON CONFERENCE POSTPONED.

Owing to the epidemic of Spanish influenza prevailing in Massachusetts, which is prohibiting the holding of public meetings, it has been found necessary to postpone the New England gardeners' conference, which was to have been held in Boston October 18, under the auspices of the local members of the National Association of Gardeners. Another date will be arranged for the meeting as soon as the restrictions are raised, and it is hoped that the conference may be called for early in November. M. C. EBEL, Sec'y.

Federal Horticultural Board Hearing.

There will be a hearing before the Federal Horticultural Board, Washington, D. C., Friday, October 18. Those interested should meet at the store of Gude Bros., 1214 F Street, N. W., at 9:00 a. m.

WM. F. GUDE, Chairman.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS DOMINATE MARKET.

There has never been a season when chrysanthemums were so plentiful as they are at present. They are to be seen everywhere. The street peddlers carry a fine stock and offer it at low prices. As far as the grower is concerned, the market is demoralized. The outside demand this year has fallen off greatly, so this city has to absorb the heavy supply as best it can. To add to the troubles of the growers, a very unusual rainstorm, lasting four days, last week, destroyed thousands of fine blooms. Coming so early in the season, they were, of course, unprepared, and the loss to many growers will be serious. So much for the chrysanthemum market. Roses are improving very much of late and to the great satisfaction of everybody we are receiving some fine Mrs. Chas. Russell; it is a great seller at fancy prices. Ophelia is improving in quality rapidly and some fine stock is being received. Hadley is very good and very plentiful. Ulrich Brunner has disappeared from the market. Cecile Brunner is still plentiful. Carnations are very poor and in no demand. Violets are coming along finely, having been greatly benefited by the recent rain. Gladioli are still to be had, but are lacking in quality. Cattleya labiata is being noticed much more freely of late, but is still in short supply. Lily of the valley is to be had in limited quantities. Gardenias are not as abundant as during former weeks. Dahlias are still plentiful enough, but the quality is lacking; white dahlias are largely being used in funeral work. Lilium rubrum is still quite plentiful and is a fine seller. A very good selling novelty just now is sprays of Crataegus pyracantha; this is very attractive, with its brilliant orange berries and dark green foliage. Asters are coming in heavily, but it is expected they will not last much longer; they have had a long season and a fairly profitable one for the growers. The severe storm practically put all the hardy perennials out of the market. The public is beginning to take much more interest in pot plants now, and anything attractive finds a ready demand. Boston ferns are the most popular.

NOTES.

Wm. Kettlewell, of Burlingame, who is one of the foremost private gardeners in this state, has developed a beautiful strain of marguerite-flowering asters, which as a summer annual has few equals. They were shown at the dahlia show and attracted great attention. They have been in flower since last May and bid fair to continue until November. Many of the florists have visited the growing plants at Burlingame and are enthusiastic in their praise as to their possibilities as cut flowers.

The annual begonia show held by H. E. Botkin at his greenhouses at Ross was a great success again this season. All the proceeds were handed to the Red Cross. The Botkin collection of begonias is one of the finest in this country, and no expense is spared to acquire all that is latest and best in this flower. Many in the trade were present during the day.

The Pacific Florists' Supply Co., of which G. Madvig was manager, has been adjudged a bankrupt, and the stock and fixtures have been sold to satisfy the creditors. The assets amount to practically nothing, and the creditors will receive very little. Mr. Madvig's whereabouts are unknown at present.

The Japanese growers report that most of the chrysanthemums are recovering from the recent rains. The early flowering varieties were the hardest hit, but the midseason varieties all escaped with very little damage.

The Art Floral Co. is in receipt of a fine lot of lily of the valley daily. This has been a scarce article for a long time, and it is a very grateful addition to the fall supply of flowers.

Avensino Bros. are displaying some beautiful specimen Crataegus pyracantha in pots, full of orange berries. They are most attractive and they tell us they are splendid sellers.

The first Wm. Turner of the season arrived during the past few days. The flowers were excellent for so early and commanded the highest figures thus far received.

Bertha Cohn, who has been manager of the Thomas Floral Co., on Jones street, has resigned to accept a position with F. C. Jaeger & Son, on Powell street.

Edwin Hoff, who has been manager of the MacRorie-McLaren Co.'s store on Powell street, has joined the merchant marine service and has left for the far east.

W. B. Aldrich, representing the M. Rice Co., of Philadelphia, spent several days here calling on the trade. He says business is excellent.

JAMES T. LYNCH.

Boston.

FUNERAL DEMAND GROWS DAILY.

The influenza epidemic is on the increase in this vicinity and the steady demand for funeral work gains in proportion. Large shipments of flowers are received daily from New York and Philadelphia. Prices are high and the demand so heavy that some of the smaller stores are forced to use artificial stock. Roses are in most demand. Chrysanthemums are arriving in large numbers and sell freely at from $2.50 to $4. October Frost, Smith's Advance and Halliday are the best varieties. Dahlias are quite plentiful and clean up easily at $5 per 100 for short stemmed grades. Large varieties move at $1.50 and $2 per dozen. Easter lilies have a heavy call at $4 per dozen.

NOTES.

Welch Bros. are having the busiest time of their career. A steady stream of flowers is arriving from New York to meet the demands. Their sales force has been doubled, and all hands work late in the evening, shipping to their out-of-town customers.

At Penn's store, business has to be turned away, for their force has been working night and day for the past three weeks trying to fill orders and get them out on time. Their autos are out as late as 12 o'clock at night, delivering funeral flowers.

Wm. Elliott is having a good crop of roses, among his best being Christie Millar, Ophelia, single Irish roses and Mignon. He is also shipping to market chrysanthemum plants, of which he has 2,000 pots for this season.

Thos. Roland is cutting from his Revere range Columbia, Ophelia, Killarney Queen, Pink Ophelia and Hadley roses. From his Nahant greenhouses, he is sending crotons, dracaenas, begonias and cyclamens.

Wm. Stiche is seen at the market for the first time in several years, selling his stock. His salesman, Nathan Learned, passed away with influenza.

A. M. Davenport has a good crop of begonias ready for market; also bird-nest and holly ferns, and a large assortment of small stock for table use.

Wm. Phelps, of Lexington, is cutting several varieties of single chrysanthemums, a good strain of dephinium and some Easter lilies.

Wilbur Osgood, salesman for the Rudlong Rose Co., a sufferer from the prevailing epidemic, is improving slowly.

George Hamer, assistant manager at the flower market, is home sick. From latest reports, he is improving slowly.

Julius Snyder has returned from New York, where he has been for several days buying up stock for home use.

At Zinn's store, where they specialize in funeral work, they are working night and day getting out designs.

J. M. Simpson, of Woburn, is sending in good carnations which sell readily for $12 per 100. S. K. G.

Toronto.

DEMAND RESEMBLES HOLIDAY RUSH.

At this writing stock of all kinds is so scarce that there is a scramble to secure enough to fill orders. Business is only average, but, with so many seeking stock, you would imagine there was a holiday rush on. Even at the high prices at which roses are held, they are not plentiful enough. Carnations do not as yet prove a factor, and we are waiting for the heavier supply of chrysanthemums to come along. The frosts of the past week have stopped the outdoor supply, and dahlias, which were just becoming plentiful, were all killed. Gladioli and asters suffered a like fate.

NOTES.

Harry James and wife, of The People's Florist, have been heard from at Canton, O. They expect to be at Cleveland to meet the Toronto contingent, and the usual Toronto members will motor to the F. T. D. meeting. J. J. Higgins and wife, George M. Geraghty, John T. Harrison and H. G. Dilemuth will be in the party and will be joined by Frank Smith, of Hamilton, en route. There are quite a number of other delegates from Canada.

The next meeting of the retail florists' club will be postponed until Tuesday, October 15, as the regular meeting night would be on Monday, which is Thanksgiving day in Canada. This being our only meeting before the chrysanthemum show, and with the embargo on baskets, it is expected that all members will be present at roll call.

Miss Meecham has opened a store at 13½ Queen street, East, called Ye Little Gray Flower Shoppe. The interior decorations are in gray, with hangings and wall decorations in keeping, giving a pleasing effect.

Daniel J. Cooke has returned from overseas and is again to be seen at H. G. Dilemuth's. Dan has surprised the boys and is receiving their congratulations on his new classification.

Park Commissioner Chambers has returned to his duties, after being absent on sick leave for some time. He is looking much better and expects to be himself in a short while.

W. W. Tattle, who usually supplies the bulk of the dahlias grown in this section, claims that this is a failure this season, the frost cutting down most of the stock.

R. T. Dean has been successful with his asters, cutting in large quantities until nipped by the frost.

The Allan Flower Shop has opened in the new Allan Theater building on Richmond street, West. H. G. D.

Wichita, Kan.

The breakage of glass in the greenhouses of the florists and market gardeners, by the hailstorm of September 25, will total at least 120,000 feet. Most, if not all, is insured in the Florists' Hail Association. As this city is in the glass belt of Kansas and Oklahoma, there was no great trouble in locating the quantity needed for repairs, and the work of replacing has been favored by fair, mild weather.

Harrie Mueller, son of Chas. P. Mueller, who is in "the service," has been visiting the home folks for a few days.

Business is keeping up fine, but stock is so scarce that some large orders have been turned down for lack of flowers. C.

BUSINESS SHOWS MARKED IMPROVEMENT.

Business is the best that we have had for some time. Everything that comes into the wholesale houses is moving quickly and bringing good prices. The shipping trade is very strong. Roses are plentiful but clean up well; in fact, they generally clean up as fast as they come into the market. Carnations, on the other hand, are somewhat scarce and many more could be sold if they were to be had. Dahlias are in a good supply and meet with a firm market. Easter lilies are fairly plentiful again. Chrysanthemums are becoming more of a factor, the size of the cuts increasing from day to day. Among others, some excellent yellow and pink may be had. Cosmos is in heavy supply. It finds a market that is fairly good. Violets are selling well. A few gladioli are available.

NOTES.

Will Stein, who was with the William Murphy Co. for four years, and who is now in the service and stationed at Camp Sherman, is down with the influenza. It is reported that his case is not a serious one.

Miss M. M. Carroll, with the Woman's Motor Corps, and E. G. Gillett, with Team L, have each been devoting a very considerable part of their time on Liberty Bond work with their respective teams.

Miss Alma Murphy, who has been a nurse in a hospital at Wichita, Kan., and who is a sister of Chas., Fred and Louis Murphy, passed away Sunday evening.

William Shafer has been sending some excellent lilies to C. E. Critchell. They are the first since he took hold of his plant a month ago.

L. H. Kyrk has been cleaning up large lots of dahlias each day during the past fortnight.

Visitor: Charles Baum, Knoxville, Tenn. H.

Buffalo.

TRADE IN GENERAL SATISFACTORY.

Weather conditions have been very unfavorable, cold and rainy nearly every day the past week, and a severe frost has practically killed all outdoor flowers. A few straggling asters and calendulas are about all that remain. The rose supply would be equal to all requirements if transportation facilities were available and reliable, but express delays seem inevitable. Carnations are scarce, and while a few chrysanthemums are offered, there is no quality stock as yet. Dahlias from the east are good when they get here, but they are uncertain as to arrival. Trade in general has been very good.

NOTES.

The regular meeting of the florists' club was held at Kasting's hall October 1 with the largest attendance in some time. George Tyler addressed the members on the subject of the Liberty Loan and Chairman Anderson and his committee were on hand to aid in bringing the florists' quota up to $89,000. The results were very satisfactory. President Wernick had arranged for a discussion on the flower business from the standpoints of the growers, wholesalers and retailers, among the speakers being Harold Brookins, of Orchard Park. George B. Hart, of Rochester, who was unable to be present, sent a very interesting paper which was read by the secretary. Mr. Brookins also brought out some very fine and new ideas on how to run a range on a systematic basis. Edward Slattery, retailer, who had been invited to speak, asked to be excused until the next meeting, as he had not been able to complete his paper. Following the business session, lunch was served.

The one-hundredth anniversary of one of the city's leading firms gave many of the florists orders for quantities of American Beauties and other choice flowers.

No window lights in store windows and a street car strike has made night trade poor. Some stores are now closing at 6 p. m.

BISON.

PATERSON, N. J.—The Paterson Floricultural Society held an excellent flower show in the Y. M. C. A. building, September 28. A liberal donation was made to the Red Cross.

JAMESTOWN, O.—One of the seven houses at the range of James Johnson was almost completely destroyed by fire recently. The engine room and sheds were also damaged.

Do You Believe In Team Work?

Do you believe that 100 soldiers organized for an attack will be more effective than 100 soldiers each fighting his own little battle?

Then you believe in the War Savings Society, for here dimes, quarters and dollars are organized to fight—and they fight more surely and more effectively because of the organization.

How about your friends or employees? Are they organized to save? Are they banded together to release men, money and materials for essential war work by saving on non-essentials.

If they are not will you organize them? Will you start a Society? Will you volunteer to lead a company of war savers?

More than 116,000 societies have already been formed with 6,000,000 members, but we have just begun!

It's up to you. We'll gladly give you full information.

STOCK IS EXTREMELY SCARCE.

Stock of all kinds is extremely scarce and it is impossible to fill anywhere near the large demand. The heaviest call is for funeral flowers, causing a complete cleanup in practically all items including outdoor stock which never realized such high prices as it did during the past week. The demand, Saturday, October 5, was particularly heavy and everything that looked like a flower sold at a high figure. Mildewed roses that would find the dump in ordinary times sold at surprisingly good figures and chrysanthemums that in former years sold at 50 cents to 75 cents per dozen, at this period brought as high as $3 and $4. Stock was never so scarce in this market as it was the past week, owing to the heavy demand and never brought such high prices going all down the line at a holiday including Christmas, which will give the out-of-town buyer an idea of the general market conditions here. A $20 or $30 package of flowers is so small that when one sees it one can hardly believe it possible until he begins to do a little figuring which makes him wonder how the retail florist gets by. The retail florist, however, is not complaining, for business has been good with him, with an extremely heavy demand for funeral work. One loop florist's sales last week averaged over $500 per day compared to $100 a day for the same period of 1917, and other reports are along the same line, and all very encouraging. One wholesaler says that his firm has already done enough business in October to make the total months' sales greater than those of the same 31 days of last year, even if business takes the biggest kind of a slump the next three weeks, which is hardly likely. Carnations are scarce as can be and so are roses of all kinds including American Beauty, which are moving quickly at prices above the advertised quotations, and clean up satisfactorily at all times. The outdoor stock is about done, especially gladioli and asters. Chrysanthemums are none too plentiful and command high prices. Orchids are in fair supply but there is a great shortage of lily of the valley. Lilies are very scarce. Violets, calendulas, daisies, snapdragons, and pansies are included in the offerings. Greens are in fair supply but there was a temporary scarcity of ferns last week. A large number of out-of-town visitors were here the past week in quest of stock, which from all reports received is scarce in practically every section of the country. California chrysanthemums made their appearance in quantity in the local wholesale market this week.

NOTES.

Fred Lautenschlager, chairman of the Florists' Liberty Loan Committee, called a meeting of all members of the local trade in the east room of the Hotel La Salle, last Sunday, October 6, which was poorly attended and means that another call will be issued and all those who were not present then will be requested to attend. The chief object of the meeting was to boost the subscription of Liberty Bonds. The trade is expected to subscribe for at least $300,000 worth but are still far from their quota and it is up to some to come across and buy more. Mr. Lautenschlager reports that the subscriptions at the meeting were as follows: August Poehlmann, $10,000; additional subscriptions, Allie Zech, $500; Charles Fisk, $3,000; Hoerber Bros., $500; Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., $1,000; Stielow Bros. Co., $500; Ernest Amling, $200; W. B. Wallace, $200; Edward Muret, $300; Batavia Greenhouse Co., $600; O. A. Tonner, $100; William Kalous, $200, and Weiland & Risch, $300. Paul Weiss, Ernst Weinhoeber Co., Sam Pearce and several others present promised to increase their subscriptions. Mr. and Mrs. August Erickson, 5825 Rogers avenue, retired florists, were present and subscribed $500 worth of bonds to help back up their two boys who are at the front with Pershing. W. E. Beebe was the principal speaker and aided materially in having those present increase their subscriptions.

Mrs. Frances Spickerman, proprietor of the Sandwich Greenhouses, Sandwich, is more than a 100 per cent American and the mother of two real patriots. Her son Francis is a wireless operator on the steamer Alabama, now plying on the Great Lakes, and another son, Dr. Arthur Spickerman, who was stationed in the medical department at Ft. Sheridan, was here transferred to Evanston, where he has charge of the fight against the Spanish influenza. In addition to giving her two sons to the service she donated enough flowers and plants to the county fair at Sandwich to realize $178 for the Red Cross. Mrs. Spickerman was a visitor this week, but was too modest to volunteer this item, which was obtained through a close friend.

An examination for the position of gardener will be held at the offices of the West Park board in Union park, October 15, 1918, at 8:30 a. m. Applications must be filed in the offices of the board in Union park before 5:00 p. m., October 14. The examination is open to men 21 years of age or over regardless of residence. Original entrance pay is 37½ to 50 cents per hour. The duties include identification, general care, planting and characteristics of trees, shrubs and perennials, and making and maintaining lawns.

Miss Marguerite McNulty made a trip to the Peter Reinberg greenhouses at the farm last week in the firm's truck and succeeded in selling every one of the eight employees a good sized Liberty bond. She is particularly well pleased with the showing, for every one of the men were born in Germany, but are nevertheless 100 per cent Americans. Miss McNulty is not through with her job yet and it would not be at all surprising if she turned in another pretty big subscription before the drive is over.

Herbert E. Smith, of Frank B. Smith's Sons, Danville, was here on a buying mission last week. His firm has a nice military wedding order booked for October 12, which includes the church and home decorations. The bride-to-be is Miss Virginia Le Seure, a granddaughter of Uncle Joe Cannon. Mr. Smith's many friends here had to look twice before they recognized him minus his mustache.

J. S. Wilson, of Des Moines, Ia., passed through here October 7 en route to Cleveland, O., where he is attending the ninth annual F. T. D. meeting. He has charge of the trade division in the present Liberty Bond drive at Des Moines, which has already gone way above its quota, as did the city and state, the latter having the honor of being first in the Union.

A meeting of the creditors of the bankrupt firm of Pyfer & Olsem, Wilmette, will be held at the office of Sidney C. Eastman, referee in bankruptcy, 903 Monadnock block, this city, at 10 a. m., October 15, at which time creditors may attempt to prove their claims, appoint a trustee and transact such other business as may come before the meeting.

T. E. Waters is attending the ninth annual meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, Cleveland, O., this week, where he has charge of Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s trade exhibit. Mr. Waters left early, as did James Morton, E. C. Pruner and Sam Seligman, of New York, who happened to be in the city.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports that business the past two weeks was exceptionally good, the demand for funeral work being particularly heavy. Andrew Chronis says that the daily sales during this period were surprisingly large compared to the same two weeks of 1917.

Zech & Mann have oversubscribed their quota of Liberty bonds and a 100% honor emblem now decorates the office. Business at this house is exceedingly brisk and stock of all kinds is at a premium. Chrysanthemums are more plentiful here, but move quickly at high prices.

George Weiland of Evanston is able to be about again after being laid up for several days with the Spanish influenza. His right hand man, Charles London, thought he would not be in style unless he had it also, so he followed suit and is confined to his home this week.

H. Van Gelder, president and manager of Percy Jones, Inc., is again on duty after being confined to his home with an attack of Spanish influenza. His firm is handling a large quantity of chrysanthemums in addition to a heavy supply of magnolia leaves.

Stanley Ida, 2540 South Fifthth court, Cicero, manages to hold down two jobs at one time. He works at the Western Electric Co. nights and looks after his greenhouses as well with the assistance of his brother.

A. F. Longren has an exhibit of baskets in room 50 at the Palmer House, where his friends are invited to call and inspect same.

A. C. Kohlman, of the E. C. Amling Co., is back on the job after three weeks' jury service in the criminal court.

Morris Grossberg, of the Grossberg-Tyler-Finnerman Co., is back from a successful out-of-town business trip.

George Kaspar, of the Batavia Greenhouse Co., is back on the job after being on the sick list for several days.

Peter Mamomas of the Alpha Floral Co. is back from a pleasant visit at New York.

H. B. Kennicott, of Kennicott Bros. Co., left this week on a business trip to Florida.

A Miller, of the American Bulb Co., is back from a business trip to New York.

The florists' club will meet at the Randolph hotel, October 10, at 8 p. m. Rolf Zettlitz, of Lima, O., spent a few days here on business this week.

E. Allan Peirce, distributor of Peirce paper flower pots, Waltham, Mass., is calling on the trade here this week. Mr. Peirce is also engaged in the growing business with his brother under the firm name of Peirce Brothers. He says that stock is as scarce in the east as it is here, but believes the local dealers are realizing higher prices for their product right now.

Walter A. Moore, of the Hollywood Gardens, Seattle, Wash., who is on his way to Washington, D. C., stopped off here October 8. He reports business as good, and says that William Desmond, our old friend from Minneapolis, Minn., is doing finely and is so well pleased with the western country that he has bought a home there.

O. J. Friedman is having a big run on funeral work and a good call for wedding flowers. Mr. Friedman is devoting almost all of his time to Uncle Sam as a public speaker and even goes so far as to pay his own traveling expenses, which he is more than willing to do for the good old United States.

Bussett & Washburn's force has been working under difficulties the past week, quite a number of the employees being sick with the Spanish influenza.

The office crowd was the hardest hit. Miss Harper was the only one to escape.

A board of retail florists held a mock trial one day this week, when it found the local wholesale market guilty of what one calls high profiteering. The penalty will be made known when there is a glut.

Arthur Liebermann, younger brother of Fred Liebermann, of Kennicott Bros. Co., died this week at Jefferson Baracks with pneumonia.

Joe Marks, with A. Henderson & Co., is back from a trip through the east with a short stay at New York.

George Wienhoeber has a very appropriate window at his South Wabash avenue store that is making all those that pass by stop, look and think. The scene is staged in France and the hero of the big act is a sergeant in the United States Army, who is standing over a dead German with fixed bayonet ready to tackle more. The sergeant is wounded in the leg, but the do or die spirit gathered from the grim look of determination on his face is wonderful and gives one an idea of the caliber of men that are over there. The idea of the window is to aid the Fourth Liberty Loan and is so realistic that the fuel administrator gave him a special permit to keep the light burning, so as to give the public a chance to see it.

Fred Lautenschlager, chairman of the Florists' Liberty Loan Committee, reports that the trade subscribed for $209,600 worth of bonds which represent 1,407 subscriptions. The committee will have to hustle some to secure the balance, $90,400, so everyone who has not already bought a bond through the trade or can possibly buy more should do so immediately, for this line of industry cannot possibly afford to fall short of its quota. The florists as a rule are a little slow to come across, but are always there at the finish with the "I Will" spirit. Everyone should get busy quick and help the committee by buying as many more as he possibly can. Do it now.

Chris Pedersen, 58 East Randolph street, is having a heavy run on funeral work. He is not complaining of the high prices now prevailing in the market and says that the public seem to understand the situation fully, but they appear to be willing to pay the price and ask no questions. He had an order for a blanket from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station last Sunday, October 6, that cleaned up all the stock he had on hand.

Mrs. Stuart, of the Bohannon Floral Co., George Asmus, manager of Schiller's, Paul Klingsporn, manager of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, and J. E. Quallich and Frank McCabe of the A. L. Randall Co., are attending the F. T. D. meeting at Cleveland, O., this week. Mrs. Stuart will visit relatives in Canada before returning home.

Allie Zech has just received a letter from Jack Beyers, who has been with the American troops in several big battles since July 4, and writes that he is still safe and sound. He adds that Leo Koropp, son of the well-known manager of the Ohio Floral Co., who was gassed Poehlmann Bros. Co. is in good crop with American Beauty roses of splendid quality that are commanding as high as $7.50 per dozen this week. Mrs. Chas. Russell are seen in good supply at this store this week, as well as orchids, especially Cattleya labiata.

Wietor Bros. are cutting quite heavily of Ophelia roses, which are in exceedingly brisk demand at high prices. N. J. Wietor is busy during his spare moments in selling Liberty Bonds and has made a remarkable showing in his restricted territory.

Carl Werner, who has been with C. Fraunfelder for many years, manages to visit the wholesale market occasionally. He reports business as good, with a strong demand for funeral work.

The George Wittbold Co.'s retail department is working overtime to meet the heavy demand for funeral designs which keep pouring in from all parts of the city and county.

Jerry Kohout, who is in Class 1 of the draft, expects to be called to the colors in the near future. His brother, Edward, is now with the American troops in France.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are having a good run on boxwood this week, which they are handling in quantity, in addition to a complete line of other green goods.

J. Nichols, of Dale & Nichols, Hancock, Mich., passed through the city October 9, enroute to Chillicothe, O., where his brother is seriously ill.

Weiland & Risch are cutting a good supply of roses, particularly Mrs. Chas. Russell and Mrs. Bayard Thayer, two of the best varieties on their list.

Vaughan's Seed Store received a shipment of candidum lily bulbs this week, French stock.

Private C. C. Wilmore, of Denver, Colo., stopped off here this week on his way back to an eastern camp.

Business during the past week has been very good, unusually so for the first week in October, but stock has been very scarce. Roses are still in limited supply and have greatly advanced in price. Carnations have also taken an upward jump, being few in number. Gladioli of good quality are

SUPPLY RATIONED OUT.

With an ever increasing demand, especially for funeral work, and with the supply of cut flowers diminishing instead of increasing, it was a rather perplexing situation last week, the like of which has not been experienced in some time past. Business was so good, September 27-28, that there was absolutely nothing to be had, Sunday, September 29. What came in, September 30, was soon cleaned up. Then to make matters worse, the same night a frost put an end to all outdoor stock, thus throwing the demand on greenhouse goods. Roses, which continued in good supply, were the mainstay at advanced prices. The limited cut of carnations, both good and inferior, were quickly disposed of, the shipping orders claiming most of this stock, leaving the local trade to shift for itself. Local chrysanthemums are not yet coming in to speak of, and the few that reach the counters are taken in a hurry. Both Easter and rubrum lilies are short of the demand. The saying now is not, "How much for the stock?" but "How much can I have?" regardless of price.

NOTES.

The florists' club meeting, October 3, was well attended, as usual. H. V. Hunkel, chairman of the state fair committee, made a detailed report, which proved that through the untiring work of this committee, we are today on better terms with officials of the fair board, which undoubtedly will make it much easier for all concerned to help make the horticultural display more creditable as time goes on. C. C. Pollworth, president of the Wisconsin State Florists' Association, reported having added several new members, without solicitation, and feels confident that real work in this enterprise, which will be taken up soon, will result in nearly every outsider in the state joining to further the business in general. The trustees made an invoice of the cut flower vases, which were used at our large chrysanthemum shows several years ago, and at present prices prove a valuable asset of the local club. It was decided that at the November 7 meeting a general discussion on commercial chrysanthemums from growers, retailers and commissionmen's standpoints, be discussed. Growers are asked to bring an assortment of cut blooms which they grow.

The local florists' advertising club held its fall meeting September 12. It was decided to defray the expense of decorating the float, "Liberty," which appeared in the grand Liberty Loan parade, September 28. The work was executed by the A. F. Kellner Co., under numerous unavoidable obstacles and handicaps. It was also voted to push the sale of chrysanthemums during the month of November, further, to make more use of advertising in the local electric cars. The daily press will also come in for its share.

Herm. Arndt, Jr., of Wauwatosa, who is one of the faithful club members, was stricken with Spanish influenza, September 30. He is progressing favorably, being able to sit up for a short time, October 7.

While the weather for the month thus far was cool, the thermometer, October 5, reached 78° in the shade, reminding us of the "good old summer time."

Edw. J. Hamme, of Wauwatosa, who was to have entered a training camp last week, has been granted an extension of time to November 1.

MODERATE VOLUME OF BUSINESS.

Business during the week has been fair. Funeral work was quite heavy and in some cases it was a problem to get the variety of flowers required. Dahlias are arriving in all their glory, and while the supply is heavy, they have been moving at exceptional prices owing to the lack of other stock. Roses of excellent quality have a ready call. Carnations are poor as a whole, but on account of the limited supply are bringing high figures. Some very fine gladioli are still to be seen. Asters are through, only a few straggling shipments arriving. Violets have been plentiful, but keep very poorly. In greens the market is equal to the demand.

NOTES.

Otto Bruenig is cutting some very fine Ophelia and Russell. His cut of the former is particularly heavy and of excellent quality. He is a hard worker and deserves the success that seems to be coming to him.

Jos. Hauser is cutting very heavily of his single red. He states that this year he will have no violets, as they all died out this summer. He expects to have some fine sweet peas in place of violets this year.

Winder Wholesale Floral Co. is getting in some elegant gladioli. In fact, the stock coming in now seems to be better than any seen on the market for some months.

Oscar May and W. A. Rowe are cutting some very fine dahlias. Their varieties include show, single and display types, in all colors and sizes.

C. A. Kuehn is receiving some very fine dahlias.
J. J. W.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—The Good & Reese Co. has made improvements to its cold storage plant.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Henry Krinke & Son are dismantling their range, and it is reported they will discontinue business.

BUSINESS UNUSUALLY GOOD.

For this season of the year, the weather is oppressively hot, and the dry spell continues. The leaves are falling from the trees at every gust of wind, more from the drought than from the earlier light frosts. As yet, no damage has been done by frost, probably owing to the exceeding dryness. Trade continues good, however, and a visit on Sunday morning to the flower stores gave no token of lax business, though all say it has been rather quiet of late. There are now no social functions and very few weddings, the latter of a very quiet and unostentatious kind. The quality of flowers has not yet taken in the full beauty of a later and cooler season. Roses are still small and none too plentiful, but such roses as Killarney, Columbia, Shawyer, Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Russell and perhaps some others, are coming in, but are small, close buds, and there is room for lots of improvement. Carnations are some better, but by no means in a state of perfection. There seems to be but few lilies, for the first time in many months

NOTES.

The Joy Floral Company is having a good cut of flowers daily, and find sale for all they get. They have a very fine supply of carnations of all colors, the Alice and White Wonder being particularly good. They have just brought in their first chrysanthemums, the White Advance. They will be plentiful in a few more days. The firm is cutting a sufficient lot of good flowers to supply their own local trade, and to sustain a brisk demand in the Chattanooga house, which is doing a fine business. They also have a good supply of the Lillium giganteum, the only one in the city. Thomas H. Joy had planned to attend the F. T. D. convention at Cleveland, but the recent fuel order for limited closing so interfered with his business, that he thought it best to stay at home and look out for his own interests and therefore will not go. They have three of their working force out with influenza. There is a good plant trade in cyclamens, begonias and solanums. They have fine orders on boxes of complimentary cut flowers as well as funeral designs.

The florists here are all considerably upset by the latest local fuel administration ruling, which limits the opening and working hours from 9 a. m. to 5:30 p. m., and they are forbidden to enter their workshops even for funeral work. They say this will work a great hardship, and some kind of a get-together meeting will be had in the next day or two seeking a modification of this order.

Labor is still scarce, getting scarcer and higher priced. The growers are employing colored women and any available old men. The Spanish influenza is playing a part, too, and there are many vacancies in the working forces. Prices on all kinds of flowers are much advanced. The new Columbia rose is bringing $3 to $5 per dozen, some very fine specimens at the latter price being shown.

Geny Bros. are cutting some splendid Columbia roses, for which they are getting $5 per dozen. They also have Russell, Ophelia and Kaiserin. This firm is about the last to grow the American Beauty, and they are cutting some fine ones. They made a pall Sunday entirely of American Beauty for a young lady for which they got $125. This rose is bringing $12 per dozen. The Spanish influenza has attacked the family of Leon Geny and several members are down with it.

McIntyre Bros. have been doing a rushing business in cut flowers, plants and funeral work. They have no lilies, but fine carnations, roses and plants.

DAILY CLEANUP OF LIMITED OFFERINGS.

The market continues to sell out each day, with no customer getting his full requirements. Flowers seem to be very scarce, or else the demand is unusual. Lilies, dahlias and American Beauties are arriving in large numbers, but the receipts are not nearly equal to the demand. Practically all outdoor varieties are done for, with the exception of dahlias and a few gladioli, which are welcome under the circumstances. Some good yellow chrysanthemums are seen, at prices ranging around $3 per dozen, and are considered very good for early varieties. Larger shipments are expected soon, with a corresponding drop in prices. Lilies have advanced to $18 per 100, and there are not enough to supply all calls. The stock is exceptionally good. American Beauties still hold firm in price and clean up without trouble daily. Yellow daisies and snapdragons have made their appearance. There is an ample supply of greens of all kinds.

CLUB MEETING.

A campaign to beautify the gardens and parks throughout the city during the winter months and, incidentally, to furnish food for the birds was inaugurated at a meeting of the florists' and gardeners' club, in the north side Carnegie library, October 1, by Wm. Falconer, superintendent of Allegheny cemetery. He said: "In October there is not much in our gardens that is attractive, for the frost has come and most of the flowers are past. Our eyes feast on the beautiful colored foliage of our trees and shrubs. Now, it is right here where the showy fruited plants come in; no matter if the bushes on which they grow become withered, the berries or fruits stand out with vivid beauty for weeks, and in several cases last well through the winter. In many instances, these shrubs, the viburnums and crabapples, for example, are among the most popular and showy garden plants when in bloom." Mr. Falconer illustrated his address with 90 different kinds of fruited or berried shrubs, most of which were sent to him from the botanical parks of Rochester, N. Y., which, next to the Arnold Arboretum at Boston, have the richest collection of rare trees and shrubs in the country. The exhibition included 19 varieties of barberry seven of vividly berried cotoneasters, 11 of haws, four of evonymus (or spindle trees), 11 of crabapples (whose fruit ranged from the size of peas to that of marbles), 14 of roses, seven of viburnums, the snowball family of the shrubs, the buffalo berry, the sea buckthorn, and two forms of buckhorn from the mountains of northern Asia with showy black fruit. Among the plants in the Pittsburgh collection were sprays of evonymus fruits, brilliant viburnums, strings of golden climbing waxwork, red haws, and snowberry. The exhibit and address were very interesting to all present, and a vote of thanks was extended to the city parks of Rochester and Mr. Falconer. "Dahlias" was the subject for the evening, and some beautiful local and out-of-town exhibits were shown. Mr. Becherer, of Dixmont hospital, had a fine collection of new seedling dahlias of the single and show varieties, which was awarded a cultural certificate. The McCallum Co. showed a fine variety of commercial dahlias, grown by W. W. Maytrott, of Vineland, N. J., which were the finest ever seen in this city. Mr. Knauf, who has his gardens in the heart of the city, showed a vase of outdoor roses which were a credit to him, considering the conditions under which they were grown. "Chrysanthemums" is the subject for the next meeting. Hereafter the club will meet in the rooms of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., 116 Seventh street.

FUNERAL DEMAND SWEEPS MARKET CLEAN.

The ravages of the Spanish influenza, which has become epidemic throughout this section of country and is carrying off great numbers of people daily, particularly young adults of both sexes who ordinarily are immune to disease, has created a condition in the flower market which is without precedent. At no time in the history of the business has there been such a scarcity of flowers at this season of the year, and never before at any season such a demand in the stores for flowers for funerals. The Philadelphia papers carry from 350 to 400 death notices daily, the death rate being at least three times that of normal conditions. In nearly all the stores there is the same answer to many who call: "We are very sorry, but we cannot take any more orders; we cannot get the flowers to fill them." In the wholesale houses there is great excitement in the early morning, which continues for the most part all day long. As the boxes come in and are opened they are surrounded by eager buyers, who put up all sorts of special pleas to get stock. Under such conditions prices soar—nothing in dahlias under four cents anywhere, and in some stores six and others eight cents for the same grades of stock. Exceptionally fine flowers bring good figures; one case of 40 Yellow Peril brought $5. There has not been half, or even one-third enough stock to supply the orders. Roses are in short crop at present; the lowest grades bring six cents and from this in two-cent jumps up to 12, and from this on up to $20 and $25 per hundred for the teas, and as high as $6 to $7.50 for American Beauties. Easter lilies are sold on sight at $15, all in bud. Chrysanthemums bring unheard-of figures. Golden Glow, just good ordinary, have sold for $5 per dozen; the best white brings $5. Some of the wholesalers do not ask more than $2.50 to $3 for almost the same grades, preferring to serve their regular customers at as moderate prices as possible. Such stock last year would not have brought more than $1.50 to $2 per dozen at the outside. Carnations are quickly grabbed up at $5 to $6, short-stemmed and inferior, as most of them are. All kinds of outdoor rubbish, or weeds as some call them, eupatorium, gentian, hardy aster, etc., are also taken at 25 to 50 cents per bunch. Calendulas, marigolds and geranium heads bring three to six cents, while larkspur sells very fine flowers are offered at from 40 to 60 cents. All kinds of greens, asparagus, dagger and fancy ferns are in strong demand, asparagus at 50 cents a bunch, ferns $3 per thousand. In a tour through the southern section of the city the past week, all the retail stores were found swamped with work, such a demand as they had never before experienced. People were coming in offering business, only to be turned down, as all the available stock was already sold. And there appeared no more to be had at any price. In most stores, they appeared to be without stocks of madeup magnolia wreaths, which are great time savers in emergencies such as this. A few flowers and greens with a ribbon or chiffon bow, which can be placed on a

COMMENT OF THE WHOLESALEERS.

Manager Stewart, of the Philadelphia Wholesale Florist Exchange, could not keep pace at all with the demand, although they have very good shipments of roses and dahlias. He had never seen a situation in the trade like it. "We are holding our end up with our customers the best we can. I do not think our regulars can complain, except possibly, the increasing prices may surprise them, which are inevitable owing to the unusual conditions. I have never before known as strong a demand on such a short market."

The various wholesalers commented freely on the unusual situation. Leo Niessen said he never experienced such a scarcity of flowers and extraordinary demand at the same time in all his years of business. He thought there would be a change for the better soon, as towards the last of the week they were receiving better stocks of dahlias, sending out on Friday over 80 orders from 100 up.

Harry Berger said he never saw the market so bare, there not being one-fourth the flowers necessary for the demand.

NOTES.

Flowers took another jump, October 7. Special Ophelias went to 30 cents, Easter lilies to $25 per hundred, with everything else taking at least a 20 per cent increase. The supply increased, but so also did the demand. There are now over 180,000 people affected with more or less severe cases of influenza in this city, with deaths, October 6, of nearly 400. The demand in the retail stores is continuous, nearly all for funeral flowers. Nothing approaching such conditions has ever before been experienced. Good grades of dahlias are bringing $3 per dozen. Easter lilies $6 per dozen, chrysanthemums $8 to $10. Almost everything else, particularly in made up work, is 100 per cent higher than a week ago.

The Spanish influenza, which is epidemic and particularly severe in this city and vicinity, has affected the craft in common with others. Theodore Shober, of the Joseph Heacock Co., foreman of the palm ranges at Wyncote, died from pneumonia, Oct. 9, caused by the influenza. Charles H. Grakelow is also down with it. His case is also very severe. The trade is deeply solicitous for this prominent man of the craft, frequent bulletins keeping them in touch with his condition. The wife of Wm. W. Crawford, son of Robert Crawford, died from influenza, October 5. His daughter was also very ill, but is now recovering.

The trade was greatly shocked to hear of the death of Herbert Meehan, son of Charles E. Meehan, a young man only 20 years of age, in the full vigor of his young manhood. For the past summer he has had charge of his father's greenhouses at Churchville, making a very satisfactory foreman. He was taken ill with influenza, September 30, and although he received the best of medical care and attention he died, October 2. The full sympathy of the craft is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Meehan in their great affliction.

The Robert Craig Co. is working overtime in getting out their orders. All those with greenhouse space are stocking up now, so as to have plants on hand before the express service handicaps are further complicated with freezing temperature. Even now embargoes are every day or two declared against shipments in this or that direction. Their every department is filled with stock in splendid condition, which, considering present handicaps, is a great achievement.

Harry F. Betz has purchased the crop of dahlia cut flowers of Henry A. Droeer, Inc., at Riverton. There are 60 acres under cultivation, grown entirely for the roots. They have not before sold the cut flowers, but owing to the extraordinary conditions finally agreed to allow Mr. Betz to market them, provided he furnished the help and transportation.

The Jos. G. Neidinger Co. has never before had such a demand for all kinds of artificial designs, loose flowers, magnolia wreaths, etc., as during the past month. Each mail brings in a number of orders, which together with telegrams and a large local demand, make up an enormous volume of business.

W. J. Baker, who is the oldest commission man in the business, says he never in all his experience saw such a demand, together with the scarcity of flowers at this season. He believes that prices will rule much higher this year than last.

The Jos. Heacock Co., in trying to get their Royal greenhouses on Friday last, were told the government had the wire for three hours, with the result there were no additional shipments that day.

Eugene Bernheimer reports an extraordinary demand for roses at the Florex Gardens.

Samuel Lilley is back again with Charles E. Meehan. Ed Dornheim is still on the job awaiting his call to war work.

Otto Thilow is back at his desk again after a week of fighting with the prevailing grip or influenza.

New York.

OUTSIDE DEMAND CAUSES SHORTAGE.

The great demand during the past week from Boston and other cities, for flowers for funeral work, created an unusual and unprecedented condition in the wholesale district, particularly for this season of the year. Number 2 roses jumped to $4, $5 and in some instances, $6 per 100; No. 1, to $6 and $8; lilies, 20 cents per flower; carnations, $4 to $6 per 100, and there were sales at $8. In special American Beauty and tea roses, the movement and prices were little, if any, above normal for the season. Dahlias also brought high prices. At this writing, there has not been sufficient frost to kill outdoor stock and much that under ordinary conditions might receive scant notice, is now going freely, as it comes in well for bunches. This includes cosmos, of which there is a fair supply on the market, cut celosias, wild asters, marigolds and even small lots of gailardias and sweet williams. A few of the cultivated asters are yet arriving, which are quickly taken, if they have any quality. As many orchids and chrysanthemums are arriving as needed to supply the demand. The local retailers report but little improvement in business, and are consequently displeased with the prices they have to pay. There was an increase in the arrivals of roses during the latter part of the week, and present conditions may soon pass over; but the board of health reports an increase in deaths from influenza and pneumonia, which will inevitably increase the demand for funeral work. In this connection, it may be stated that October 4, the board established a stringent schedule of opening and closing hours for all branches of business in the city. All stores (retail) shall open at 8 a. m. and close at 4 p. m. food and drug stores excepted. All wholesale and jobbing houses shall open at 8:15 a. m. and close at 4:15 p. m. All offices shall open at 8:30 a. m. and close at 4:30 p. m. The idea is to lessen the congestion in the subways and on other transportation lines. Health Commissioner Copeland has not yet thought it necessary to close the schools.

October 7.—Conditions in the wholesale district remain about the same as at the close of business, October 5, though some of the dealers predict a break in prices before the end of this week. That, however, is uncertain. Buyers arriving from Boston this morning report conditions unchanged there. A much larger supply of chrysanthemums reached this market today, but the large blooms such as are held at $4 to $6 per dozen, are very slow. One wholesaler stated this morning that several of the large retail stores had stopped buying lilies when the asking prices went to 20 and 25 cents per flower, saying that they could not serve their customers at such prices. Orchids continue plentiful and slow at 40 cents per flower for the best.

NOTES.

Relating to Liberty Bonds and Huns, ancient and modern, in his great history, "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," Edward Gibbon wrote: (Vol. 3, Chap. 26.) "The valor of the Huns could be rewarded only by the enjoyment of the wealth and luxury of the empire of the south." In the third century before the Christian era, a wall, 1,500 miles in length, was constructed, to defend the frontiers of China against the inroads of the Huns; but this stupendous work, which holds a conspicuous place in the map of the world, has never contributed to the safety of an unwarlike people." The modern Huns are greater robbers than were those of whom Gibbon wrote, but must be fought differently, with hearts and weapons of steel, therefore, Buy Liberty Bonds.

The price of rose perfume is likely to go higher, but we hasten to state that it cannot be blamed to the coal shortage or the wholesale florists. Bulgaria is the seat of production of the damask rose, from which the attar of roses is extracted, and rose cultivation for this purpose has been an active industry. Since Bulgaria entered the war, the rose farms have been neglected, and it is stated that the annual production of attar has fallen from 11,000 to 4,800 pounds, and that on account of their poor quality it takes 60 pounds of roses to produce five grains of attar, whereas when properly cared for, 35 pounds of roses sufficed. Bulgaria being now out of the war, let us hope that its peasants will return to the gentler art of rose growing.

On account of the breaking of wire connections, delaying of trains and general confusion, news comes in slowly from the New Jersey towns affected by the great explosion at Morgan, near Perth Amboy. In the various towns affected there is considerable greenhouse glass, and as windows were broken in this city as far north as 26th street, it is reasonable to suppose that some of the growers have suffered loss.

The Dailledouze brothers, Frank H. Traendly and Joseph A. Manda made an auto trip October 3 to various growing establishments. From there they went to Tarrytown and viewed the activities of the F. R. Pierson Co. After dinner at F. R. Pierson's, taking him along, they journeyed to the Rowatton Greenhouses and other places in Connecticut.

Up to the close of business, October 5, the committees of the florists and allied trades canvassing for the Liberty Loan, had secured subscriptions and pledges amounting to $86,000. It is believed that they will pass the quarter million mark before the drive ends.

A fire in the building, 157-159 West 29th street, on the morning of October 5, completely gutted it, destroying the florist basket factory of Louis G'eits-

HEAVY DEMAND WITH LIMITED SUPPLY.

There has been a big demand for all seasonable flowers during the week, especially roses, lilies and chrysanthemums. Funeral work has been heavier than at any other time this season, with an especially good call for large pieces. Never before at this season of the year has there been such a shortage of so many different varieties of flowers. Outdoor varieties are practically over, with the exception of a few late asters, calendulas, cosmos, marigolds and zinnias. Easter lilies are quite scarce, and roses are not at all sufficiently numerous to satisfy the demand, although some excellent quality blooms are coming into this market, in Richmonds, Milady, Ward, Hoosier Beauty, and Columbia. Chrysanthemums are slower in coming in this year than ever, due of course to the unfavorable weather. With a little sunshine, the florists are hopeful of a profitable month, as there is every indication of a continuance of the splendid demand of the last fortnight.

NOTES.

The Flick Floral Co. is showing the first pompons of the season, and some excellent early pink double chrysanthemums. They have several large decorations for the style show, consisting of a massing of autumn foliage and large palms and ferns for the background, large baskets of Hoosier Beauty and Russell roses, and large pink, yellow and white chrysanthemums. They also have some large out-of-town wedding decorations this week.

The chrysanthemum stock of Edgar Wenninghoff at his greenhouses, is showing much promise, and will be ready for cutting in about a week. A. S. Wenninghoff has charge of the growing end of the business. Trade has been unusually fine at the store, with a heavy demand for funeral work, and some difficulty in procuring enough stock with which to fill all orders.

The Doswell Floral Co. has a nice crop of roses, sufficient to supply their own demand, and a good crop of Easter lilies coming on. They are cutting some fine yellow, white, and dark red chrysanthemums, and report a good general line of business, with funeral pieces in the greatest demand.

A. J. Lanternier & Co. are cutting some fine early pink chrysanthemums, in addition to their yellow and white varieties. They have several decorations booked for the style show this week, and sent out a number of handsome funeral pieces.

Rolf Zettlitz, of Lima, Ohio, is shipping some fine, long-stemmed roses in many different varieties to this market.

Visitors: M. I. Hollender, representing the Duro Paper Box Co., Chicago, and I. M. Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held June, 1919.

A BRITISH steamer arrived this week with 10,000 cases of bulbs aboard.

CINCINNATI, O.—J. Charles McCullough is very busy with Fourth Liberty Loan work.

CALIFORNIA seed growers are now making contract offers for producing the 1919 crop.

J. C. VAUGHAN, Chicago, attended the Illinois centennial celebrations at Springfield last week.

A CONTRACT for a commercial fertilizer plant at Hammond, Ind., to cost $493,000 has been let by Swift & Co.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—A. J. Brown, of the A. J. Brown Seed Co., visited New York and Philadelphia last week.

Two Maryland canning concerns have each recently received government awards of $50,000 worth of tomatoes.

THE peanut crop of 1918 is estimated to be worth $150,000,000. The peanut is an excellent restorer for worn out cotton land.

HERBERT HOOVER, Federal Food Administrator, warns farmers not to sell their grain at less than the government's price.

A FRENCH steamer recently brought quite a quantity of high grade enamel book paper. Their industries are evidently still flourishing in certain lines.

LAST year's importations of mushroom spawn amounted to 16,923 pounds while the average annual importation prior to 1915 was 279,064 pounds.

GRASS SEED.—Prices for grass seed on the Chicago Board of Trade October 9 were as follows: Timothy, $8.00 to $10.50 per 100 pounds, no change from last week.

THE farm implement industry, although classed as essential, has been ordered by the war industries board to curtail consumption of iron and steel 25 per cent, as an aid to the war programme.

TOLDO, O.—Clover made a 5 to 10 cent drop October 1, closing at $22.60, a fall of 40 cents during the week. Cash timothy was 5 cents higher, selling at $4.95. September closed at $5.00, December, $5.15, March $5.25, and April $5.27½.

NEW YORK.—Robert W. MacNiff, 52-56 Vesey street, has filed schedules in bankruptcy with liabilities consisting of unsecured claims amounting to $55,958, and assets of $7,247, represented by stock, $5,525; accounts due, $1,219 and unliquidated claims, $523.

WHEAT AND CORN.—The estimate of the United States department of agriculture, October 8, indicates the wheat crop at 918,920,000 bushels as compared with the final figure of 650,828,000 in 1917. The indicated corn crop is 2,717,775,000 bushels as against 3,159,494,000 the final figure last year.

Wholesale Seedsmen's League.

At a meeting of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League held at New York October 8, the prevailing opinion was that values in general were about the same as last year. The advance in cabbage was heavy, but slight in kohlrabi, parsley, leek, salsify, lettuce, squash and kale. There were reductions in beans, sweet corn, carrot, onion, turnip and spinach.

Those in attendance were: F. W. Bolgiano, of F. W. Bolgiano & Co., Washington, D. C.; Lem W. Bowen and Kirby B. White, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Mich.; Chas. H. Breck, of Jos. Seed Priority.

The status of seeds in the priorities list is shown by the following, addressed by the Priorities Commission to Dr. Kellerman, Acting Chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Washington, D. C., September 23:

"Since the receipt of your letter of the 12th instant, we have given careful consideration to the above matter and have concluded to certify to the Preference List with a Class III rating, the following:

"SEEDS.—Plants engaged principally in assembling, cleaning, treating, preparing, storing and shipping seeds for growing food and feed, and for growing medicinal and chemical plants (excluding flower seed as such)."

WORCESTER, MASS.—L. C. Midgley, of the county farm bureau, reports that war garden products the value of which was $750,000 were produced in this vicinity the past season.

Tomatoes Contracted for by Cannery.

The United States department of agriculture, in its monthly crop report for September, estimates that, with 1,399 factories reporting and $9 idle, the acreage of tomatoes contracted for by canners in 1918 is 213,890, as compared with 207,674 in 1917.

Bean Production.

From a forecast of condition September 1, the monthly crop report of the United States department of agriculture places the production of beans in New York, Michigan, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona and California at 19,894,000 bushels, as compared with 19,497,000 bushels August 1.

Potato Crop Condition.

The September crop report of the United States department of agriculture forecasts the 1918 potato crop September 1, from condition, as 390,907,000 bushels, as compared with 442,536,000 August 1. The condition on September 1 was 74.5 of normal, as against 75.1, the 10-year average.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, October 8.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $1.85 to $2.00; celery, crate, 35 to 50 cents; head lettuce, 2-dozen, $1.00 to $2.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $1.50; tomatoes, per box, 15 cents to 25 cents.

New York, October 7.—Celery (state), per bunch, 15 to 50 cents; cucumbers, $1.50 to $3.00 per basket; mushrooms, $1.50 to $3.50 per basket; tomatoes, per carrier, 50 cents to $2.50; lettuce, per package, 50 cents to $1.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50.

Soaking Seeds Before Planting.

The custom among old-time gardeners of soaking seed before planting, a practice not so common now, is discussed by A. E. Wilkinson, Toronto, in the thirteenth annual report of the Vegetable Growers' Association of Ontario. He says the principal reason for soaking seeds is a rain in time, enough moisture being taken in to start the first processes of germination, but that seeds should not be soaked and placed in very wet or cold ground, because of the chances of decay. Therefore, careful consideration of outside environment, soil, climate, etc., should be made. Timeliness is also an important factor.

There are several methods of soaking seeds. The first is that of placing them in lukewarm water over night and planting the following morning. Seeds of peas, beans, radish, corn, cucumber, squash, etc., can be treated in this way, each sort in a separate receptacle, but in no instance should the seeds be soaked until the seed coat is loose and comes off. Another method is to make a paste of the seeds. Celery, lettuce, cabbage, cauliflower, etc., can be used. The paste should be spread in a thin layer along the middle of a woolen or flannel cloth. The edges are then turned and the cloth rolled up. Six, eight or more sorts can be placed separately on a long cloth, and the roll is placed in lukewarm water for five or six hours and then kept in a temperature of 60°. Twelve hours later it is again placed in the water for two or three hours and then taken out and aired as before. The operation is repeated until the seeds begin to sprout, requiring from three to 10 days. They are then dried slightly and planted in the garden.

A third method consists of mixing seed and soil in certain proportions. The soil should be fine, preferably sandy. With celery, use one part seed by bulk to 10 parts soil; radishes, one part seed and six parts soil; lettuce, one part seed and five parts soil. The amount of soil will depend upon the vitality of the seed, high percentage requiring more soil, low percentage less. The seed and soil are then placed in a box, the soil moistened and the top of the box covered with wire cloth or netting. Place the box in a temperature according to the germination requirement of the seeds to be soaked. Moistened the soil each day as needed and stir the seed-soil mixture each day. When the seeds have sprouted plant in the garden, being sure to place soil over them carefully, with not too much pressure.

Vegetable and Fruit Markets.

From reports received by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, the crop movement seems to have passed the high point during the period October 1-7. The supply of potatoes was liberal as the result of the heavy movement of the past few weeks and prices averaged lower, but not far from those prevailing during the corresponding period last year. Maine Cobblers and Green Mountains declined about 20 cents, closing at $1.82-$2 per 100 pounds trackside at Presque Isle. Declines were moderate in eastern markets. Minnesota and Wisconsin sacked white stock lost five to 10 cents in carlot markets, closing at $1.90-$1.95 per 100 pounds at Chicago. Moorhead, Minn., quoted Red River Ohio at $2-$2.05. Waupaca, Wis., offered at $1.80-$1.90 sacked. Colorado and Ohio shipping points were on a par with the previous week. The onion market continued dull and weak with gradual declines in all sections. Eastern and mid-western yellow stock followed a wider range at $1.55-$2.25 per 100 pounds. Rochester, N. Y., quoted 10 to 20 cents lower, closing at $1.60-$1.65 sacked f. o. b. California Australian browns declined about 20 cents, closing at $1.20-$1.25 f. o. b. Stockton. In the cabbage markets, there were further declines. New York domestic ranged $12-$15 in bulk f. o. b. Rochester and $15-$30 in consuming markets. Colorado shipping points were steady at $1 per 100 pounds. Wisconsin stock was offered at $40-$46 in midwest markets. Colorado ranged $2.75-$3.75 per 100 pounds for small lots in southern markets. There was a steady decline in sweet potatoes in all sections. The general range in eastern markets at the close of the period was $3-$4.25. Mid-west and northern cities asked $5-$6.

The apple market was fairly steady with price changes principally in a downward direction, but values were fairly well established. Michigan Concord grapes advanced, reaching 35-37 cents per 4-quart basket f. o. b. Benton Harbor, New York Concord reached 35 cents f. o. b. Westfield. Two-quart baskets ruled at 22 cents at shipping points. California Malagas held firm at $1.75 per 4-basket carrier at Fresno, with a continued rise in eastern markets. The peach movement declined sharply, due to the comparative failure of the northern crop and partly to earlier maturity.

Pollenizing Tomatoes Under Glass.

In the thirteenth annual report of the Vegetable Growers' Association of Ontario, J. J. Davis, London, calls attention to a system of pollenization which he said he found was far ahead of any other—by means of a spoon, knocking the pollen into it with the finger, this in the case of tomato plants. The one chief advantage is that you can tell whether you have pollen or not, as it can be seen in the spoon. At the same time, he wondered why, when he knew he was carrying pollen and dipping the blossoms into the spoon, they did not all set. With the aid of a strong glass, he found a great irregularity in the structure of the blossoms, and in quite a proportion of them the stigma did not reach out to the end, so that when he dipped these the blossom would simply dip over and the pollen would not touch the stigma at all, emphasizing the fact that it is of absolute importance to get the pollen on the stigma before results can be expected; also the necessity of pollenizing on both sides, to prevent the fruit dropping off after it is formed, or coming in poor shape.

FALL FLOWER SHOW.

The annual fall exhibition of this society will be held November 7-10, at the American Museum of Natural History. Prizes are offered for chrysanthemums, roses, carnations, stove and greenhouse foliage and flowering plants, orchids, vegetables and fruits.

Vegetables and fruits have been included in the premium list and attractive prizes are offered for exhibits of both. It is desired to make these a feature of the displays, to help and show our interest in the war-garden movement. All growers of vegetables and fruits are therefore urged to exhibit.

For the largest and best collection of vegetables, arranged for effect, a first prize of $50 is offered, and a second prize of $35. This class is open to all. For a collection of 12 vegetables, arranged for effect, a prize of $25 is offered for the best exhibit and $15 for the second. This is restricted to non-commercial growers.

The largest and best collection of outdoor grown fruits will receive a prize of $15 and the second best one $10. For the best two bunches of black grapes $10 is offered for the first and $5 for the second. Like prizes are also offered for two bunches of white grapes. For two melons prizes of $5 and $3 are offered. The above fruit prizes are restricted to non-commercial growers.

Recognizing the importance of canning in the economy of the country, prizes, for non-commercial growers only, are offered for both vegetables and fruits preserved in glass jars. For vegetables the prizes are: First, $15; second, $10. For fruits the following prizes are offered: First, $15; second, $10.

It is desirable to give the vegetable and fruit features as wide publicity as possible, so as to bring together a large exhibit, thus making competition keen.

The Horticultural Society of New York offers its silver cup, valued at $100, for the best collection of bush chrysanthemum plants.

The Garden Magazine offers its silver achievement medal for the best exhibit in the show. Bush chrysanthemum plants are not eligible for this prize.

Schedules are now ready for distribution and will be sent on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, Mansion, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park New York City.

GEORGE V. NASH, Sec'y.

The annual meeting of the Southwestern Nurserymen's Association was held in San Sala, Tex., September 24-25, the opening session being called to order by President W. C. Griffing, the attendance being very good. J. E. Aubrey made the address of welcome, which was followed by a response by J. A. Lopeman, of Enid, Okla. Several interesting papers were on the programme, among them the following: "The Nurseryman's Service to the World," by Jim Parker, Tucumseh, Okla.; "Observations of an Old-Timer; 45 Years on the Job," by A. K. Clingman, Keithville, La., supplemented by J. A. Bauer, Judsonia, Ark.; "Present Prices of Nursery Stock Compared with Other Commodities," by H. E. Barberry War on in Nebraska.

The Nebraska state council of defense has issued an order to the effect that all common barberry, which harbors rust and causes its spread to wheat and other cereals, must be removed from the state. The order states that "summary action" will follow close on the heels of all cases of refusal. Last spring the council made an appeal to all citizens to remove the offending bushes, but a few individuals did not put much faith in the relationship of the barberry rust and that of wheat. Such persons, as a result of the order, will no doubt realize that the people of Nebraska are in earnest about this barberry business and prefer to grow wheat, according to the War Work Weekly of the United States department of agriculture.

Other wheat-growing states are "on the job" in the campaign to eradicate barberry. The states of Montana and Wyoming have both decided that their agricultural future will be brighter if the common barberry is excluded and have issued quarantines against it. In Colorado, the amended pest law gives all the legal authority necessary to compel owners to eradicate the bushes. In other states not having legislative power to support the campaign public sentiment is growing to favor the eradication of the common barberry.

Illinois' First Great Apple Show.

MEETING PLACE CHANGED.

Due to the necessity of more floor space required to stage the Illinois First Great Apple Show, announcement of which was made in our issue of September 28, page 504, the location of the exhibition, which will be held in Chicago, November 19-22, has been changed from the Hotel Sherman, as originally planned, to the Hotel Morrison. Much interest is being manifested in the coming event, and all indications point to a most successful presentation of one of the state's prominent industries.

The premium list, recently issued, copies of which may be had upon application to A. M. Augustine, executive secretary, Normal, Ill., includes much interesting information concerning the industry in general and the coming exhibition. Under the heading "Progressive Apple Growers of Illinois" are included a list of about 70 firms and individuals, with orchards varying from four to 1,800 acres, with the varieties grown in many cases.

The exhibition will be divided into sections for plates, trays, boxes, baskets, barrels and booth exhibits. The varieties open to entry in the various classes include the following: Akin, Arkansas Black, Banana, Ben Davis, Black Ben Davis, Black Twig, Delicious, Fameuse, Gano, Grimes, Huntsman, Jonathan, King David, Minkler, Maiden Blush, N. W. Greening, Rome Beauty, Salome, Stark, Wealthy, Willow, Wine-sap, and York Imperial. The scales for judging are as follows:

Plates and trays—Uniformity, 20; color and finish, 30; condition, 20; freedom from blemish, 30.

Boxes and barrels—Uniformity, 15; color and finish, 20; condition, 15; freedom from blemish, 20 packing, 30. Packing boxes: Bulge, 10; tightness, 10; alignment, 10.

Baskets—Uniformity, 20; color and finish, 20; condition, 20; freedom from blemish, 20; packing, 20.

Booth exhibits—Artistic arrangement, 50; comprehensiveness, 20; quality of specimens, 30.

In all divisions there are represented nearly 200 classes, first and second prizes being offered in each, the amounts varying from $2 to $30, in addition to gold and silver medals. The officers of the show are: W. A. Brayton, Mt. Morris, general chairman; A. M. Augustine, Normal, secretary, and J. W. Stanton, Richview, treasurer. Professor B. S. Pickett, University of Illinois, Urbana, is superintendent in charge of installation and exhibits.

Nursery Imports.

The following communication has been addressed to the Federal Horticultural Board, Washington, D. C., September 30, by J. C. Vaughan, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago:

"We call your attention to the fact that the French government has made arrangements to supply certificates that all nursery stock from that country is properly inspected.

"Why not arrange for similar inspections with other countries, rather than cut off the importations, most of which have extended over a period of many years without injury in any way to American horticulture?

"Whether the different sections are or are not infested with dangerous insect enemies can readily be ascertained and guarded against without the drastic operation of an embargo, which once settled on the horticultural trade of this country, undoubtedly cannot be lifted without much difficulty and strenuous efforts of the trade. Washington said that when liberties are taken away from a people they cannot be readily regained.

"No evidence, so far as we know, has been given that certain well-known exporting districts in Europe have sent forward infested stock in the many years that these plants and shrubs have been exported.

"Why not insist that those entomologists who are complaining, furnish real proof that various nursery districts legislated against have been proven to be infested with dangerous insects, rather than because one district has been found to be so infested, all European sources of nursery stock be embargoed against.

"This principle, carried out as proposed, would be equal to preventing all interchange of farm animals throughout the United States because one case of hoof and mouth disease was developed in a remote section of Minnesota.

"Surely the placing of an embargo on nursery products from any foreign district should rightfully hinge on proof that danger is actually known to exist in the products of that section."

The following is an extract from a printed notice received from V. Lemoine & Son, Nancy, France:

"Our nursery, being submitted to the control of the French phytopathological inspection service, we are enabled to get the necessary certificates of inspection for the importation of nursery stock into the United States. Importers of nursery stock should apply for a permit to the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., and send us the number of their permit, no permit being needed for herbaceous plants, flower roots and bulbs."

GOOD FALL PROSPECTS IN EVIDENCE.

With stock none too plentiful and prices rather high at times business during September was quite good, the call for funeral work and hospital orders being unusually brisk. Roses were the item that went big. Asters and gladioli were plentiful, but the quality nothing extra, while carnations were only fair. October has started well and prospects for a good fall trade are promising. Ophelia, Russell and Columbia roses are now the leading offerings, followed by a few fancy dahlias which find considerable favor. This market is not handling shipped-in chrysanthemums as in former years. As a rule they have been poor. The home-grown stock is not quite ready.

NOTES.

H. Kusik & Co. are handling a good line of roses, a few carnations and a limited supply of gladioli. Business is reported improving. Mr. Kusik is giving his entire time to the Liberty Loan campaign.

W. J. Barnes reports funeral and hospital work exceptionally heavy, cleaning up much good stock. Ferns are moving fast at prices much better than usual.

T. J. Noll & Co. report excellent business and are cleaning up daily in good offerings of roses of which they carry a large supply.

L. C. Fields and wife have the sympathy of the trade in the death of their son, Marshall, which occurred October 2.

Arthur Newell reports everything running along in excellent shape with the demand for flowers on the increase.

E. Frandsen, of Independence, has an excellent cut of Ophelia, Russell and Columbia roses.

The Oakwood Floral Co. is cutting fine roses daily which find a quick market.

E. J. Barnes is cutting fine dahlias. Some are especially fancy.

Visitor: C. L. Gross, representing A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

DEMAND CAN NOT BE MET.

Not within a long period has the trade been so hard run for stock as at the present time. Funeral work is being greatly augmented by the epidemic of Spanish influenza at Camp Sherman, to which Columbus is the nearest city. The undertakers at Chillicothe, the seat of the camp, have had to call upon assistance from here, a condition which reflects the extra demands upon local florists. In face of the large volume of business, a gloomy September has held back growth, so that flowers which should ordinarily be available in abundance are in very scanty supply. This is particularly true of carnations. Chrysanthemums are also slow in maturing and are snatched up as soon as received, at $5 to $6 per dozen. Roses

Seasonable Stock READY NOW

Bougainvillea Glabra Sanderiana—Well shaped, trimmed plants, 4-in. pots, $25.00 per 100.

Genista—5-inch, special stock, well trimmed and heavy, $30.00 per 100.

Fern Dish Ferns—All varieties, bushy stock, $3.50 per 100, $30.00 per 1,000, 3-inch, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1,000.

Roses—Dorothy Perkins, White Dorothy and Excelsa or Red Dorothy, especially long tops—these plants have been staked up in open field and are well ripened. $15.00 per 100, for selected grade.

The Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, Ohio

are the mainstay, though not adequate to needs. The holding off of frost is prolonging the season of asters, dahlias, cosmos and even gladioli, but the stock is of inferior quality. Everything is being utilized. With the shortage of help, owners of stores are required to give their own personal labor and to put in long hours.

NOTES.

The Columbus branch of the National Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild, of which Miss Helen Miller is president, is preparing to respond heartily to the request sent out by the headquarters of the guild in New York, to grow plants and flowers for the soldiers' camps. The cantonment at Chillicothe, which accommodates 55,000 men, will receive special attention from the local branch, because of its proximity.

Florists active in the Fourth Liberty Loan drive were E. R. Munk, of the Munk Floral Company; Henry Wilson, of the Wilson Seed Company, and T. J. Ludwig. In a five-day campaign, completed October 5, Columbus exceeded her quota by $2,000,000. No statement can be given of the amount subscribed by florists, as in this drive occupations were not handled separately. J.

HENRY A. DREER
714-716 Chestnut Street
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912.

OF THE AMERICAN FLORIST, published weekly at Chicago, Ill., for September 27, 1918.

State of Illinois, County of Cook.
Before me, a Notary Public in and for the state and county aforesaid, personally appeared Michael Barker, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the editor and business manager of THE AMERICAN FLORIST and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management, and (and if a daily paper, the circulation, etc.) of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 443, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are:

Publisher, American Florist Company, 440 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

Editor and Business Manager—Michael Barker, 440 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

That the owners are: (Give names and addresses of individual owners, or, if a corporation, give its name and the names and addresses of stockholders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of the total amount of stock. Estate of E. Asmus, W. Hoboken, N. J.; M. Barker, 440 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.; David Burpee, 485 N. Fifth St., Philadelphia, Pa.; John Burton, Willow Grove Ave., Chestnut Hill, Pa.; J. D. Carmody, Evansville, Ind.; W. W. Coles, Maple Hill Rose Farms, Kokomo, Ind.; Robt. Craig, 49th and Market Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.; J. B. Deamund, 140 Mich. James Dean Estate, Freeport, L. I., N. Y.; Emory I. Dyer, 1010 E. Byron Reed Co., 212 S. 17th St., Omaha, Neb.; Wm. Falconer, Allegheny Cemetery, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Maggie Harris, 55th St. and Springfield Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.; Mrs. Sarah Lonsdale, Jefferson Pl., 1028 De La Salle St., Santa Barbara, Calif.; Mrs. Catherine Mathison, Waltham, Mass.; John N. May, Summit, N. J.; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; Blanchet, 5411 S. 1st St., Randolph Sailer, 925 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.; Estate of Louise Schiller, 2207 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.; H. A. Siebrecht, New Rochelle, N. Y.; W. J. Stewart, 147 Summer St., Boston, Mass.; J. C. Vaughan, 31 W. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.; Annie G. Whittall, 4001 Harvard Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif.; C. B. Whittall, 026 Locust St., Milwaukee, Wis.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages or other securities are: (If there are none, so state.)

There are no bonds, mortgages or other securities outstanding against THE AMERICAN FLORIST.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company but also in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

AMERICAN FLORIST COMPANY,
Michael Barker, Sec'y.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 27th day of Sept., 1918.

[SEAL.] R. C. MERRITH, Notary Public.

The Florists' Hail Association of America

Was originally incorporated under the laws of New Jersey on June 1, 1887. Since that date it has promptly paid nearly half a million dollars for glass broken by hail. At the present time it has no liabilities, and, besides its emergency fund, it has a reserve fund of $45,000. An insurance with the Florists' Hail Association means prompt payment in case of loss. (Continued From Last Week.)

Wednesday Afternoon's Session.

At the Wednesday afternoon session
Vincent Gorly, of St. Louis, made a strong plea for the adoption by the association of a standard language of flowers and submitted the following as a suggestion: January, carnation, true friendship; February, violets, love and faithfulness; March, daffodils, a breath of spring; April, sweet peas, love, a kiss; May, lilies, purity, sincerity; June, roses, fond remembrance;
July, gaillardia, fidelity; August, glad-ioli, Beauty in retirement; September, asters, loyalty; October, dahlias, elegance, confidence; November, chrysanthemum, love and devotion; December, lily of the valley, confession of love.
After a discussion of the suggestions, a committee was appointed to give further consideration to the matter and report its definite conclusion at the next meeting. This committee consists of Vincent Gorly, W. W. Gammage and W. J. Smyth.

The committee on final resolutions was appointed as follows: George Asmus, Chicago; George M. Geraghty,
Toronto, Ont., and Charles H. Brown,
New York.

Prize-Winning Windows.

The window of Knobie Bros., which took the first prize, showed what may be termed a facade of an F. T. D. temple, through the open doors of which were wires reaching from keys on the window platform and extending to points on a map of the United States and Canada that was placed just inside the doors in an oblique position and under a strong light. At the side of each telegraph key was a sign. "These keys hurry your order away." On the doors was the inscription, "Through the doors of the F. T. D. and electricity we can deliver your flower wants, through our members, to your distant friends within a few hours." Another sign read: "Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association of reliable florists in the United States, Canada and foreign countries, who deliver your flower wants, through us, within a few hours.

We are members." Many beautiful floral effects suggestive of gifts for transmission by the F. T. D. system were shown, completing its educational character and which merited and received the first prize.

The J. M. Gasser Co.'s window, taking the second prize in the contest, showed a large reproduction in flowers of the new F. T. D. emblem. The globe was made of dark green oak leaves and the continents were worked out with yellow immortelles. The eagle wings were cleverly made, and the whole effect was most striking. Hanging over the emblem was the sign "Say It With Flowers."

Smith & Fetter's window, which merited the third prize, displayed a landscape scene with an aeroplane in operation suspended from the window ceiling. A miniature lake was surrounded by gravel roads for auto deliveries of flowers. Forming a part of the scene was a flower shop, from which issued an endless belt carrying telegrams to a telegraph office. In the window were signs reading as follows: "Your path shall be paved with roses, the kaiser's path with Liberty Bonds, and Liberty will be sure." "We can wire flowers to Canada." "The safest, quickest and only way—Send flowers by wire." "We guarantee delivery to any part of the United States and Canada." "Send flowers by wire to your friends in distant cities by Florists' Telegraph Delivery system."

The Jones-Russell Co. had large telegraph poles placed outside their store, the wires extending through the window to the figure of a clerk receiving telegraph orders. A large globe represented universal service, and the windows were appropriately decorated and arranged to convey the idea of the F. T. D. system.

Wagner's large window was appropriately trimmed with autumn foliage. A landscape was shown with telegraph poles and wires and suitable signs indicating membership in the F. T. D. and inviting orders for transmission by that system.

The judges were: W. W. Gammage, London; W. J. Smyth, Chicago, and E. A. Fettes, Detroit.

The Publicity Display.

The publicity display, which was arranged on three sides of the hall, covered an area of over 1,200 square feet, and here were shown examples of florists' advertising in cards, newspapers, folders, catalogues, and photographs, included in the exhibition being many excellent specimens of color work, with descriptions of plants and flowers offered in words of forceful salesmanship. Conspicuous among these were the work of the following: Penn, the Florist, Boston, Mass.; W. L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City, Mo.; A. Warendorff, New York; John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, Mich.; Phillips Bros., Newark, N. J.; Joy Floral Co., Nashville, Tenn.; Holm & Olson, St. Paul, Minn.; Schramm Bros., Toledo, O.; Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, Mo.; Schiller, the Florist, Chicago; Knobke Bros., Cleveland, O.; A. W. Smith Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.; Gammage, the House of Flowers, London, Ont.; State Floral Co., Sedalia, Mo.; Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.; Randall's House of Flowers, Worcester, Mass.; Charles H. Grakelow, and Pennock Bros., Philadelphia, Pa.; Santner Floral Co., Detroit, Mich.; J. F. Wilcox & Sons, Council Bluffs, Ia.; McKenna, Ltd., Montreal, Que.; S. A. Anderson, Buffalo, N. Y.; John Ralph's Greenhouses, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.; Jos. Bancroft & Son, Cedar Falls, Ia.; Central Floral Co., Detroit, Mich.; J. M. Gasser Co., the Jones-Russell Co., and Smith & Fettes Co., Cleveland, O.; John A. Keller Estate, Lexington, Ky.; Bertermann Bros. Co., Indianapolis, Ind.; The "King" Florist, Winnipeg, Man.; The Heiss Co., Dayton, O.; A. Lange, Chicago; Kerr, the Florist, Houston, Tex.; F. C. Weber, St. Louis, and the L. Bomb Floral Co., Detroit, Mich.

In an adjoining room volumes of clippings from local newspapers were shown by Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson, descriptive of flowers and decorations. Herman Knobke had charge of the arrangement, which was well executed. It was a feature of the meeting which alone would repay the visitors for journeying to the "Forest City."

Additional Visitors.

In addition to those mentioned in last week's issue as being in attendance, Leo. Henman, Chicago; J. J. Salmon, Akron, O.; Frank Schramm, Toledo, O.; and R. E. Blackshaw, La Porte, Ind., were noted among the visitors.

"Say It With Flowers."

Paper by Herman P. Knobke, Cleveland, O., read at the annual meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, Cleveland, October 8-9, 1918.

Really what are we trying to imply in the minds of the public with this phrase? Briefly, I might say—encourage them to the further and greater use of flowers in many of their forms. Let us go about it in this way: When we make up our minds to go in business, we analyze the location, the city, our finances, and in general, all of the conditions that would go to help us succeed in our undertaking.

American Blood

For you the best red blood of American manhood is flowing without stint on the plains of France today.

What are you doing to end the war quickly and save our gallant men?

The only way you can help them is by buying Fourth Liberty Loan Bonds.

If you have not bought your bonds, do so now.

If you have already bought some bonds, buy more today.

Our men fight with rifles, you fight with bonds.

All must fight.

We will take it for granted that each and every one of us are thorough artisans and mechanics and know our business well; we will also grant that each of us could sell customers coming into our store all that they are willing to buy. Then, with all of these conditions assured, there is only one thought in our minds today, and that is to get the prospects to sell to, and how that is best accomplished. I maintain that advertising is absolutely and unqualifiedly the key note of success, really true success, I mean in this and kindred businesses.

I remember distinctly, when I went into business, among the many questions which I asked myself, this particular one struck me most forcibly, "Where would you buy flowers if the occasion presented itself, and what would you ask for, when you went to your florist?" I had to frankly say to myself, "I do not know of any florist in this city, and I hardly know what to ask for when I get there." Being a student of salesmanship, and knowing that advertising is salesmanship written, I answered this question in this manner—"Why not tell all of the people in the city of Cleveland, where you are, what you are, and what you have for sale, what it costs, how to order, how you will handle the charge account, and how you will make the delivery?" In other words, advertise your business to the inhabitants of Cleveland, and I am satisfied that it should pay, providing you carry out in your actual workings of your business what you have told them in the printed word.

Advertising can be done in many ways. For the sake of analysis, I will name a few: Newspapers, direct-by-mail, bill-boards, street cars, window displays, motion picture theatres, location, store arrangements, deliveries, and social contact. I am not going to try to go into the ramifications of all of these modes of advertising, although I hope to be able to touch them briefly, while on this subject, but I am going to confine myself particularly to the newspaper variety. When President Gude asked me to present a discussion on advertising, and in order to make the proper kind of display for this convention, suggested that I write every member of the F. T. D. and have them submit samples of their advertising, it made me feel that I would be well repaid for the effort. It gave me an opportunity to analyze the advertising of some 600 retailers, and this indeed is an excellent opportunity for one who is interested in his business to increase it at every angle. Studying these ads closely reveals to me the fact, very much to my regret, that there are none too many in this business that have given this subject serious consideration. I do not criticise destructively in this connection, and let me suggest here that any criticism that might be made, bear in mind that it is only intended constructively, and does not apply to many of those whose advertising is here exhibited.

It seems so many of our business men take care of the watering of the plants, the changing of the arrangement in their stores, and the filling of their orders, while they leave the office boy or delivery boy to do the advertising, or worse still, turn it over to the average advertising solicitor, and say, "Here, John, write up an ad and give me a good showing, and see that the copy is fine." This is all wrong. To illustrate: If a customer comes to your store, would any of you, as the proprietor or manager of that store, think it good policy to send the porter to wait on that customer, or would you think it advisable to go yourself, or ask your best clerk? You know that when a customer comes into your store, you use every effort to sell him what you have, at a profit and satisfy him. Now then, you absolutely know, too, that to send the porter to wait on this customer, would be the most serious mistake, so then why delegate the writing of copy for your advertisements to the newspaper solicitor, the truck driver or the porter? Each case would be equally ridiculous. Advertising should be the most carefully thought out and planned unit of all the units that go to make up a retailer's business.

Take this suggestion seriously into consideration. Those of you who have never done any advertising, follow this simple suggestion: Go back to your store and sell yourself a box of flowers for a sick friend, or a plant to be used in your home, or anything else that you have, and as soon as you have made that sale to yourself, write the entire transaction verbatim on paper. You will be surprised to see what an excellent advertising manager you really are. Now, that is all there is to advertising. The idea of clothing your advertisements in flowery language is all "bunk." You do not use flowery language to your customers, and you do not want to use it in the newspapers. Moreover, it is equally as wrong to use slang, localisms, or funnisms in your ads. None of these have any place in a well constructed advertisement. You would not use them to your customers coming into the store. Why should you attempt to use them to your prospective customers all over the city?

To be successful in advertising, many things are absolutely essential. Let me name a few of them. See that your windows are washed every day and properly arranged, occasionally with some special added attractions, plants well selected and carefully watered. Your store should be scrupulously clean, the jardinières and other things kept in elegant condition. Change the water in your flower jars in the cooler at least four times a week. Be prompt in the sending out of your invoices, careful in the delivery of your orders, when promised. If you have a conservatory attached to your store, keep it in decent shape, your plants in healthy condition. See that your delivery equipment is clean, and in good repair. The flowers that you handle should be the best. They need not be the most expensive varieties; the shorter and cheaper grades are just as useful in many cases. Be extremely cautious in the answering of your telephones. Above all, have those parties who are entrusted with the telephone calls, thoroughly acquainted with your business and its workings, so that they are in a position to intelligently talk to your customers. Make everybody around the place feel that they are interested in it. Let them think and breathe advertising with you. Have extra copies struck of the advertisements and distribute these around to the employees so they can see what you are doing, and keep in touch with the work.

Now then, with an institution such as I have just described, you are bound to become successful, and if you will prepare the matter which goes into your newspaper advertisements with the same caution that you wait on your customers personally, the circuit of success is assured.

The greatest correction I might suggest to the majority of florists, is their mistaken idea of advertising only periodically. A well devised programme should be laid out, covering every month of the year. Let me hurriedly run over the 12 months and make a few suggestions:

January—Suggest that people buy cut flowers for use in their homes in the dreary and stormy days. Tell them of the wonderful varieties of flowering plants and the coming of the bulb flowers, interspersing an occasional bit of copy on funeral flowers, and here and there reminding the matrimonially inclined, that flowers are essential to a complete wedding.

February—You have St. Valentine's day, which gives you an elegant opportunity to ask everyone in your city to remember their wives or sweethearts with the most appropriate valentine on earth—flowers. After Valentine's day, talk about tulips, daffodils and hyacinths, the early expressions of spring, and their influence in the home.

March—You have St. Patrick's day, and if Easter does not fall in this month, then run some copy on funeral flowers, also suggesting to the business man that a few flowering plants in his place of business would inspire his sales people and encourage his business.

April—Granted that Easter falls in this month, talk about the wonderful use of flowers for the holiday occasion. Do not feel that you are already doing more business than you can handle. Personally, we have never yet reached that stage. It is easy for you to get additional help in the various departments, so all business you can corral will be properly handled. A serious drawback will result if you advertise much for these holiday occasions and then fall down in the handling of these orders. Bear in mind a certain class of people buy only at these times, and their opinion of the floral business is greatly formed from the manner in which you handle these holiday orders. We use extreme caution to satisfy our customers in every regard on these days, and when we have complaints, it is our desire to adjust them to the entire satisfaction of our customers.

May—Do not forget the wonderful possibilities of the newly exploited holiday, Mothers' day. This is going to be one of the biggest days in the flower business. Immediately after Mothers' day, talk funeral flowers, following that up with wedding talk, and then for the last of the month, those of you who are especially prepared for Memorial day, go after this business strong, and those of you who do not especially cater to this end of our line, talk about that part of it which you are in a position to handle.

June—Confine yourself to weddings, graduations, debutante parties, and more or less, social functions.

July—Funeral flowers, with occasional wedding copy.

August—The same.

September—The same, adding a few suggestions about buying foliage plants to use in residences.

October—Wedding flowers, funeral flowers, and foliage plants for the home, not forgetting Hallowe'en in the latter part of the month.

November—For those of you where All Saints' day brings a big demand, go after that business. To others, talk about weddings, funeral flowers, and then the latter part of the month, about Thanksgiving flowers.

December—Funeral flowers, early in the month, and Christmas and New Years for the balance.

This affords you a schedule of operation for the entire year, and properly handled, you will be surprised with the results. You might run occasional copy during the year, directed specifically to the business man, suggesting the advisability of sending an occasional basket of flowers to some of his customers who are branching out in their line. This is good business, and will show remarkable returns. The average business man is ready and willing to spend from $10 to $25, and of course, this is a desirable account.

Now that I have covered the subject of newspaper advertising in a general way, having pointed out when this copy should appear, and the nature of it, let me caution you again on how to prepare the copy. Do not try to do something unnatural, merely sell yourself. Dress up this sale in ordinarily good words, and arrange it in good shape. Use liberal space, by that I mean from six to 20 inches in your newspapers, and you are bound to get excellent results. Do not expect too much in the beginning. None of us, opening a new store, expect to put it on a paying basis immediately. It cannot be done. So is it with advertising. If must be used repeatedly and continually in order to bring results. There are very few in our business who cannot use newspapers successfully. In a large city, the florist in the outskirts should not buy newspaper space. He wastes altogether too much of the circulation. Those who live in the small communities that have weekly publications must be extremely cautious in the preparation of their copy, or it will not produce. Most of you have seen these country ads, and even some in the city, advertising chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving in February. This is not an exaggeration, but an actual fact, and one of the real reasons why so-called advertising does not pay.

DIRECT-BY-MAIL.

This is a form of copy that is very good for certain concerns, where location has much to do with their business. The florist who caters to neighborhood trade, out-of-the-city mail-order business in small communities, those in large cities who make a business of landscaping and other forms of outdoor planting, can use this advertising to good advantage. The relative cost of direct-by-mail to them is less than newspaper space, while to those who are in a position to cater to the entire city, the newspaper space is very much cheaper. The average metropolitan daily will sell you space from one-half cent to one cent per inch to each one thousand people reached, while the direct piece will cost from three cents to five cents per person reached. Naturally, this is a more intensified method, and for that reason, those before described, are in a position to use this form of advertising, and to them it is very much cheaper than newspaper space, since they could only hope to reach from one to five per cent of the entire circulation with their copy. I do not mean to insinuate in any way that direct-by-mail is not good advertising for those who can use it, but in this, as in the newspaper, great care should be taken in the preparation of the copy.

Robert Newcomb.

Store Manager, Miller Floral Co., Salt Lake City.

BILLBOARDS AND STREET CARS.

We have never used billboards or street cars ourselves, but believe that they are essential factors in helping newspaper publicity. They reinforce and focus the attention of the transient public, assisting them to fix in their minds your name and business more closely when your copy is read in the daily papers. Personally, I have never done this advertising because we felt our appropriation could be more judiciously spent in the newspapers. However, we are planning some day to use these two mediums.

WINDOW DISPLAYS AND OTHER MEANS.

Make every effort you possibly can to keep your windows attractive at all times. Feature special decorations. They need not bear especially on the selling of flowers, yet it will be the means of impressing the passer-by with your name and your place of business. One of the replies received in response to our letter sent out requesting advertising, fully sets this position forth and can be seen here on exhibition. In window displays, you have before you the best possible means of publicity at the lowest possible price, and too few of you take advantage of it. A big effort on your windows will pay you handsomely.

We do not believe motion picture theatres to be a good form of advertising. People are not in a receptive mood to buy when they go to a theatre. They are intent on being entertained, and naturally dismiss the serious side of life. We, ourselves, do not use this form of advertising, and would not suggest it as a paying proposition.

Social contact is a form of publicity the most of us have used since the business was originated, and I presume it will continue to be one of the big essentials as long as business is conducted, and needs no comment from me.

STORE ARRANGEMENT AND DELIVERIES.

Let me caution you again on these two very important elements of business success. So many times I have visited florists, and have actually been ashamed of the condition of their place of business. As to deliveries, be prompt with them as near as possible, and confine yourself to the promises made. Occasionally do things out of the ordinary to satisfy a customer. I merely mention a few of these latter items to impress more firmly on your mind the fact that all are advertising features of your business.

In closing, let me suggest that all of us go back to our places of business with the determination to do more and better advertising than we have ever done before, knowing our reward will come.

Miller Floral Co.'s New Store.

The formal opening reception of the Miller Floral Co.'s beautiful new retail store, at Salt Lake City, Utah, September 14, was, in point of public response and admiration, a gigantic success. Over 18,000 of Farmington's famous roses were given away as souvenirs to an admiring and appreciative throng of visitors who kept the beautiful store crowded during the day and until after eleven o'clock in the evening. Sales were practically impossible, owing to the immense crowd, and several times the management was forced to discontinue the distribution of the souvenirs in order to reduce the congestion and prevent serious damage to the extensive display of flowering and decorative plants which were most artistically grouped throughout the shop.

The store is large, bright and roomy, with a fine mosaic tile floor and a wealth of natural light. The walls are dove grey and the fixtures a warm egg shell ivory. The entire window and a long display ledge are inlaid with autumn leaf tile of "Oldbridge" design. Over 40 feet of French bevel plate mirrors, six feet square, form a beautiful background, stretching from the front window line back to a mammoth refrigerator display case, which is solid plate glass, sides, front and doors, and the floor of the same is laid in "Old Red Quarry tile" set in wide margins of black cement. A handsome, illuminated art-glass sign, 22 feet long, extends across the rear of the salesroom, bearing the phrase, "The Home of Flowers," and two mammoth panoramic photo views of the firm's immense range, located at Farmington, 15 miles from Salt Lake City. An unusual abundance of rare and staple decorative plants were in evidence, and from the innumerable expressions of wonder and delight, it was plain that the flower loving public of Salt Lake City were enjoying a treat they never had seen before. Their genuine appreciation of it, proves how deserving they are, and this must have been a source of keen gratification to the management.

A little more than eight years ago, Robert Miller began in a modest way at Farmington, Utah, the erection of a modern and practical growing establishment. Today, this comprises 16 houses, with an aggregate of over 250,000 square feet of glass, a new brick office and service building and six and one-half acres of fertile ground devoted to various uses including a fine lot of hardy perennials and annuals used for cutting. It is one of the finest greenhouse establishments in the west, and for cleanliness and efficiency, it is unsurpassed in this country. The success of this enterprise is based solely on Mr. Miller's steadfast determination to produce a high quality of stock. He did not build "better than he knew," but he did build "the best he knew how." His roses have a well earned reputation for invariably prime quality of substance, size and color, or he could not ship them steadily to Los Angeles, Pasadena, southern California points, as well as Butte, Spokane, Seattle and throughout the states of Idaho, Montana, Colorado and Wyoming, as well as Utah.

In securing the services of Robert Newcomb as store manager, Mr. Miller feels that he has made a wise choice. To substantiate this, he points with just pride to the new store, both from an artistic as well as a practical standpoint. Mr. Newcomb, "Bob," as he is better known to the trade of the entire country, has probably as wide a national acquaintance as any young man in horticultural lines, having traveled for years in the interest of well-known firms. That he surely has hosts of friends throughout the country who wish him success in his new field was proven by a thick pile of congratulatory telegrams received on the opening day. To say that he deeply appreciated these messages of good will, would be putting it very mildly indeed.

A beautiful new Dodge panel car will aid greatly in maintaining a prompt delivery service. "Say it with Flowers" appears in large, white illuminum script on the top of the car, and this unique scheme of advertising has brought no end of favorable comment. A one ton truck brings an abundance of cut stock and pot plants from the firm's big range at Farmington daily.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The epidemic of influenza, which has been so severe over the country for the past month, proved fatal to an extraordinary percentage of those afflicted. In all the large communities, there at once sprang up a great demand for flowers, which taxed to the utmost, every branch of the business. There was not anywhere, one-quarter enough stock for the demand. It became necessary, therefore, for each retailer to make the most of what he could get. As the writer has often pointed out in this column, there is great economy in being ready for every such or similar emergency, with made-up wreaths of magnolia and oak leaves. An all-flower wreath will take as much stock as will be sufficient to decorate three made-up foliage wreaths, which when completed, will look as good, and bring just as much money, as if all flowers were used. It is made up in one-third of the time, thus conserving both material, and what is often more precious, man power, every minute saved being of the greatest advantage in getting out the work.

Live foliage wreaths, made of small plants or sprays of crotons, Cocos Weddelliana, Begonia Rex leaves and other greenhouse foliage, together with a few flowers, would also take the place of the scarcer blossoms. Wreaths of this material are very artistic and will bring quite as much money as the design of all flowers.

Chrysanthemums are now in full swing, and as popular as ever. There is nothing more decorative than these fall beauties when arranged with highly colored autumn leaves. They should be displayed in deep vase baskets of a color that will blend well with the variety used. A bow of ribbon on the handle gives a conspicuous finish. Blooms can be sold from these baskets as easily as in vases, and the decorative effect is much greater.

If the great scarcity of flowers that has just been experienced is but a forerunner of what is coming after the holidays when many of the greenhouses are shut down, it behooves the retailer to gradually educate his customers and the public to a greater use of foliage in all floral arrangements. The plant basket, with small tubes of water to hold flower stems, will, when decorated in this way with a few choice flowers, be found quite attractive, the lasting qualities of the plants being also a feature.

Corsages for street wear are always attractive to ladies. A few made up ready to put on, when displayed in the show window, are sure to be noticed and are productive of sales.

There are some of the retailers in the large cities who look for an increase in the number of bouquets for the debutantes this season; let us hope there will be ground for this optimism, as there is no more beautiful feature of the business than this class of work.

If your class of trade will warrant it, carry cattleyas. They are the flower that gives distinction to all kinds of work. Do not hide them up on a shelf, back in the case. Arrange in tubes in baskets of growing glory ferns, and keep them in the window or on a counter. They will soon make a market for themselves.

Flower Supply and Demand.

Probably never in the history of the cut flower business has there existed such a dearth of flowers in the face of so strong and unusual a demand as has been experienced the past few weeks. While ordinarily at the change of the seasons from spring to summer, and again in the fall before many greenhouse flowers are available, there is a shortage, particularly of good stock. This year, on account of the high death rate caused by the influenza which is epidemic all over the country, the use of flowers for funerals has been unprecedented. There has not been stock enough to meet one-fourth of the demand, and the question is how best to use this meager portion. The following are a few suggestions, showing the methods as the writer has seen them among the progressive men in the retail stores of Philadelphia, Pa.

First, discourage the sale of flowers by the dozen; if loose flowers are desired, contrive that the order shall be for a box of flowers, not a specified number of any one thing. A better price is then obtained and the selection more or less left to your discretion.

Next in order should come the spray, which is to take the place of all small or low-priced designs. These clusters can be quickly gotten together; a comparatively few flowers on a background of green or colored autumn leaves. The hardy asters, which are now plentiful, help out very materially in such work. Green or golden privet sprays are also good backing. Dahlias, pink, white or bronze, one color to a spray, tied with appropriate ribbon or chiffon, will be found acceptable to most customers. A sample spray or wreath, nicely made up of anything that is plentiful, is of great assistance in taking orders from those who have not fully made up their minds.

For those customers who desire something more elaborate than the spray, there is the casket cover, made by uniting two large sprays, tying them together at the stems and filling in the space between with flowers stemmed on sticks. These large sprays are loosely tied with a pair or three long palm leaves under each as a background and support. They are made to extend the full length of an ordinary casket. Before the center is fully filled in, place a large bow of ribbon in the space, which gives finish and also takes the place of quite a few flowers. This can be elaborated with a shower effect of ribbons and flowers tied so as to fall over the sides and ends of the casket. While this is not, strictly speaking, a casket cover, yet it will answer the purpose for those who desire something at a lower price. It is a very good thing to suggest to a committee.

A showy piece is made of a cluster of palm leaves, six or eight, spread out fan shape, on which is placed a cluster of long-stemmed flowers or long, narrow sprays, which can be arranged loosely into one large arrangement. This piece is then placed on a good sized easel. A large bow of ribbon gives a finish and also provides space for any desired inscription. With a judicious use of foliage, green or colored autumn leaves, fancy ferns, hardy asters, etc., it will take comparatively few flowers to make a good appearance, as every flower shows to the front.

Wreaths are next in popularity. The bronze magnolia is the great standby; without any doubt, it is the most profitable item in the florist's stock. Many of the trade still stick to the galax, and pile up work for themselves at times like the present, when even the minutes are most precious. Every hour of leisure spent on making up magnolia leaf wreaths takes just so much strain off the "hurry-up" days when they come along. The made-up wreaths will keep for years in a cool place, and no florist should be without a stock of all sizes. Some say their customers will not take magnolia leaves; that is because they do not feature or push them. There is nothing handsomer than a well decorated magnolia wreath, which, with the necessary green, will take less flowers and time to finish than any other design in the florist's stock.

Galax leaves were very hard to introduce at first, but they have, in their long day, eked out many orders and taken the place of the much desired flowers when it was impossible to get them. Galax leaves, when made up, will not last long; they must be stemmed and arranged when ordered, and as magnolias will bring just as much money, and can be made up at all dull seasons, they have a great advantage over the galax. Wreaths of autumn leaves, and also of laurel, are quickly arranged and, when decorated with flowers and ribbon artistically placed, take but few flowers, little time, and bring good money. A line of wheat sheaves, to which flowers and ribbon can be added in a few minutes, is a great help at a busy time.

With certain classes of trade, artificial flowers made of waxed crepe paper, which are very natural in appearance, can be used on magnolia wreaths or in sprays, tied on palm leaves, and fill the bill. Such arrangements can be made up complete, boxed and ready for a chiffon bow and inscription when the opportunity offers.

Preparedness in the various items described above, together with a line of mossed wreath and other stock frames in much used sizes, will greatly relieve the pressure at holiday seasons or congested times like these through which we are now passing.

Importance of Advertising.

No doubt many of you read the address of Val Fisher, the London publisher, in regard to the importance of building good will through advertising, of which more has been done in the past four years than was done in 40 years previous to the war. He said: "Over 5,000,000 British women who never worked before have voluntarily gone to work to fill the places of men at the front. Hundreds of our women are working in factories making T. N. T.—a work that ruins the hair and turns the skin yellow, thus sacrificing their beauty for the rest of their lives for the sake of Britain and Freedom. We have only one business in England, and that is to win the war. We are all concentrated on that one thing, even to our boys and girls.

WREATH OF IVY LEAVES AND ORCHIDS

"You would think under such conditions, with as many men in active service in proportion to the population as you would have here, if you had 18,000,000 men in uniform that retail business would be bound to be bad, and yet, business is wonderfully good. You American business men are now in much the same position as were the British business men at the end of their first year of war. You are wondering what will be the effect of increasing the selective service, you are anticipating restrictions on your business, and I want to tell you some of our experiences so you may profit by them. The department stores usually reflect the state of trade, and during the period of the war the differences in sales as between the first year and the fourth year show an increase of over 100 per cent. Many of the stores lost business as shown by comparison. Those who curtailed their advertising slumped badly, while Selfridge, who did not skip a single day in their advertising during this entire period, showed an increase in profit of from $573,000 the first year to $1,125,000 the third year. Also, manufacturers who have not a dollar's worth of merchandise to sell, and whose entire plants are working on government work, are keeping their advertising before the public so as not to forfeit or sacrifice the good will, or have their products forgotten. And so they continue their advertising, continue building good will, so that when the war does end, their products will still remain a fixture in the people's mind."

Just so with our florists who have the vision of the three P's—Push, Perseverance and Progressiveness—to keep right on until Uncle Sam calls you, doing all possible to create goodwill by the quality of your products and making new customers by the tone of your advertising, thereby taking all advantages of the new condition occasioned by the increased earnings of the new classes of flower buyers.

Those who were leaders in the past, may be surpassed by others in the future, due to the new methods now necessary, owing to such changing conditions as are now being met by us all. And the florists, as well as all others concerned, who are quick and keen to note these changes, and who will fit themselves to the times, will be the ones benefited when it is all over and the boys come marching home.

So do not think of curtailing your advertising appropriation or lower your standards of business ethics, but keep it right up to 100 per cent efficiency, and it will work for you until you shall have retired, and when we have won the war, and win we will, the benefits accrued during this trying period will repay you for the effort given.

Yours for the Fourth Liberty Loan,
HENRY PENN,
Chairman, National Pub. Campaign.

WREATH OF CHRYSANTHEMUMS AND CROTON FOLIAGE BY A. LANGE, CHICAGO.

Florist Business In Canada During War.

Paper by W. W. Gammage, London, Ont., read at a meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club, October 10, 1918.

It is quite certain that few of us ever anticipated that a commercial enterprise, the florist business, could or would have to undergo so many adverse conditions as those that have been heaped upon us during the past four years. Yet, notwithstanding all we have had to contend with, weather conditions of the most adverse kind, coal shortage and high prices the last two years; the loss of our men by volunteering for overseas services, or attachment to other occupations, the uncertainty, difficulties, and losses attending European import shipments, the embargoes by express companies, the difficulty in obtaining and high cost of all supplies and material to both the retailer and the grower, and other conditions that tend to hamper, retard and disorganize business, we have been able to come through with a percentage of failures no greater than would have happened had normal conditions prevailed. With us it has been a time of trial balancing, not alone our physical assets, but our mental and moral capital. It has been a time of business retrospection. For the able and resourceful, a time of opportunity, a time for the building of new business walls and new business precautions. A time of business building that no crisis of the future can shatter or shake.

Pre-war Prosperity.—Prior to the declaration of war, August 4, 1914, we had enjoyed a period of prosperity. For several successive years, the backbone of commercial progress, agricultural crops, had been unusually good.

That the florists shared in the general prosperity was evidenced by the new establishments that sprang into existence and the additions to older concerns. It was not until some three or four months after the declaration of war that any depression in trade was felt. Then it came with an unexpected suddenness that bordered on panic. Banks called in their loans, manufacturers laid off their employees, travelers were called in, business was at a standstill. In cities and towns, all public work had ceased, and thousands of men were out of employment. It was not an uncommon sight to see processions of unemployed marching down streets or demanding assistance from civic government. This state of affairs. I am glad to say, did not last long. The Dominion government took vigorous steps to bring about a change. Millions of dollars of munitions orders were placed in all parts of the country. Manufacturers were working to capacity. Men were freely volunteering for overseas service. Unemployed became a vision of the past. Banks came to the assistance of manufacturers and merchants. Soon there was a steady stream of money flowing into the banks. There was a heretofore unknown prosperity abroad in the land. A war-created prosperity, a high-tension prosperity, that has brought an evolution in business methods and business practice.

How has it affected the Florists' Trade?—In cities and larger towns, the first year there was a serious depression. I speak of retail stores. The regular flower buyers had found a new occupation. Their energies, efforts and cash were all given to Red Cross and other patriotic work. There were no balls, no parties, no receptions, very few weddings, and these with only a small corsage or without flowers of any description. Funeral work was the mainstay; this did not fall off to any appreciable extent. All kinds of flowers and plants were plentiful and of finest quality, for the growers, anticipating a continuance of the former demand, had made preparations accordingly. It was then that carefully arranged window displays, judicious advertising, attractive week end sales, and a resourceful educational campaign brought results, a new class of customers. The skilled mechanic, the wage earner, the munition worker, who now, by virtue of their highly increased remuneration, were able to participate in some luxuries and enjoyments. These became the flower buyers, irregular at first, but gradually the practice became a habit, and the luxury a necessity. True, the individual sales are not as large, nor is the demand for the high-priced grades or the exclusive quality to be compared with pre-war times, but the demand for a medium grade is so much greater, more easily handled, satisfactory to both buyer and seller, and best of all a cash business. Nor is this trade confined to regular everyday sales. On Christmas, New Year's, Easter, Mothers' Day, and other special occasions, the total sales—money value—far exceed those of pre-war times. Thus, so far as the retail trade is concerned, it is sharing with other industries the present day prosperity, artificial though it may be.

Growers' Difficulties.—While the retail storekeeper, the man who buys all his stock, has had many adverse and difficult problems to contend with and overcome, his problems were but a troubled dream compared with those of the grower. The first year of the war, preparations had been made for an increased demand, but with the fall months came also the slump. Stocks were of high quality, but there was no demand. Many laid off their employees, or put them on short time. With the spring, however, came better sales, but prices were not of the profit bearing kind. Many growers depended to a considerable extent on importations from Europe. The increased cost of importation, delays and losses, have been so great that even before the embargo had been put on, many had ceased to import, depending on some other line to take the place of the imported article. The adjustment of crops to meet the changed market required but close observance to changing conditions, and a later anticipation on the part of the grower. But only those who have had the management of a greenhouse establishment can appreciate the almost insurmountable difficulties that were met with during the last two years. Many of the most dependable employees had enlisted and were either in training or had gone overseas. The constant change and unrest among labor made it next to impossible to keep abreast with necessary work. Then came the coal famine. Can you picture—I imagine you can—the blizzard blowing, the railway blocked, the man with only a few hours' burning on hand? Some of you have gone through this experience and can sympathize with your fellow grower. With the coal famine, came its consequent increased cost.

Then to add to the worries of the already overburdened grower, came an embargo by the express companies, one company absolutely refusing to carry any plants or cut flowers for over four months. Unfavorable weather conditions, inexperienced help, fuel more than double in cost, fertilizer and all material necessary for upkeep at an advanced cost of from 100 to 500 per cent and the uncertainty of selling their product at a sufficiently increased price to meet the extraordinary increased cost of production, has had the effect of causing a number to dismantle a portion of their houses, and others to discontinue the raising of plants and flowers until more favorable conditions return.

After the War Problems.—Much of the present day industrial activity, the demand for labor of all kinds at high wages, measured in money, is artificial. The direct cause is the expenditure of enormous sums for the production of war material and supplies. This abnormal outlay for war purposes, and the withdrawal of hundreds of thousands of men for military service, have combined to put a premium on labor and diffuse a prosperity, which has both advantages and dangers. Some day, war industries will find their special occupations gone. But while war work will end suddenly, the change to a peace basis cannot be completed in a week or a month. There will be a period of transition, which will bear hardly upon those who have made no provision against unemployment, if they are wage earners, or against trade depression, which may ensue on a curtailment of expenditure. Employment must be found also for the army of returned soldiers. But Canada is too fundamentally sound and too naturally wealthy, to be given a set back of long duration. Because money is plentiful, and because its purchasing power has fallen, we value it less. But we should not be blind to its warnings. Many Canadians, and this will apply to the United States as well, particularly in cities and towns, will later regret their improvidence, if they have saved nothing. Those who today are spending as they earn, are the class of buyers we are depending upon. Therefore, we may look and be prepared for a change, which sooner or later, will take place. The time is fast approaching when the energies of the nation will be directed to the re-establishment of normal conditions, when those who have so liberally given of their possessions, their time and devotion to a just and honorable cause, will resume the ordinary course of living. Will flowers hold the same place in their estimation as before? Does our business salvation rest in our own hands? Shall we sit down and quietly await developments? Shall we drift with the tide and take our chances of being dashed upon the rocks of adversity? Or shall we guide our business destiny with a firm and resourceful diplomacy that will bring its reward in the participation of that substantial prosperity, that new international development of resources, that new interchange of trade and commerce which these two great nations, who, their men fighting, dying side by side in defense of home and honor, shall share together?

Dangerous Soil.

* * * "To make matters worse, these great jagged, pocketed wounds were not clean at all. On the contrary, they were simply loaded and packed with filth, carried in from the fragments of shell from the dirt in which it had exploded, and as this war happened to be fought upon the most intensively cultivated and richly fertilized soil in Europe, it followed that every foot of earth was simply swarming with all the bacteria of the manure heap and of the commercial slaughter-house fertilizer, including the germs of tetanus, the germs of gas gangrene and a dozen putrefactive organisms."—Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Metropolitan Magazine.

The foregoing is an extract from an article by Dr. Hutchinson on the "Conquests of Surgery," and is here reproduced to impress on our readers the danger that may come, even from a cut or other slight flesh wound becoming filled with highly cultivated soil. Dr. Hutchinson goes on to state that wonders in surgery have been accomplished, greatly assisted by the discovery of antotoxins for tetanus and the gas gangrene.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Bench Stock.

The routine general care of the cut bloom stock, as the growing season draws to a close, should be strictly attended to. It is a serious mistake to let up on any part of the necessary care when the results of the season's work are to be realized. Finish up any a crack to insure a free circulation of air. When the weather conditions become such that firing will have to be done during the daytime, keep the houses evenly at 50-52 degrees, also with a little ventilation on. Many times at this season of the year, we get periods of damp, muggy weather, accompanied with fogs and the outside temperature a few degrees above what the inside should be. Conditions such as these are very trying for the best development of the blooms, and unless and close, excessive heat, which forces open the blooms before their time. At such periods as these, a light shading will have to be put on the glass to protect the blooms and hold them back, but unless it is absolutely necessary chrysanthemum blooms are better if developed without any shading. These periods of high temperature quickly tell whether the plants have been overfed with manure or not, highly fed blooms spoiling much quicker than those moderately fed.

CUTTING AND SHIPPING.

All blooms should be cut just before they are fully developed; do not hold on to the early varieties to run into the season of the other sections or there is bound to be a considerable loss, the early varieties not measuring up to fresher varieties in season two or three weeks later. After cutting the blooms, carry them to the packing room to be graded. Strip off the lower leaves of the stem, then after they are graded break off a piece of the stem before setting the blooms in water. The blooms will keep better when the stem is left with the ragged end caused by the breaking than when a clean cut is made by a knife or shears. Place the blooms upright in vases of water holding just enough blooms to handle easily without crushing. Do not overcrowd either in the vases or the quarters where they are to stand. All blooms should stand in water at least 12 hours before packing or shipping; also, those sold direct to customers, should stand in water the same length of time, if possible, and the customer be instructed to place them in water as soon as they arrive at their destination.

The packing and shipping of chrysanthemums has always been a problem, but under the present conditions it is a great deal more so. Growers located within reasonable distance of the market are now using motor trucks to get their stock to the market, but when they have to be shipped by express pack the blooms as lightly and securely as possible, making sure that they will not move or get crushed while in transit.

disbudding still to be done on the later varieties, and make sure any buds up near the glass are drawn away, giving room for the blooms' proper development. The three most essential requirements for the blooms' best development from this time are: First, plenty of fresh air to thoroughly ripen the wood; second, care in watering the beds, allowing the soil to dry out to a reasonable extent between each watering, to enable the bloom to develop slowly, to insure a hard petalage not easily susceptible to spotting or damping; third, maintain a dry, cool temperature at all times.

Concerning the airing of the house, give plenty of ventilation on all favorable occasions. The plants need light and air to harden the wood properly to produce first-class blooms; under close, stuffy conditions the growth will continue to draw out and become spindly at the expense of the bloom. The main object for the rest of the plants' existence is not to promote stem and foliage growth, but to encourage them to throw the principal part of their strength into the development of the blooms. Draughts or cold currents of air blowing directly on the plants through open doors or side ventilators should be avoided, but a dry, fresh atmosphere should be maintained at all times. The day temperature for a considerable time longer will be controlled by the regulation of the ventilators, but nearly every night from now on a little steam heat will be necessary to maintain the required temperature. As soon as the outside temperature drops below 40 degrees, a little artificial heat will have to be used inside to keep the houses up to the mark. When steam has to be used, maintain the night temperature of the houses at 46-48 degrees, with the ridge ventilators opened extra caution is used to guard against unnecessary dampness inside there is bound to be considerable damping of the petals. On these occasions, water the beds only as absolutely needed and attend to the work early enough in the day so that the house is reasonably dry before nightfall. The writer has experienced times when no water has been given the chrysanthemum beds for a week or more at a time.

The period commonly known as "Indian summer," during October, is sometimes a period of high temperature

EXAMINING COMMITTEES.

President Wm. W. Vert announces the committees to examine new chrysanthemums for the ensuing year as follows:

Boston, Mass.—William Nicholson, (chairman), James Wheeler, Alex. Montgomery. Ship flowers to chairman, care of W. J. Thurston, manager, Boston Flower Exchange, 1 Winthrop square and Otis street, Boston.

New York—Eugene Dailledouze (chairman), Wm. H. Duckham, A. Herrington. Ship flowers to New York Cut Flower Co., 55 Twenty-second street, New York, care of chairman.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A. B. Cartledge (chairman), John Westcott, S. S. Pennock. Ship flowers to A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Cincinnati, O.—R. Witterstaetter (chairman), James Allen, J. C. Murphy. Ship flowers to chairman, Jabez Elliott Flower Market, care of janitor.

Chicago—N. J. Wietor (chairman), F. A. Kanst, Thomas W. Head. Ship flowers to chairman, 162 North Wabash avenue, Chicago.

Shipments should be made to arrive by 2 p. m. on examination days to receive attention from the committee. Must be prepaid to destination and an entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week they are to be examined, or it may accompany the blooms.

Seedlings and sports are both eligible to be shown before these committees, provided the raiser has given them two years' trial to determine their true character. Special attention is called to the rule that sports, to receive a certificate, must pass at least three of the five committees.

The committees will be in session to examine such exhibits as may be submitted on each Saturday during October and November, the dates of which will be October 12, 19, 26 and November 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30.

Newer Good Dahlias.

(The following brief commentary, written last March, was in response to a request from the late J. Harrison Dick. While somewhat belated, the points covered remained unchanged.)

Your cordial and flattering invitation for me to air my views on the "Newer Good Dahlias," and my consequent consideration of the subject with a view of acceptance, has resulted in the realization that the war has, to a very large extent, closed to us the chief sources from which the vast majority of our novelties and improvements in dahlias have issued. We have depended upon England, France and other countries so completely and they have provided so liberally that we have not found it necessary, much less profitable, to produce new varieties in America.

It is therefore fair to consider that the present embargo is really a blessing in disguise. I like the way our California brethren print the names of their own productions in capitals. It spells pride. Pride of accomplishment. Let us hope that the result of a check in the flow of European novelties will be the production of many more worthy sorts of American creation. We will make room in our gardens and catalogues for more good ones like Mina Burgle, Golden Gate, Dorothy Peacock, Dreer's White, Oregon Beauty, Manzanola, etc.

It is going to be a big job. England fortified with the wonderful exhibition sorts of Stredwick and others, and France credited with such wonders as Etendard de Lyon, Mme. Eschenaur, Pierrot, Mrs. Roosevelt, Mme. Coissard, etc.

It means work to equal and much more work to surpass them. Can we do it? The answer must come with a patriotic determination to exert greater effort. We have not only equaled but surpassed the foreign growers in cannas, and I am firmly convinced that we can and will lead in the improvement of the dahlia.

Fred Krauss.

For Many Years First Lieutenant of E. F. Winterson, Chicago, Now With the Colors at Camp Merritt, New Jersey.

By the above I do not mean to convey the impression that there are no worthy novelties offered this year. But I do confess that none of last year's trials made sufficient impression upon me to justify a serious rearrangement of the previous lists submitted to me.—E. H. Michel, in American Dahlia Society Bulletin.

How To Make Both Ends Meet.

Paper by R. P. Barr, Lancaster, Pa., read at a meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Association, at Leola, Pa., September 19, 1918.

Those who read President Totty's call for volunteers on the subject of production cost, as a means of educating the grower as well as the retailer to the prices he should have for his output in order to place his business on a proper plane as a commercial enterprise will realize that unless we can meet existing conditions without sacrificing the things that rightfully belong to us, and at the same time contribute our share towards winning the war, we surely can not term our business as essential.

Gentlemen, this is a matter of utmost importance, and one that must be worked out individually, as every florist has different conditions which enter into the cost of production, and some of us are probably more successful than others. The principal matter, however, is how to govern prices on our product in order to make both ends meet.

Every successful enterprise governs its selling price on the cost of production, distribution, sales, overhead or any other division of expenses that may accrue, and until we do this we have no way of knowing whether we are going forward or backward. It is true the market is glutted at times, usually due to climatic conditions, and stock is sold below cost in order to move it, which is a great mistake. How much better would it be to send this surplus to one of our hospitals or cantonments than to flood the markets and drive prices downwards. I have reference to those who ship flowers on commission; whenever the commission house has an oversupply, the price tumbles, because they are obliged to move the stock and get what they can out of it for the benefit of the shipper.

You have all noticed how prices advance when stock is scarce. Why not keep them scarce until prices rise to where they belong, and I feel quite sure if the producer knows the costs, the flowers would be selling at very much higher prices than they are today. It seems very foolish indeed to continue selling stock at prices formerly used in the face of the rising costs encountered. In the long run, one does not sell much more stock at a cheap price than at a profitable price. I realize this fact more every day. People are accustomed to having high prices, and unless we can advance our prices in comparison with the cost of production, we had better get in some other line of business.

We all know the cost of labor is double what it was last year, and as this item is 50 to 60 per cent of our expense account, against 28 to 30 per cent of last year, it is easy to figure what we should have for our product at the present time. From our own expense accounts, tabulated monthly in comparison with last year's, I am thoroughly convinced that the cost of production is 30 to 40 per cent higher than in 1917. We keep an accurate monthly record of all our expenses separated and take them in account in fixing our selling prices, instead of our competitors' prices, and would rather take a chance on losing a little business than losing money, in doing it. In comparing nursery lists from the different sections, I find the big houses have advanced their prices 25 per cent over prices one year ago, and in some cases even higher.

Whether the florist business is 50 or 100 per cent essential depends largely on ourselves. If we cannot make a reasonable margin on our goods, we certainly cannot contribute to the winning of the war, after all the most important business of today. Let me say again, watch your expense account and base your selling price on the cost or the same margin of profit you had two years ago, which was then, as you all know, entirely too small.

OBITUARY.

Louis Schmutz, Jr.

Louis Schmutz, Jr., a well known plant grower of Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., died on the night of October 8, after a long illness of heart and kidney disease. About last Christmas, he was taken with pneumonia, and though he recovered sufficiently to go about for a time, complications set in, and he gradually sank. In health he had been a stout and rugged man, but despite the best medical skill, he gradually wasted away. He was born in Brooklyn, 44 years ago, where his father, Louis Schmutz, Sr., who had been a soldier in the French army during the Franco-Prussian war, and was a native of Alsace, had settled, after his native province was lost to France.

Louis, Jr., had always worked with his father, and they had established a fine plant-growing business. Louis, up to the time of his illness, being the active manager. He was a bluff and cheerful man, and was popular with business associates and customers. He had been, for 18 years, a member of the New York Florists' Club, and was a member of the Foresters' of America and other fraternal organizations. He is survived by his wife, nee Martha Peltz, three daughters, his parents and four brothers. Funeral services were held at the home, 442 Clarkson street, on the evening of October 11, by the Rev. David A. McMurray, pastor of the Lenox Road Baptist church. Interment was in Evergreen cemetery, Brooklyn, October 12.

A. F. F.

The Late Charles Gustavus Roebling.

In the death, October 5, of Charles Gustavus Roebling, of Trenton, N. J., president of the John A. Roebbling's Sons Company, one of the world's greatest organizations of engineers, floriculture has lost a most eminent enthusiast and patron. Mr. Roebbling was born in Trenton in 1849, and became engaged in the business of his father, the late John A. Roebbling, in 1871, becoming active in the progress of the firm from practically its infancy, until it reached the enormous valuation of $50,000,000, furnishing employment for 8,000 workers, for many years being the head of the enterprise.

In the early eighties, Mr. Roebbling, as a relaxation from the cares of business, engaged in floriculture as a hobby, specializing in orchids, and it was in orchid culture that he became best known to the trade in both America and Europe. He gathered together a collection of orchids which was recognized as the finest in America, and which compared very favorably with some of the best of the European collections. He spared neither money nor pains to secure the rarest of specimens, the collection eventually requiring about 12,000 feet of glass to accommodate it. He was known as a successful hybridist, and not a few of his hybrids have found their way into commerce, notably Cypripedium Wm. McKinley, C. President Garfield, C. Abraham Lincoln, Zygopetalum Roebblingiana and many others. Some of the varieties in his collection were considered as priceless, and he had at all times facilities for hybridization work such as few would consider possible.

He was well known as an exhibitor at the most important shows, and won many prizes. He is remembered as the winner of the second prize at the big orchid show held in Boston in 1910, in competition with the largest commercial firms in the business. He was a regular exhibitor at the flower shows in New York, and any movement looking to the advancement of horticulture had his unstinted support. The town of Roebbling, which he founded, very naturally benefited horticulturally through his interested effort, home plantings receiving his especial commendation and encouragement. Every year this prosperous little town held a flower show of no mean order, of which he was patron and leading spirit, and this annual event evoked much enthusiasm among the population.

The deceased will be greatly missed in horticultural circles, where he was greatly esteemed and looked up to as one who had done much for horticulture in this country. He was very easy of approach and was always ready to give time and attention to the many in the trade with whom he was acquainted. It was the privilege of the writer to enjoy business relations with the deceased extending over a period of nearly 30 years, during which time his constancy to his well-chosen hobby was most marked, and his faith in the ultimate appreciation generally of the benefit and pleasure to be derived from the study and practice of horticulture was remarkable in its strength.

Mr. Roebbling was a member of the S. A. F., of the Horticultural Society of New York, Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

JOSEPH A. MANDA.

Charles T. Evenden.

Charles T. Evenden, secretary of the well-known florist firm of Evenden Bros. Co., of Williamsport, Pa., which was founded by his grandfather and of which his father, George W. Evenden is the president, died at his home in that city, October 8, of pneumonia, following his return from a trip to New York. He had been engaged in the florist business practically all of his life. He stood high in the community. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and was actively identified with several local organizations.

Seth Miller.

Seth Miller, for a number of years owner of the Green Floral Co., Dallas, Tex., which property he purchased from E. H. R. Green, and was active in its management until his death, passed away at his home in that city, October 10. He had been ill for several months. Mr. Miller was widely known throughout the south, having before entering the florist field, represented the interests of Arbuckle Bros., coffee merchants, in that section. He is survived by a widow, two daughters and three sisters.

Alexander Mead.

Alexander Mead, probably the oldest florist of Connecticut, and for the past 60 years in business at Greenwich, died there, October 13, in the house in which he was born 83 years ago. He was a member of one of the oldest families of Connecticut, and was the oldest member of the Second Congregational church of Greenwich. On account of his long connection with the business, he was well known and highly respected in the trade of New York and other neighboring cities. He is survived by one daughter and one son.

ANNUAL DAHLIA SHOW.

The annual dahlia show of the above society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, October 2. There was an excellent display of flowers, fruits and vegetables. Competition was keen in most classes and the quality was up to the usual high standard. The vegetable exhibits interested a larger number of persons this year than formerly, because of the interest which has been aroused through the food production and conservation campaign. Robt. Jones, the efficient manager, assisted by Jas. Gladstone, and the committee organized on the excellent arrangement of the show. The judges were Wm. Robertson, Portchester; Geo. Ferguson, Manhasset, and John W. Everitt, Glen Cove. The principal prize winners were Mrs. W. J. Macheson (Jas. Kirby, Gr.), Mrs. C. F. Cartledge (Wm. Noonan, Gr.), P. W. Popp, Mamaroneck, Mrs. C. D. Smithers (Thos. Henderson, Gr.), Mrs. J. E. Aldred (Thomas Twigg, Gr.), Irving Cox (Frank Petroccia, Gr.), A. G. Hodenpyl (Joe Mastrolairi (Gr.), Mrs. M. E. Taylor (Geo. F. Platt, Gr.), A. V. Davis (Alex. McKenzie, Gr.), Mrs. Percy Chubb (Robt. Jones, Gr.), and James Holloway. In the class for table decoration, Robt. Jones was awarded first prize. Wm. Noonan second and Thos. Henderson, third. John Scheepers & Co. had a display of their new raspberry, La France, which was awarded a certificate of merit. A vase of dahlias, Elsa, exhibited by Jas. Holloway received Honorable Mention. A very large and attractive display of dahlias was staged by Wm. Noonan. The judges awarded it a certificate of culture. P. W. Popp also had a fine display, which was awarded a cultural certificate.

CLUB MEETING.

The regular monthly meeting of the society was held in Pembroke hall, October 9, President Robt. Jones presiding. The judges appointed for the monthly exhibits were John F. Johnston, James McCarthy and Thomas Meech. The following awards were made in competition: Six carrots, first to Joe Mastrolairi; exhibition, six ears of corn, Golden Dawn. Thanks of the Society to Joe Mastrolairi, vase of dahlias, Honorable Mention, to Jas. Holloway. Thos. Twigg generously offered a $5 gold piece for the 12 heaviest potatoes to be competed for in competition at our next monthly meeting to be held November 13. The society's prizes are: Chrysanthemums, three white, three pink and three yellow. A barrel of potatoes has been donated for each day of the chrysanthemum show October 31. November 1, to be used as a door prize. The ladies will judge the table decorations on the second day of the show.

IN a letter to the New York World, Otto H. Kahn advocates a tax of one per cent on every purchase exceeding $2, the tax to be borne by the purchaser, not the seller. A similar tax was successfully used in the civil war.

Personal.

Patrick O'Mara, former president of the Society of American Florists, has been in the employ of Peter Henderson & Co., New York, 50 years.

E. H. Cushman, well-known gladiolus grower, is located at Redlands, Calif., for the winter season.

Wicker Exhibition Vases.

The wicker framed exhibition vases in various sizes as adopted by the American Rose Society and used for the first time at its recent rose festival at Philadelphia, Pa., were a great success. They are practical, durable and ornamental. Jos. G. Neidinger of that city designed and manufactured them without profit to show his interest in the work of the society. In dimensions they are 16x4, 24x6, 32x8 and 38x10, enameled in white. The willow skeleton basket contains a galvanized iron jar, painted a dark olive green. The decorative effect of the vases when filled with flowers was very pleasing and the old fibre jar is now labeled for the discard. When not in use the vases and covers are nested and packed in suitable shipping cases, ready for their journey to the next year's exhibition.

Antirrhinum Rust.

Dr. George L. Peltier, formerly of the University of Illinois experiment station, and at present engaged in a like capacity in Alabama, has carried on studies of the antirrhinum rust and his results are soon to be published in a bulletin of the Illinois station, some of the conclusions being briefly as follows:

"The use of Bordeaux, ammoniacal copper carbonate, or Fungine, will neither prevent, check nor control snapdragon rust in the field or greenhouse.

"The use of cuttings or seedlings infected with the rust may mean a complete failure of the crop.

"Snapdragon rust is not carried on the seeds and, providing no rust is present on the place, clean plants can be grown."

From these statements, it is seen that there is no possible way to control the rust when present in the house except by destroying all infected plants, thoroughly cleaning the house and beginning with a new, clean stock of plants.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The completion of our campaign fund of $50,000 is lagging—lagging at a time when interest should be most intense. It is not due to lack of enthusiasm, for the florists who have subscribed are most enthusiastic, and we know that this feeling also extends to many who have not subscribed. Those who have ignored our appeal must admit that the $500 or more members of our trade who are loyal to its interests are worthy of commendation without limit—the volunteers who in an emergency have gone "over the top," some of them as many as three times. The future trade is safe in such hands.

It is not too late to join these protectors of our industry, and they will welcome any who have not yet subscribed. This campaign is welding bonds of friendship among the best florists, and the best are those who can look over their own shoulders, who place their calling squarely in front of them, unprejudiced by petty jealousy, and who are dominated by that altruistic spirit which makes for the good of all rather than the individual.

Where do you stand, Mr. Reader? Are you with the protectors, or are you an onlooker. The latter, is it because you are careless, content to see the other fellow passing out good money in order that you may with him benefit in the excellent results promised by the campaign? Or, is it because you have not realized what this publicity movement means to you or your business? If the latter, just drop a line to the secretary with the request that he give you particulars and send you material which will enable you to see for yourself that you can become a working factor in this organized effort to increase the sale of flowers, and thus enable our industry to weather the storm that is threatening it. And yours is only a pro rata help. If your business is small, a large contribution is not expected. Give what you think you can afford, even five dollars a year. It will show your good spirit, and your interest in what is good for the business from which you make your living.

Do this now, without delay.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The last meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, held at the Hotel Randolph, October 10, was devoted exclusively to Liberty Loan business, the florists and allied trades of the city and suburbs (not including nurserymen and seedsmen) enthusiastically going over the top, with a quota of $300,000, subscribing over $50,000 on the spot. The grand total of the subscriptions as we go to press $331,000, and still going splendidly in the closing days of the campaign. This happy condition reflects the greatest credit on Chairman Lautenschlager and his energetic co-workers who, despite very unusual trade conditions at this time, their business requiring long hours and close application, have heroically worked overtime Sundays and weekdays to back up Uncle Sam in the winning of the war.

In addition the members attending this club meeting, in response to the plea of the veteran French soldier, Capt. Maurice Bernhardt, who fought with the United States army in the civil war, subscribed $87.96 to the fund for French and Belgian children.

This meeting will go down in history as the best in every way during the existence of the club, placing the trade of our city in the first rank when real patriotism is needed.

Pittsburgh.

DEMAND UNUSUALLY HEAVY.

The demand for stock has been unusually heavy, with the supply far below requirements, and consequently many disappointments. There have been good cuts of roses, including American Beauty, but not nearly what are required. Ophelia, Killarney and Russell are among the best offerings. The shorts sell at $6 and the long grades at $15 per 100. American Beauty specials have advanced to 50 cents. There are also a few carnations of good quality to be seen, which are offered at $4 per 100. Lilies are very scarce, as most of the growers are short on them during the chrysanthemum season. They sold as high as $25 per 100 last week. A few lavender and yellow chrysanthemums are arriving, and help out considerably, and good prices are obtained for them. There has been an excellent supply of dahlias, and this market has been fortunate in having scarce fancy stock during this period of scarcity. The flowers are really remarkable and wonderful in color, and the demand is, of course, much greater than the supply. Prices hold firm at $10 to $12 per 100, almost as much as for the large chrysanthemums. The first yellow daisies have reached the market, but are short-stemmed and small flowers, and are used principally in funeral work. Many of the retailers have been forced to use artificial flowers. Greens are hard to obtain.

COAL CONSUMERS MEET.

A meeting of the florists of western Pennsylvania, who are coal consumers, was held at the salesroom of the McCallum Co., October 7. It was opened by an address by T. P. Langhans, who gave reasons for calling the gathering the local fuel administrator having suggested the appointment of a committee whose duty it should be to take up all questions relating to the fuel situation, as far as florists and gardeners were concerned, with him. It was also stated that there might be some modification of the order previously sent out. After an informal discussion, Mr. Langhans was selected chairman of the committee, with power to name his associates, three in number. They are B. L. Elliott, Henry Meuschke and E. J. McCallum, secretary. Any special information desired regarding the fuel situation will be supplied on request to Mr. Langhans.

NOTES.

Word was received during the past week by Manager H. C. Sheaff, of Mrs. E. A. Williams' establishment, that Charles G. Ulmer, who, before his enlistment in the American forces, was one of the most valuable men of the store staff, has arrived safely in France. He joined the radio service at Carnegie School of Technology in July and was sent to Europe after two months' training.

DeForest Ludwig has returned from what he reports the most interesting meeting in the history of the F. T. D., held at Cleveland, O., last week. He makes it a point to be in attendance at all of the gatherings of this live retailers' organization.

William Turner, of Wilkensburg, is cutting a fine crop of dahlias and white chrysanthemums.

INTERESTING CLUB MEETING.

The florists' club meeting October 10 brought out a large attendance. The big drawing feature was an address by W. W. Gammage, London, Ont., on "The Florist Business During Four Years of War in Canada." Mr. Gammage, accompanied by Frank McKenna, Montreal, George Dick and Emery B. Hamilton, of London, were on their return from the F. T. D. meeting at Cleveland, and before the club meeting were shown about the city by the local florists. Mr. Gammage's paper was highly interesting and elicited much praise by its careful preparation, and which depicts from the grower's and retailer's viewpoints the crucial conditions brought about by the war and the best methods of adjusting the trade to the violently changed conditions which similarly this country is now experiencing.

Frank McKenna, of Montreal, gave added interest to the subject, by his recital of the conditions peculiarly affecting the remote eastern part of the country. George Dick and E. B. Hamilton both favored the meeting with short addresses. Philip Breitmeyer gave a report of the F. T. D. meeting at Cleveland, and Secretary Pochelon of that association, with his usual enthusiasm, added his observation of the great work done in the "Forest City." M. Eloy, who had just returned from an auto trip to New York, via Cleveland, gave an interesting talk on his pleasant experiences while away. Others of the Detroit party to Cleveland who gave reports of the meeting there were E. A. Feters, H. Forster and J. F. Sullivan. Three applications for membership in the club were received.

NOTES.

Philip Breitmeyer entertained the Canadian visitors at luncheon at the Detroit Athletic Club at noon Thursday and again at dinner at the Country Golf Club after an auto ride through the beautiful hills and lakes of Pontiac and vicinity.

Considerable activity in retail circles marks the passing of the dull summer and early fall days, and a genuine scarcity of flowers of any kind makes the retail situation hard to handle and resourcefulness of all is heavily taxed.

Patrick O'Mara, of New York, made a brief stay in this city on his return from Chicago, October 14. He was entertained at luncheon by Philip Breitmeyer, in company with J. F. Sullivan.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange has acquired by purchase the wire manufacturing business of Wm. Hulscher, who has retired to a farm at Leonard, Mich. J. F. S.

Boston.

BETTER SUPPLY, BUT STILL INSUFFICIENT.

A great improvement is noticeable in the supply arriving in this market, but still not enough to meet the heavy demand. Large shipments are received daily from outside points, but prices continue high. The various wholesale houses have their representatives in New York buying up everything available. Wire frames, galax and moss have doubled in price. Roses are in great demand and are held at high figures. Among the quotations are Carnations, $8-$12 per 100; chrysanthemums, $3-$4 per dozen; asters, small and poor, $6 per 100; lilies, 25 cents per bud.

NOTES.

William Nicholson, of Framingham, is cutting heavily on October Frost chrysanthemums and carnations. His home trade has increased to such an extent that he can make only two shipments to this market each week.

Welch Bros. Co. is doing a heavy business. This firm grasped the situation and is receiving large shipments from out of the state.

Mrs. W. H. Ward has arrived home from the hospital where she has been for six months, suffering from a nervous breakdown.

Julius Snyder, of B. A. Snyder & Co., is in New York, and is sending back shipments of asters, roses, carnations and lilies.

Paul Richwagen has started cutting his new snapdragon, Virginia, which finds a ready market at good figures.

At Galvin's two stores business is very good and the force is kept working day and night.

Beasley & Co. have started to bring to market pansies and button chrysanthemums.

Malcolm Muncy, salesman for the J. A. Budlong Co., died recently from pneumonia.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. are working day and night and cannot keep up with orders. S. K. G.

Dear Madam:

Your efforts to procure flowers for men in the different sick bays in Incoming Detention are very much appreciated. Cotterill mentioned that it was almost impossible to procure flowers last week, and since the situation has changed greatly I can appreciate the position you are in. The flowers you did send were received in fine shape, and I certainly want to thank you for sending them as they went a long ways towards cheering up the men.

I wish to thank you again for your courtesey and thoughtfulness, and assure you I will be glad to hear from you when conditions change.

Yours very truly,

STOCK CONTINUES TO BE VERY SCARCE.

There is no great change in the market conditions from last week, which means that stock of all kinds is extremely scarce and commanding high prices. The demand is principally for funeral flowers, but fancy stock is moving quickly, owing to the extreme scarcity, and in some instances choice Sunburst, Champ Weiland and Ophelia have sold as high as $20 and more per 100, the past week. Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia are in exceptionally brisk demand at high prices, which holds true for roses in general. My Maryland, Hoosier Beauty, Milady, Richmond, Hadley, Montrose, Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Double White Killarney, Killarney Queen, Mrs. Moorfield Storey, and Mrs. Bayard Thayer are included in the offerings, not to mention the miniature varieties. Nesbit, Baby Doll, Cecile Brunner, and George Elgar. American Beauty roses are cleaning up nicely at high prices right along, and some exceptionally fine stock in this line is now reaching the market. Carnations are scarce, and what stock is arriving is picked up early at surprisingly good figures. Lilies are scarce, at $15 per 100, owing to the fact that the growers cut down their plantings during the chrysanthemum season and, naturally, the general shortage of other stock that has existed here for several weeks. The gladioli season is over, and there is practically no stock in this line available now. Some late asters from Michigan are being received in good-sized quantities, and are disposed of quickly, at prices ranging from $4 to $6 per 100, and in some instances, as high as $8 in the fancier grades. Orchids are holding their own, at $10 to $12 per

Over the Top.

The florists and allied trades of Chicago and vicinity—not including seedsmen and nurserymen—have subscribed $331,600 in the Fourth Liberty Loan drive up to and including October 15, their quota being $300,000.

As a further indication of how they feel about the war, they are trying hard to make it $350,000 before the close of the campaign this week.

dozen, for select stock, and there is a large enough demand to take care of the few gardenias that are arriving. Lily of the valley is scarce, and cleans up early at the advertised quotation. Home-grown single violets are bringing 75 cents per 100, and the New York doubles, $1 per 100. Sweet peas are arriving in limited supply, and a few panies, daisies, snapdragons and calceolarias are to be had. Outdoor stock is moving fast at higher prices than ever this season. Chrysanthemums are gradually becoming more plentiful, but find a ready market at prices ranging as high as $6 to $8 per 100 for extra select, especially Golden Queen. Most of the chrysanthemums are being cut extra tight, owing to the extreme shortage of stock in general, so no great change in the market can be expected for some time to come, for the growers are ahead of their cut, and besides the retailers in general are fortunate in securing enough stock to take care of their immediate orders, without being able to have a chance to stock up. Pompoms are bringing good prices. Green goods are commanding higher figures, and ferns sold as high as $4 and $5 per 100 the past week, with very little stock available. Smilax is also bringing high prices. Magnolia leaves are in extremely brisk demand, and the call for leucothea and boxwood is exceptionally brisk Saturday, October 12, was a big day for the wholesale florists, when the sales, in some instances, amounted to more than the best during the Christmas holidays. The retail florists, especially in the loop, did not fare so well, owing to the big parade, which blocked traffic in almost all directions, for practically the entire afternoon. The death rate, owing to the Spanish influenza, is still very heavy, and the daily papers are carrying an unusually large number of obituary notices. No one is complaining of dull business in either the wholesale or retail line, which is away ahead of October of last year so far, and the only complaint—coming from all sides—is on account of the extreme scarcity of stock. The trade in general is willing to spend money when they have it, and the most gratifying news of the past week, was that the trade has oversubscribed its quota of bonds for the Fourth Liberty Loan, and is still going strong.

NOTES.

This city experienced its worst day, October 15, since the Spanish influenza became prevalent. There were 1,779 new cases reported with 183 deaths and 442 new cases of pneumonia with 134 deaths. Theatres, dance-halls and other public places have been closed, and churches, Sunday schools, saloons, political meetings, conventions, cabarets and other places of public assemblage may be instructed to do likewise by the influenza-pneumonia commission until conditions here and the balance of the state become improved. The commission, after being in executive session from early Tuesday night until shortly after midnight, announced that it had considered issuing a sweeping order which would practically make it impossible for persons to gather in groups. After another session today the decision will be announced. The situation is becoming alarming and while the closing order will affect business to some extent the trade in general has about all the business it can conveniently handle due to the large amount of funeral work.

Paul Klingsporn and C. L. Sherer, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, managed to be on the job all this week, even though they were slightly under the weather, owing to either a heavy cold or an attack of Spanish influenza. Eddie Hunt, who used to be with this firm, was down with the influenza for some time at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, but appeared to be in pretty fair shape when he called on the boys this week.

In the case of William Langhout, bankrupt, Sidney C. Eastman, referee in bankruptcy, has issued notice to the effect that the first meeting of creditors will be held at his office, 907 Monadnock building, this city, October 22 at 10 o'clock A. M. at which time creditors may attend, prove their claims and transact such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

Sigmund Misiewicz, son of Mrs. Misiewicz, who operates a retail florist store on Milwaukee avenue, who was with the American troops in France, died there recently from pneumonia, according to word received here last week. He was well-known in the local wholesale market, where he spent nearly all of his spare time.

Cut Flowers and Greens

Zech & Mann are more than pleased with business the past month, and have taken pretty good care of their regular customers, although they could have handled much more stock to good advantage. Chrysanthemums are more plentiful at this house but, like everything else, clean up early.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago, through its president, J. C. Vaughan, awarded its silver garden medal to Mrs. Laura Dainty Pelham, president of the Chicago City Gardens Association, for success in 1,000 community gardens, at a luncheon given at the City Club, October 10.

Wietor Bros. are starting to cut chrysanthemums quite heavily, which are in brisk demand and clean up early. Their collection of pompons is unusually fine this year, and there will be plenty to supply all their customers throughout the season.

Miss Thelma Vaughan, daughter of A. L. Vaughan, well-known wholesale florist, is recovering from a severe attack of Spanish influenza. Mr. Vaughan has had a slight touch of it, but managed to weather the gale, and is on the job every day.

Bassett & Washburn are in good crop with chrysanthemums, especially Golden Queen and Yellow Queen, of splendid quality. Walter Johnson, of this establishment, who is a member of the reserve militia, marched in the big parade, October 12.

Peter Reinberg's shipments include a good supply of carnations, which command high prices and clean up quickly each day. The shipping trade is particularly heavy, and it is impossible to anywhere near take care of the local demand.

J. A. Budlong is handling a good supply of fancy stock, considering the shortage in this market, especially chrysanthemums and roses. The blue daisies featured here are taking well with both the trade and general public.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. has been cutting unusually fine flowers of Cattleya labiata in large quantity the past week. American Beauty roses of splendid quality are a leader here and are in brisk demand at high prices.

Arthur Paulus and Andrew Keil have purchased the store formerly operated by F. O. Franzen at 5319 North Clark street and are well pleased with the amount of business they have done since they took possession.

Peter Hoefelder, who has been at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., for several weeks, was honorably discharged from the army, and is again attending to his duties at Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store.

Fred Nichols, who has been helping out at Peter Reinberg's store during the summer months, will open a retail store in the Atlas building, Room 203.

Vincent Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, Mo., stopped off here this week on his way home from the F. T. D. meeting, at Cleveland.

George Collins, superintendent of the Henry Smith greenhouses, at Grand Rapids, Mich., visited relatives and friends here this week.

Michael Fink and family are all recovering from an attack of the Spanish influenza.

Anton Then is recovering from a severe attack of Spanish influenza.

The meeting of the creditors of the bankrupt firm of Fyfe & Olsen, Wilmette, to have been held at the office of Sidney C. The Raedlein Basket Co. reports business as exceptionally brisk with new orders arriving steadily. Their new catalog is ready for distribution and will only be mailed free upon request.

Matt Mann, of Zech & Mann, has the sympathy of his many friends in the loss of a brother-in-law whose death occurred at Milwaukee, Wis., this week.

John Carlson is back on the job at A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s store after being confined to his home for a week with the Spanish influenza.

John Furrow and wife, who have been spending their honeymoon in the east, passed through here this week on their way home.

David Arendo, of Kennicott Bros. Co., was called for examination by his draft board this week.

For Your Supply of CUT FLOWERS

 Remember when ordering that our line is so complete that it includes every item offered in the Great Chicago Market.

Miss O. A. Tonner, of O. A. & L. A. Tonner, has sent flowers out to the Great Lakes naval training station at different periods the past summer at her own expense and has received several highly prized letters from the commander thanking her for her thoughtful consideration and telling her of the good they had done. Other florists would no doubt be glad to do their bit when the market is more plentiful, which has prompted her to insert a full-page paid advertisement to aid the good cause and which will no doubt bear fruit all over the country. A bouquet of flowers in the hospital fills the sick man with renewed hope and helps him considerably on the road to health.

Louis Finnermann, of the Grossberg-Tyler-Finnermann Co., is back from a trip to outside points, Morris Grossberg reports business as brisk with inquiries arriving from all parts of the country which he attributes to their advertising in the trade papers. Although small they brought wonderful results.

Percy Jones, Inc., reports business as surprisingly good with a heavy demand for chrysanthemums which are in good supply here. Ferns have been arriving in steady supply at this house the past week but are in such brisk demand that there is never a surplus.

Kyle & Foerster have had a large supply of all seasonable stock during the shortage which they had no difficulty in disposing of. Business has been exceptionally good with them and October 12 was one of the best days ever experienced.

A. T. Pyfer & Co. have been featuring a good supply of late Michigan asters in addition to their regular line of stock which sold like hot cakes and were disposed of almost as soon as they were unpacked.

The trade joins in extending their sympathy to Harry Manheim, of Hoebner Bros., in the loss of his brother, Albert, whose death occurred this week from pneumonia. He was buried Wednesday, October 16.

Erne & Company helped quite a number of the wholesalers out with ferns the past week notwithstanding the shortage, which was greatly appreciated by them.

The John Kruchten Co.'s sales the past two weeks were very satisfactory and compare most favorably with those in the holidays.

Eric Johnson, manager of the A. L. Randall Co.'s cut flower department, reports a record breaking Saturday, October 12.

L. Hoeckner is back on the job at Peter Reinberg's store after spending the summer with a carnival show.

Miss Frances Ludlow, of Vaughan's Seed Store, returned October 14, after an extended vacation in the east.

Mrs. E. F. Winterson picked raspberries and strawberries in her garden at Highland Park, October 13.

The American Bulb Co. reports its French bulbs on the water.

Visitors: B. H. Klus, Anderson, Ind.; J. S. Wilson, Des Moines, Ia., returning from the F. T. D. convention at Cleveland; Henry Heepe, Akron, O.; George Blackman, Evansville, Ind.; P. W. Peterson, of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet; H. M. Burt, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Cincinnati.

GOOD DEMAND WITH LIMITED OFFERINGS.

Business is exceptionally good, and as a result, everything that comes into the wholesale houses cleans up on arrival. Prices are very good. Shipping business is very heavy. Much more stock than is available could be used. The supply of roses, while fairly good, still is insufficient to satisfy immediate wants for this flower. Carnations continue rather scarce. Easter lilies are more plentiful than they were and are selling well. Chrysanthemums come into the market regularly. They are in a fair supply and sell well. The dahlia receipts, as a whole, have been of unusually good quality and find a ready market. Cosmos has been selling well. Single violets and a few pansies may be had. Toward the end of last week, the green goods supplies ran rather short. This is particularly true in fern and smilax.

NOTES.

Alex Ostendarp has been giving considerable time to the Liberty Loan work during the present drive.

J. C. Rutenschroer has been sending some excellent dahlias to C. E. Critchell.

Thirty years ago, November 4, 1888, Hess & Swoboda, prominent florists of this city, gave a dinner in honor of a number of members of the craft from the east and local friends. It proved a most enjoyable occasion, and the names of those present may prove of interest at this date, among others being Capt. J. C. Laing, W. T. Shockey, James Farries, Dr. C. Impey, D. H. Christie, A. E. Pike, M. Lee and the following florists: H. B. Killin (formerly with J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, the writer believes), Ben Wade, also of Chicago, Harry Manchester of Philadelphia, Pa., and Joseph Carr.

EPIDEMIC CAUSES ACUTE SHORTAGE.

While market conditions as reported last week were far from satisfactory, the state of affairs grew worse from Monday on throughout the week, excluding Saturday. With the extreme shortage of flowers of any kind, except roses, and an ever-increasing demand, both local and shipping orders caused much unpleasantness all around. With the influenza raging throughout the state, and the Chicago market short, inquiries and orders from outside were numerous, but with bad results. From various sources we hear that retailers refused orders owing to their inability to secure stock; but this sounds a little unnatural, while others claim they only accepted orders from customers. However, such conditions are very seldom seen. With the influx of more chrysanthemums and carnations, due to the very warm weather which prevailed during the week, the worst is over, but conditions will not be normal for a time. Prices were up on all stock, and flowers which ordinarily would not be looked at or considered were welcomed at a good margin.

NOTES.

The A. F. Kellner Co. furnished the decorations, which were elaborate, for the convention of the National Foundrymen's Association, held at the Auditorium, October 7-11. This is the first large decoration this firm has made for some time past, and they have no competition.

Walter M. Maas & Co. report business fine, in spite of the shortage of stock. They annually experience a difficulty in getting what is wanted after the first frost, only that this year the demand is ever so much greater, due to the epidemic.

By order of the public health department, all public schools, theaters, churches and gatherings will be suspended for a time owing to the rapid spread of the influenza, which has taken a good start at this writing.

Fred. H. Holton, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., always has a peevish look around the holidays when orders are more numerous than flowers. That same look was noticeable all last week.

Wm. Manke & Co. sent the first pink pompon chrysanthemums to reach this market to Gust. Rusch & Co., October 12. They were of good quality.

Gust A. Pohl could not resist the great outdoors, with genuine summer weather prevailing, so he took to the

J. M. Fox & Son had some difficulty in obtaining stock for 200 small sized bouquets for Wednesday and Thursday last week.

NOTES.

The trade here learned with sincere regret of the death of Simon G. Pontrich, aged 29 years, which occurred at the base hospital, Camp Zachary Taylor, near this city, October 12, from influenza. He was a son of Simon Pontrich, the well-known florist of 1226 Twenty-eighth street. Of five surviving brothers, three are in the military service. The sympathy of many friends is extended to the bereaved family.

Anders Rasmussen has a fine crop of roses, including Columbia, but cannot nearly meet the heavy demand. Louis Bryant, of this establishment, has been compelled to be absent from duty of late, owing to illness in his family. It is practically impossible to secure nurses, owing to the severe epidemic of influenza in this vicinity.

The majority of the florists of this city, in response to a request from the government, arranged windows for the Fourth Liberty Loan, which helped in an oversubscription here. The total bond sales amounted to approximately $17,000,000.

The New Nanz & Neuner Co. has closed its Fourth avenue store, but reports that business at its establishment at St. Matthews has been as brisk as ever.

The Jacob Schulz Co. arranged a fine window display of orchids, which attracted much attention during the past week.

Dahlias have been fine in quality and brought excellent prices—$2 per 100, wholesale. Great quantities have been used.

C. B. Thompson & Co. made, on an average, four blankets a day last week.

The F. Walker Co. is cutting excellent chrysanthemums and carnations. H. G. W.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

FUNERAL DEMAND HEAVY, AS ELSEWHERE.

The florists of this city have not been "up against it" in the matter of obtaining enough flowers to fill all orders for some time as hard as they have been during the past week. The great wave of Spanish influenza that is sweeping the country has claimed a heavy toll of deaths in this city and the surrounding towns, besides a large number of men in the United States army, who are dying daily in the army camps of the country and are being brought home for burial. Funeral flowers have never before been in such extraordinarily heavy demand, and large SUPPLY FAIRLY GOOD.

Business has been very good with the bulk of it funeral work and flowers for the sick room. All the florists are getting their share of the business and the increase is general. Flowers have been in fair supply for the demand, and consequently, high prices have been prevailing. The supply of dahlias has been enormous, but are cleaned up daily at high figures. The local cut this year has been the biggest and best seen in years, yielding a big return to the grower. Chrysanthemums are coming in small supply and bring high prices for the quality. Roses, locally grown, are coming in nicely and move quickly. Violets are improving somewhat with the cool nights and have a fair demand. Lilies and lily of the valley are scarce. Carnations are to be had in small quantity at pretty stiff figures for the quality offered. Gladioli are in limited supply. Fancy ferns have been scarce, with the other greens somewhat easier.

NOTES.

The florists' club meeting at W. A. Rowe's Denny road greenhouses proved a huge success. The final report of the convention committee showed a credit on the right side financially, as well as socially. The trustees arranged a dahlia display and all the growers exhibited a few of their best varieties. The display was sold for the benefit of the Red Cross. C. W. Wors read a paper on the subject of gluts and how to dispose of them. Fred A. Renick of the United States ambulance service, a guest, related some of his experiences "over there," how he was wounded a number of times, had his right arm blown off and was awarded the French War Cross and the American D. S. Cross. Patrick O'Mara, of New York, a visitor, addressed the members in his usual masterful style, which was greatly enjoyed by all. After the meeting, Mr. Rowe proved the gracious host, providing refreshments, lunch and cigars. It was voted one of our fine meetings.

Messrs. Rowe and May continue to cut lots of their fancy dahlias. If you do not get your order in early with Al. Gunz you stand a poor chance of getting any of these fancy flowers. The cut is handled by the Windler Wholesale Floral Co.

Paul Reden, who broke his arm a short time ago, reports that it is getting along fine. Not much glory in breaking your arm cranking a Ford, when there is so much glory in getting a broken arm in Uncle Sam's service.

The rose cuts of Messrs. Pilcher, Cerny and Werner are cleaned up daily at fancy prices at the Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Cut Flower Co. This is some of the best stock coming into this market. J. J. W.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—The city greenhouses may be closed this winter as a coal conservation measure.

pieces such as casket blankets, wreaths, etc., are the rule rather than the exception. Conditions would not be so unsatisfactory if the supply had been normal in the first place, but a cold, dark September this year retarded all production to a very considerable extent. The latter part of last week saw a better supply of chrysanthemums than has been available this season. Roses are coming on in fine shape since the advent of a few days of sunshine, but they cannot keep pace with the demand. Carnations have probably suffered the most from the dark weather, as they can hardly be counted on at all. Rubrum and Easter lilies have been so scarce as hardly to be a factor in the market. Cosmos and dahlias are the only outdoor flowers offered, and these are only in limited quantities.

NOTES.

The first florist-soldier from this city to give his life for his country and democracy is Private Walter J. Knecht, who succumbed to an attack of influenza, which developed into pneumonia, at Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky., October 12. He was a son of Frank J. Knecht, of F. J. Knecht & Co.; was 28 years of age. He was drafted into the national army last July, and only two weeks ago was home on a furlough and enjoyed perfect health at that time. The body was brought to this city and buried with full military honors.

Mrs. R. W. Doswell, of the Doswell Floral Co., has been ill for the past month and has been absent from her post at the store. This firm is cutting some excellent Richmond and Columbia roses and large double chrysanthemums, but reports funeral work so heavy that the supply cannot begin to take care of the demand.

Heavy out-of-town orders, as well as city funerals, kept the force at the Flick Floral Co.'s store working every evening last week. They sent out a number of casket blankets and wreaths of orchids, in addition to a large wedding decoration at Huntington, Ind.

The store force has been working overtime at the Freese Floral Co., getting out funeral designs. They are receiving some specially fine Unaka chrysanthemums from their greenhouses at New Haven, Ind.

Some fine chrysanthemum plants and pompons are being featured in the store of the A. J. Lanternier Co. Their Hoosier Beauty, Columbia and Ophelia roses are among the finest on the market.

Judge and Mrs. W. J. Vesey motored to Chicago last week, where they are spending several days on a business trip. H. K.

DAYTON, O.—The Miami Floral Co., which has been operating under the direction of a receiver, has been sued for $23,998 for non-payment of a claim said to be due the Fidelity Building Association.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

UNUSUAL MARKET CONDITIONS CONTINUE.

The unusual conditions still prevail. There is a belief that the epidemic is now on the wane, as there were reported only 2,612 new cases to the city on Friday, as against over 5,000 daily early in the week, but almost a record of deaths—557 for the day. There have been over 200,000 cases of the influenza in this city reported to date. Undertakers are conducting funerals as rapidly as possible, many of the bodies having to be placed in cemetery vaults until the graves can be dug. There is an extraordinary demand for flowers, all the stores working from early in the morning to late at night, stopping only for a little necessary sleep, when the stock of flowers has run out. The past week the weather has been favorable for dahlias, which have reached a price and a place as a factor in the business they never attained before. For the past week, $5 per hundred has been low on dahlias, while better grades up to fancy and specials ranged from $6 to $12. Every box as sent out was emptied immediately on arrival. Roses have been fairly plentiful; that is, the supply was normal for the season, but there was not one-third enough for the great demand. Prices soared; the shortest and lowest grades brought $6 to $8, and from that to $10, $12, and up to $35 for special Ophelias and other teas. Russells went up to $40, and American Beauties to $60. Chrysanthemums brought $3 to $5 per dozen for just good, ordinary stock. New crop carnations brought four, six to eight cents. Easter lilies sold for $25 per hundred, and were scarce at that, each shipment being portioned out on arrival. Singular to say, cattleyas were fairly plentiful and cheap, sixty cents being high. The hardy asters, cultivated and roadside, were handled in large quantities, selling readily at 50 cents per bunch. Gladioli, larkspurs, eupatorium, calendulas, marigolds, heliotrope, sweet alyssum, and, in fact, everything in the shape of a flower, was quickly grabbed up at fabulous prices for such stock. Brown Hydrangea paniculata sold for $5 per hundred heads. Greens were in great demand. Plumose brought 50 cents per bunch of 12 sprays, darger and fancy ferns, $4 per thousand, and it was said some were getting $5. Autumn leaves were the best stock in the market, bringing readily 50 cents per bunch of branches. The woodmen could not supply them fast enough. Sphagnum moss ran out with the dealers early in the week. One prominent local firm had a large car loaded with tons of it in Camden; but, owing to health restrictions, could not get it across the river. The supply men did an enormous business in all kinds of prepared material and artificial flowers. One firm sold over 200 cases of magnolia leaves, 100 pounds each, in the last two weeks. As much as $100 worth of waxed carnations were sold to one customer in one order. Everything in the shape of made-up and decorated wreaths were sold out, and loose materials were then furnished for those who had time to make them up. There was also a great sale on palm leaves until one wondered, considering the Japanese embargo, where they all came from. Chiffons and letters had an enormous demand. Those who bought, as per inscriptions required, had to pay dear for the time spent in the selection of the letters. The early morning scenes at the wholesale houses saw about half the retailers in town fighting and pleading for boxes of dahlias, or roses, or just a bunch of this or that. No matter how fortunate they were in the quantities secured, it was not enough. The slips footed up mountain high, but with recollections of the fat order files in the store, the amounts were paid without much remonstrance. The supply of flowers appears to be increasing, particularly chrysanthemums and carnations, but there is no let-up in the demand. Out-of-town florists, men who seldom visit the market, were largely in evidence, in the hope of being able to secure something, but it was the regular who was served first all the time. one-fourth of which were filled, came pouring in all day long; it was really distressing to hear of the plight many of the retailers were in, but there was no help for them, the demand being so much greater than the supply.

extra business. Most of the rose men had pinched to skip the chrysanthemum competition. We had, however, some good shipments of roses. The early chrysanthemums helped, a number of our growers sending in very nice lots of these, generally of good quality. Carnations were not far enough advanced to be a factor. It was the dahlias, however, that saved the day. The cool weather of late September held them back; they were scarce at first, but as the days grew warmer the crop increased until we were handling 50,000 a day. They were never better, the specials being exceptionally fine; $10 to $12 per 100 was a low price for these high grades, as compared with almost any other flower. All kinds of greens sold exceptionally well, as there was so much spray work. Dagger and fancy ferns, in my opinion, will be scarce this winter; none of the woodsmen have large stocks, as labor has been so scarce.

The death of Theodore Shober was a great shock to the trade. He was at the meeting of the florists' club October 1 in his usual good health. With his well proportioned six feet two, he was a splendid specimen of robust manhood. Two days later he was taken with influenza, which later developed into pneumonia, from which he died, October 8. His funeral was held on Sunday and with the attendance of only close relatives, the general public being forbidden to attend where influenza is the cause of death.

"We are getting a good supply of roses for this season from Roele's, while the cattleyas from Wyncote are coming into good crop nicely," is the report of the Jos. Heacock Co. "We are skip-stopping our customers, serving half one day and the balance the next. Prices, for the quality of the stock, are better for roses than ordinarily received at Christmas.

The Liberty Loan committees in charge of the florists' and seedsmen's section, whose quota was $250,000, have had this doubled to $500,000. A meeting was held on Monday night last, when it was found that the subscriptions amounted to about $200,000. Great pressure will be brought to go over the top with the whole amount the present week.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are working with their full force on all kinds of artificial flower and wreath material. There is the greatest demand for everything in this line. Magnolia and oak leaves are getting very scarce while the demand for sago palms is greater than ever before.

Benny Berman, well known in the wholesale district, who left the Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange to join the navy two months ago, died last week in the naval hospital from influenza. He was a bright, active boy who had many friends in the craft.

"Impossible to supply the demand," said Edward Reid. "We are getting a lot of good roses, a fair supply of carnations, chrysanthemums, Easter lilies, violets and other flowers. We try to take care of our regular trade, and believe we are giving good service."

The Floracraft Greenhouses, which have, for the most part, supplied this market with lily of the valley, say it will last but three weeks longer. The pips were from Holland. The supply for the coming season is problematical, with none received as yet.

Berger Brothers had several dahlia growers with good crops, some of the specials being exceptionally fine. Hydrangeas, gladioli, asters and green goods were leaders. An exceptional business, with a clean sweep every day, was their experience.

In the midst of the rush on Tuesday, the Leo Niessen Co. learned Manager McKissick and its best man of their Baltimore store, was down with influenza, which force had to be at once strengthened from their now depleted local staff.

For the past two weeks there has been absolutely nothing left over from day to day. This condition is unfortunate, as much of the stock does not get time to develop, not making nearly the show it would if further advanced.

John Welsh Young has had a bad case of influenza which turned to pneumonia. We are glad to say that he weathered the storm safely, and while still confined to bed, is pronounced out of danger and getting along nicely.

We are happy to report a great improvement in the condition of Charles H. Grakelow, who is now out of danger and getting along nicely, although it will be some time before he can resume his numerous activities.

A fair exchange is no robbery. Wm. J. Moore is now with Charles E. Meehan, while Samuel Lilley is with S. S. Pennock. Both are old war horses, who have passed through many a hard campaign.

Charles Moorby is now with Charles H. Grakelow, where he will be of the greatest assistance at this busy time.

HEAVY FUNERAL DEMAND CONTINUES.

Though cut flowers are bringing high prices, it would be incorrect to state that business is in a healthy condition. It is a plain fact that the demand and consequent brisk figures have been brought about by the high death rate, for the bulk of the stock is being bought for funeral work. Retailers of this city report that, aside from funeral work, business is very light. Short roses, carnations, lilies and dahlias have touched unheard-of figures for this season of the year, we might say, for any season, excepting an occasional Christmas or Easter. No. 2 roses, such as Ophelia, have sold as high as $6 and $8 per 100. Carnations of the best quality, $8 and $10 per 100, dahlies, $1 to $1.50 per dozen. Special roses, as a matter of course, have advanced in price, but not in such great proportion. Special American Beauties, of the best quality, wholesale at the rate of $40 per 100. There is now a good supply of chrysanthemums on the market, the large varieties being now seen. Those that are held at the wholesale prices of $5 to $9 per dozen are, so far as we can observe, moving slowly. Buyers from Boston, Albany, and other cities, have been in the market during the past week, but their purchases have been largely of funeral stock.

October 14.—Business is fairly active today with continued high prices, though if prevailing fair weather continues, there are prospects of a break before the end of the week. Leading retailers report an improvement in business other than funeral work. There has been a slight decrease in the cases of influenza in this city and fewer deaths in proportion to the many reported from other cities, but everything that can be used in funeral work continues to bring high figures. As an instance, a few asters that came in this morning brought $1 per dozen.

A LETTER FROM THE FRONT.

Secretary John Young has recently received a letter from Lawrence Theiler, who for several years previous to his entering the American army, was his bookkeeper. As a narrative of tragedy from one of the actors, it is interesting reading: It follows:

"Base Hospital, Somewhere in France, Sept. 9th.

A few lines to let you know that I was quite severely wounded the fifth day of September. Your letter from St. Louis reached me just a few days before and helps a great deal in cheering me up, though I am in severe pain. Received eight wounds in all, both legs, left arm, back and stomach. My left ear is practically deaf, undoubtedly caused by the terrific explosion of the shell. We were advancing over an open field, under one of Fritz's heavy artillery barrages, and shells were falling like hailstones about us and he couldn't stop us. Was wounded about 4:30 in the afternoon and brought in at 8:30 the next morning. There's where pluck and courage play a great part. Even while lying on the ground, the least little move drew machine gun fire from all directions. When you see your friends falling off on both sides of you, then only do you realize what war means. The shell that got me killed Sergeant-Major Bruce, with whom you placed the order for the 1917 S. A. F. button. When I came to my senses, he was lying directly at my side, his legs touching my body. There were wicked sights to be seen, but you can imagine somewhat without further details. I have not seen or heard from any of the boys from 28th street, and now have lost communication with my other two brothers. Received word from home over two months ago that Fred had written me, but I have received nothing from him to this day. I was surprised when I heard that he was called. No doubt the people in the United States did go wild over the recent drive, and the boys are doing their level best to finish it quick. The treatment rendered by the doctors and nurses here is the same as a mother caring for her child. So far, have been in three hospitals. First of all, you arrive at a first aid station, from there to the field hospital, then to evacuation hospital. I am now in the base hospital. From here we will be sent to a convalescing hospital, as soon as great improvement is noticed. Was operated on at the evacuation hospital on the sixth of September, and have not been on my feet since and feel awful weak. What I do not like, and is not at all pleasant, is the dressing of the wounds. I have been lying in the same position all the time and it feels to me that I have no back left."

He has a young wife and baby daughter in this city. The Fred mentioned in his letter, is another brother, who formerly worked for John Young & Co., which makes four of the brothers now in the army. The home of Sergeant-Major Bruce, reported killed in the action, was in Minneapolis, Minn., but for some time before entering the service, he had been with a business firm of this city. When Lawrence Theiler was keeping books for John Young & Co., we never thought of him as a fighting man, as he was slender and boyish in appearance; but now we know that he is.

NOTES.

The committee of the florist and allied trades having in charge the Liberty Loan campaign, among the members of the craft, has been doing valiant work, and large individual subscriptions have been recorded. On October 11, the aggregate of subscriptions was near to $150,000. October 12 being a public holiday, and President Wilson being here, was largely given over to parades and celebrations. The meeting of the New York Florists' Club, October 14, was a Liberty Bond meeting, and it is hoped that in the few remaining days of the drive, it will acquire great speed. It is needless to state that even a partial failure would be a calamity.

Edward J. McCarthy, who has been manager and buyer for the retail store of James Weir, Inc., 324 Fulton street, Brooklyn, succeeds the late Mrs. Weir as president, and will hereafter conduct the business.

A rose in the name of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson went with every bond at the Liberty Loan Theatre, Broadway and Fifty-ninth street, on a recent evening. The roses were presented to the purchasers of the bonds by Julia Marlowe and E. H. Sothern, salesmen of the evening. The telegram from Mrs. Wilson, authorizing the gift of the roses, was addressed to C. H. Carr, captain of the Twenty-Sixth Liberty Loan Precinct, and read as follows: "I am very glad to co-operate with the members of your committee by authorizing Miss Marlowe and Mr. Sothern to present a rose in my name to every purchaser of a Liberty bond at the Liberty Theatre tonight."

Miss Helen Whittingham, who for a number of years has been a valued stenographer in the office of J. M. Thorburn & Co., seedsmen, died at her home in Bellmore, L. I., October 12, of influenza after an illness of less than one week. She is survived by her parents, several sisters and a brother who is in the United States Navy. Interment was at Freeport, L. I., October 15.

W. J. Stewart, who came over from Boston, October 12, was taken ill while visiting James Stewart of Mamaronck, N. Y., and at this writing is resting at the latter's home.

J. Benson Stafford has returned from Southampton, L. I., where he spent the summer in the employ of G. E. M. Stumpp. He also doubts in play and scenario writing.

The total amount subscribed by the florists and allied trades of this city to the Fourth Liberty Loan up to noon, October 15, was in round figures $190,000.

Frank Grienaldi, for a number of years a grower of Rosebank, Staten Island, died, October 6, of intestinal disorder. He was about 50 years old.

Richard Wenham, for many years with Wadley & Smythe, has gone into the retail business for himself at 70 East 43rd street.

At the store of Riedel & Meyer, we have noticed a fine stock of yellow chrysanthemums.

New York Florists' Club.

The New York Florists' Club met in its rooms in the Grand Opera House building on the evening of October 14, President Schenck in the chair. It was Liberty Loan night, and a stirring address from Corporal J. A. Murphy, speaker for the national service section of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, who has been "over there," aroused great enthusiasm and brought the Liberty Bond subscriptions for the evening up to $40,000. At the close of his address, Corporal Murphy was given a standing vote of thanks.

President Totty, being present, stated that he and others intended to go to Washington for the hearing to be given by the federal horticultural board, October 18, and if any florists present had special business in Washington they would be welcome to attend, but that more could be accomplished by writing to our Washington representative, W. F. Gude, who would entertain and present any suggestions of practical value. Winfield Rolker spoke in confirmation of President Totty's views.

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., made a unique and extensive exhibit of 125 varieties of the plants commonly known as Wandering Jew, silver medal; collection of dahlias, vote of thanks; Hexinia Salieri, highly commended, and Dracena Rothiana, cultural certificate. P. W. Popp, Mamaronck, N. Y., exhibited collections of gladioli and dahlias, vote of thanks. George Schlagel, Brooklyn, N. Y., (S. G. Milosy, Gr.), exhibited a new seedling dahlia, named Mrs. George Schlagel, vote of thanks. The Charles H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J., received a vote of thanks for its exhibit of a vase of the new rose, Premier. W. A. Manda made an interesting talk in addition to his fine exhibit.

Edward Hanft was elected as member of the club, and Arthur J. Radice was proposed for membership. John Young made a short talk on advertising, and fac similes of the advertisement of the publicity committee in the current Metropolitan Magazine were distributed.

The Seed Trade

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C. President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held June, 1919.

BURLAP bags have dropped from 14 cents to 9½ cents by reason of the government regulation of prices.

CALIFORNIA shipments of seeds are now coming forward. Parsnip deliveries are running about 50 per cent.

VISITED CHICAGO.—A. L. Rogers of Rogers Bros., Alpena, Mich.; Patrick O'Mara of Peter Henderson & Co., New York.

MICHIGAN forest fires of recent date are in the territory whence much bouquet green was obtained in former years.

HOWARD M. EARL is now with F. W. Bolgiano & Co., Washington, D. C. This firm's new seed warehouse was recently taken over by the government.

LEONARD H. VAUGHAN, chairman of the Chicago seedsmen's Liberty Loan committee, says they have gone over the top, their quota being $140,000.

CAPTAIN R. T. VAUGHAN, eldest son of J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, has been directed to report to Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky., for temporary medical service.

TOLEDO, O.—Clover made a 10 cent drop October 15, closing at $22.80, a gain of 80 cents during the week. Cash timothy was 5 cents lower, selling at $4.95; December $5.00, March $5.30, and April $5.30.

SAN JOSE, CALIF.—Thomas W. Chisholm, for several years associated with the Braslan Seed Growers Co., is receiving the sympathy of his many friends in the death of his wife, following an attack of pneumonia.

JAPANESE LILIES.—If Japanese lilies were not embargoed this year, the ocean freight would be $60 per ton, about $5 per case; railroad freight, $4.50 per case, against $1 last year, which, with duty, would bring the actual moving cost to about $11 per case.

NEW YORK.—The three creditors, who on October 4, filed a petition in bankruptcy, and asked for the appointment of a receiver for the Arthur T. Boddington Co., have applied to the court for a dismissal, as an examination of the company's affairs shows it to be solvent. This voluntary action was taken by the petitioners without any conditions or considerations being demanded of the firm. Arthur T. Boddington is again president of the company.

Burlap Imports Suspended.

The United States government has prohibited any further importations of burlap into this country for the present. Most of our burlap comes from India and the suspension of imports has been ordered to save freight space. Burlap has been in considerable demand for war purposes. To mention only one item, it is extensively used on the war fronts for sand bags. Last year, more was used along the western front in France than is normally consumed in one year throughout the world.

Philadelphia Seed Trade.

George Clark, in charge of the seed and bulb department of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., reports that two steamers carrying between 6,000 and 7,000 cases of Dutch bulbs landed at an American port, October 10. He has no information regarding French shipments, except that they have been on the water for some time. The cost of transportation, in the case of the Holland stock, will be about three times greater than normal. Cases alone cost $3 each. It is now a matter of wait for the goods. In view of the long delay, all will want their shipments at once, but they will have to go out in the order in which they were booked. Everything possible is being done by this firm to get the bulbs here as quickly as possible, and a large force will fill all orders as fast as the work can be done.

The H. F. Michell Co., who have been anxiously awaiting the arrival of importations of Holland bulbs, sent Chief Glockner, in charge of this department, and two good men to the port of entry where the stock was found piled high on the dock. At last reports they were moving the 600 cases for which they had invoices to the railroad station for shipment to this city. A number of special cases were shipped direct from dock to destination. It has been the practice of foreign shippers to forward cases marked only with initials. This entails a great deal of confusion in identifying the various lots as they lay crowded on the dock. This year, the Michell shipment was ordered stenciled with the firm's name and it is hoped this will greatly expediate matters. Manager Paul Richter, who has been laid up for several days with a mild attack of influenza, is much improved and expects to be on hand for the bad rush. A vase of wonderfully fine dahlias was an attractive feature at the store during the week. They compared favorably with choice chrysanthemums in size of flower and length of stem.

Iowa and Nebraska Conditions.

C. G. Ouren, of the C. G. Ouren Seed Co., Council Bluffs, reports that the dry fall has reduced the demand for wheat seed and materially cut the sales of timothy, clover, alfalfa and other items. As wheat can still be sown in this section for another month a rain at this time will help the situation. Some grass seeds might also be sown this late if there was a possibility of sufficient moisture. A noticeable feature of fall wheat seeding this year is that corn fields have been used where the wheat shaded by the corn has come up nicely while in plowed or disced ground nearby it has not sprouted. This is attributed to the fact that the corn leaves afforded shade which held the moisture in the ground and made germination possible.

Seedsmen report that potatoes dug in the Omaha district are to a large extent worm eaten, the damage being done by the common white grub. It is believed it will be difficult to secure suitable seed from the growers this season. It has been suggested that potatoes be dug at once, the fields plowed as deeply as possible and hogs turned in to destroy the pest.

The college of agriculture of the University of Nebraska is starting a campaign to interest all farmers in the production of sorghum cane the coming year, for which there is already a good demand in the state. Two sorghum mills are now at work in Seward county and it is the plan of the campaign to make it possible to have one or more good mills in each county in 1919.

Dutch Bulbs.

The anxiety of seedsmen has been relieved by the arrival, during the past week, of two steamers bringing Dutch bulbs. One had about 10,000 cases, the other 1,800. We believe that all seedsmen will get a supply through brokers, if not direct. A considerable quantity of the bulbs were in bond, for Chicago and other cities. So far as we have been able to observe, the bulbs are in good condition.

Many importers are unable to secure their bulbs in the absence of bills of lading which come from England. Without bill of lading, a banker's guarantee of 140 per cent of the value is required.

Irish Grass Seed.

The Irish grass seed crop was well sowed and yields are satisfactory. Very little threshing has yet been done and the markets are just about to open at most centers. The following estimated yields are supplied: Italian, five to six hundredweight per statute acre; perennial, eight to nine hundredweight; crested dogstail, four to four and one-half hundredweight. Some few samples of perennial already marketed brought 26 to 30 shillings ($6.33 to $7.30) per hundredweight.

THE standard barrel of the United States should contain 7,056 cubic inches, with 28½-inch staves and 17½-inch heads, head material not thicker than 2/5 of an inch.

CRANBERRY pickers in Massachusetts boys are earning $15 per day, and even children make $10 per day, because of the labor shortage. The crop is large and, as it must be picked before frost, it must be gathered at almost any cost. In normal years wages are $6 to $8 per day.

Soldiers' Gift Farms.

It is planned to give every soldier a farm and 40 years in which to pay for it. And 40 years is not any too long, if it is to be paid for from the products of some of the government farms, according to the Kansas City Star.

Onions Save Soldiers' Lives.

The Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, is circulating the following broadcast, from South African Gardening and Country Life:

"During the coming summer (December to May) we are going to ask our readers to grow larger quantities of onions. The object of the request is to increase the quantities of this vegetable, so that more may be available to send to the troops in East Africa and other hot, trying climates.

"A journalist friend, who called on us a few days ago when home on a few weeks' sick leave, told us that nothing under God's sun was of so much benefit to sick men. He is in the medical corps, and he says that nothing would have such a stimulating effect as an onion; in fact, he vows that he has seen an onion save a man's life, on more than one occasion.

"Dried cabbage, he tells us, eats more or less like pieces of boiled paper—carrots are better, but not to be compared with an onion. The onion can be sent up fresh, i. e., it need not be dried or dehydrated. It is alive, and it gives life! We feel sure readers will welcome any suggestion whereby they may help to alleviate—if only in a small way—the hardships of our fighting men. They want onions, and the first step to getting onions to them is to have the bulbs to send."

Potatoes for Seed.

Under the title "Physiological Basis for the Preparation of Potatoes for Seed," C. O. Appleman, in Bulletin No. 212 of the Maryland State College of Agriculture, College Park, deals with the production and growth of sprouts on the potato tuber with special reference to factors inherent in the tuber, the chief object in view being the preparation of seed for the practical growing of potatoes. Attention is called to the fact that potatoes under ordinary conditions will not sprout for some time after being dug, this rest period varying in the different varieties, but the time factor is not prerequisite for the production of a normal plant, and by means of certain artificial treatments the rest period may be greatly shortened and in some cases almost dispensed with. The question of the rest period is of practical importance chiefly in the southern states, where fall grown seed is used for the early spring crop and seed from the spring crop used for the second late crop. The following procedure is suggested: The part of the early crop intended for seed is harvested when the skins are still tender and easily rubbed off. It is best to dig them late in the day and when the ground is moist from a recent rain. The tubers are immediately transferred to a warm, shady place and spread out on the ground in thin layers. The covering must be kept moist. The object is to prevent the tender-skinned tubers from drying and to supply them with an abundance of air. If the tubers are allowed to dry even for a very short time, the skins will cork and the chief purpose of the procedure is defeated; namely, to allow easy access of oxygen and moisture to the tissue surrounding the buds. A previous bulletin of the college, No. 183, gives additional information on this subject.

The statement is frequently made that the seed end of the tuber contains the stronger eyes, and for this reason the tuber should be cut lengthwise. This idea is the result of observations made on the production of sprouts from whole tubers, in which case, of course, the terminal eyes grow out first and grow more vigorously, but from experiments made with 10 McCormick potatoes, carefully selected so that all were perfect and of uniform size, averaging 4.5 ounces per tuber, it was observed that the eyes on the stem end will produce just as vigorous sprouts as the terminal eyes if their connection with the terminal eye is severed. The greater vigor of the sprouts on the stem halves may be due in part to favorable location in respect to the external factors, since these sprouts are usually located near a cut surface. A chemical study of the stem and seed halves just at the end of the rest period showed, in many cases, a greater metabolic activity in the stem half. This half always contains more soluble carbohydrates and greater diastase activity. This clearly disproves the older statement in the literature that the buds on the stem end do not grow on account of the lack of available soluble carbohydrates. From these observations and experiments on the growth of sprouts from different parts of the tuber, it is logical to conclude that most of the eyes on the tuber have equal value for seed purposes.

Vegetable and Fruit Markets.

The United States department of agriculture, through the bureau of markets, reports that for the period, October 8-14, the carlot movement continued heavy and there was a further decline in prices, compared with the previous week. Under continued heavy supplies potato values weakened in eastern markets. Minnesota and Wisconsin sacked whites lost 25 cents closing at $1.60-$1.75 at Chicago. Red River, Ohio dropped 20 cents and Nebraska shipping points declined about 17 cents. Maine Cobblers and Green Mountains ranged fairly steady at $3-$3.25 per barrel at Presque Isle. Onion markets continued generally weak, reaching lower levels in the east than in the midwest. Eastern sacked yellows ruled lower at shipping points at $1.25-$1.75 per 100 pounds. Middwest yellows followed a range of $1.50-$2 per 100 pounds. Cabbage values were lower in most markets. New York domestic declined $1 to $2, closing at $12-$13 in bulk at Rochester. The price in leading consuming markets was $15-$25 per ton. Sweet potatoes were fairly steady at $3.50-$4.25 for Virginia Big Stem Jerseys in the east and $5-$5.75 in the west and north. Beans weakened at Colorado shipping points.

While the general tone of the apple market appeared weaker, the general range showed no great change compared with the previous week. Boxed apples weakened slightly in the west but were higher in New York. Michigan Concord grapes advanced 3 cents ranging 38-40 cents per 4-quart basket in distributing markets. New York Concord ranges ranged 35-38 cents f. o. b. Westfield trackside. California Malaga, fours, were steady in eastern markets at $1.75-$2.50. Cranberry prices weakened in a few large consuming centers. The general range for choice Massachusetts stock was $7.50-$8.50. New Jersey berries were $3-$3.25 per bushel box at Philadelphia.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, October, 15.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $1.50 to $2.15; celery, crate, 50 to 85 cents; head lettuce, 2-dozen, $1.00 to $2.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, 50 cents to $1.25; tomatoes, per box, 25 to 35 cents.

New York, October 14.—Celery (state), per bunch, 15 to 50 cents; cucumbers, $1.50 to $2.75 per basket; mushrooms, $1.50 to $3.50 per basket; tomatoes, per carrier, 50 cents to $2.00; lettuce, per package, 25 cents to $1.25; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50.

NOMINATING COMMITTEES NAMED.

At the October meeting of the florists' club, President Newport named two committees to report tickets at the November meeting. The names are to be of candidates to be voted upon at the annual election in December. The committees named are two, regular and opposition: Regular—Frederick Henkes, Frederick A. Danker and Thomas F. Tracey; Opposition—Edward P. Tracey, Frank R. Bilson and John A. Murnane, Jr. The committees will report on November 7. President Newport requested the flower box committee to make a report at the next meetings on plans to increase the use of boxes in the city. Fred A. Danker, of the club flower show committee, announced that for the show to be held at the November meeting, no formal programme will be made out. The exhibit is meant to help the members get ideas of new varieties and improvements in methods of growing old ones.
The members were asked to make a report of their subscriptions to the Fourth Liberty Loan, for compilation by the secretary, to be sent to John Young, New York, secretary of the Society of American Florists, for his records. William Christian, of Balliston Spa, was elected a member of the club.

NOTE.

William C. Gloeckner, of 97 State street, retail florist, has returned from the annual meeting of the Florists'
Telegraph Delivery, held at Cleveland, O., well pleased with the work of the convention. This Albanian was awarded first prize, $50, for the best suggestion to increase the value of the F. T. D.
The committee of award received 180 suggestions, and chose Mr. Gloeckner's as the best. He handed in the following: "Give every traveling man $5 for each new member secured by him in a town in which we are not now represented." Mr. Gloeckner invested the prize money in a Liberty Bond.

Color Changes In Leaves

It requires no vivid imagination to picture Mother Nature going about these days with a liberal supply of paint with which she colors the leaves of the trees and other plants and thereby produces the vivid tints which characterize the foliage of this season. In reality, the change in coloring is the result of certain chemical processes which take place in the leaves.

The change is not, as many people suppose, due to the action of frost, but is a preparation for winter. All during the spring and summer the leaves have served as factories, where the foods necessary for the trees' growth have been manufactured. This food making takes place in numberless tiny cells of the leaf and is carried on by small green bodies which give the leaf its color. These chlorophyll bodies, as they are known, make the food of the tree by combining carbon taken from the carbonic acid gas of the air with hydrogen, oxygen, and various minerals supplied by the water which the roots gather. In the fall, when the cool weather causes a slowing down of the vital processes, the work of the leaves comes to an end. The machinery of the leaf factory is dismantled, so to speak, the chlorophyll is broken up into the various substances of which it is composed, and whatever food there is on hand is sent to the body of the tree to be stored up for use in the spring. All that remains in the cell cavities of the leaf is a watery substance in which a few oil globules and crystals, and a small number of yellow, strongly refractive bodies can be seen. These give the leaves the yellow coloring so familiar in autumnal foliage.

It often happens, however, that there is more sugar in the leaf than can be readily transferred back to the tree. When this is the case, the chemical combination with the other substances produces many-colored tints, varying from the brilliant red of the dogwood to the more austere red-browns of the oak. In coniferous trees, which do not lose their foliage in the fall, the green coloring matter takes on a slightly brownish tinge, which, however, gives way to the lighter color in the spring.

While the color of the leaf is changing, other preparations are being made. At the point where the stem of the leaf is attached to the tree, a special layer of cells develops, which gradually severs the tissues which support the leaf. At the same time, Nature heals the cut, so that when the leaf is finally blown off by the wind or falls from its own weight, the place where it grew on the twig is marked by a scar.

Although the food which has been prepared in the cell cavities is sent back to the tree, the mineral substances with which the walls of the cells have become impregnated during the summer months are retained. Accordingly, when the leaves fall they contain relatively large amounts of valuable elements, such as nitrogen and phosphorus, which were originally a part of the soil. The decomposition of the leaves results in enriching the top layers of the soil by returning these elements and by the accumulation of humus. That is why the mellow black earth from the forest floor is so fertile. But if fires are allowed to run through the forest and the leaves are burned, the most valuable of the fertilizing elements are changed by the heat into gases and escape into the air. As a result, forests which are burned over regularly soon lose their soil fertility, even if no apparent damage is done to the standing timber.

Iris Transplanting.

Curator Watson, of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, Eng., writing on this subject in the Gardeners' Chronicle, quotes Sir Frederick Moore as follows:

"We find that by far the safest time to move irises is just as the flowers fade; it is better than the spring. They are making new roots then, and stand pulling about. You will often find these irises spreading out from the borders to the hard paths, and growing and flowering well. Irises growing on the top of a wall never get disease. These plants never flower more freely or look more effective than on top of a wall, and I think that is how we should grow Oncocyclus irises. We find that plenty of old mortar rubbish from walls, burnt earth from the bonfire, and poor gravelly loam, with ample drainage, suits them, and we have a good show each year. Disease may appear on new plants for some time, and then it spreads to others. On our nursery border, the poorest, hottest, driest place we have, irises are perfectly free from disease, and we get a splendid display of flowers. In cottage gardens where they are bordered by the wall of the house and path, and often overhanging the roof, they give good results, for the simple reason that they are left alone and often get dry, and the soil is poor. Have you ever noted them in small town gardens? The best germanicas I think I ever saw were in King's road, Chelsea. There was dust enough on the leaves to grow them in. It was a hot day, and the reflex heat from the house was over-powering, but the irises enjoyed it."

Tree Lupines.

It is more than likely that the tree lupine will get common in small gardens, when people generally come to recognize the peculiarities of its ways. For instance, in soils of fair depth and good average fertility it grows very rapidly and soon becomes unmanageable in a confined position. Unsatisfactory results follow severe cutting back and transplanting. If, indeed, it does not die as a result. It should be sown where it is to grow, or transplanted in a young state with most of its roots intact. It is also a plant for dry soils, with sandy or chalky subsoils, where it is likely to be more long-lived than in deep, fertile soils. I have seen a fine hedge of it at Harefield, Middlesex, in that small chalky area of the county. Within the last decade or two considerable improvements or different colors have been secured, including various shades of light yellow, pure yellow, golden yellow, and others shaded with lilac, lavender, blue and purple. For 12 years or more I have been acquainted with a self or pure white, which is really a good thing. It is more than likely that there are several white varieties in cultivation, and that some of them are shaded with a variety of other colors. Seeds of a dozen named varieties have been available for some years past, and as neither of them can be depended upon to come entirely true to its parent, there must be many intermediate and mixed hues in gardens as a result of seed sowing. It is my opinion that the tree lupine could be successfully grown near the seaboard, where the perennial varieties of the stock (Matthiola incana) outlive the winter and make large bushes if sheltered from the direct action of sea breezes.—Hortulanus in London Garden.

DEMAND IS UNUSUALLY HEAVY.

A condition has prevailed in this city hitherto unprecedented in the history of the floral business. In the large and continuous call for flowers and the impossibility of supplying the demand. Beginning October 5 and continuing day by day up to the present time, the call has been so unusual that the supply of flowers has been utterly inadequate to the demand. This does not mean that there has been no cut of flowers with the florists and local growers, for there has been the usual daily supply, but the condition has arisen from the unusually large number of deaths from the prevailing visitation of la grippe or the Spanish influenza. Frantic appeals have been sent out to the nearby towns where there was a possibility of getting any kind of flowers and to the more remote supply houses more distantly located. Some assistance was gained from these sources, but as a rule, the same conditions prevailing in other parts of the country and appeals being made from everywhere, the flowers obtained were not in sufficient quantity to even then supply the call. Of course, this was all for funeral work, and as many prominent citizens and popular young people were included in the roll call, all kinds of flowers were used, red, pink, yellow and a noticeable scarcity of white flowers. At one funeral, of a lovely and prominent young matron, the pall was made of pink roses and mixed flowers and the designs were vari-colored, only one spray of pure white chrysanthemums emphasizing the lack of white flowers. Bunches were made of pink, red and yellow dahlias, and the effect was not particularly pleasing from an artistic standpoint, and it only served to show the paucity of the floral supply prevailing. In one of the floral stores was noticed a very large gates-ajar made principally of white and pink flowers, with a white dove perched on one side holding streamers of white and blue gauze ribbon. This was very appropriate for a young girl just budding into womanhood. Some of the florists met the situation by furnishing wreaths of the prepared magnolia leaves with a cluster of fresh roses and a bow of gauze ribbon, white or pale pink for the younger dead, lilac and deep purple for the older ones. The floral stores were crowded with anxious customers, who went from one place to another to get "something." Telegrams came in by the dozen and all had to be turned down. There seemed to be very few lilies, but carnations and roses were more plentiful and ordinarily would have been considered an abundant supply.

CLOSING ORDER MODIFIED.

The florists met with the fuel administration in this section and secured a modification of the order restricting them to opening at 9 a. m. and closing at 5:30 p. m. in so far that they can go into their workrooms before and after

BUSINESS HEAVY IN FUNERAL WORK.

The trade, during the past week, was one of the busiest in a long time, especially as far as funeral work was concerned, there being a greater demand than could be turned out, due to a shortage of stock and limited time for preparation of the designs. Roses and dahlias were the main standbys in meeting the situation, and there was a complete cleanup daily with everything cut tight. A few miscellaneous flowers, such as asters, gladioli, lilies, fever-fews, daisies and carnations, sold at sight. A few chrysanthemums are being received, not nearly open, but sell fast, nevertheless. The wholesale market is scratching every corner for stock, but the efforts seem fruitless. Green goods are also scarce, and many retailers are sending out and cutting foliage. The influenza has taken a heavy hold on the people of this city, and the death rate is very high.

The Florists' Hail Association of America

Was originally incorporated under the laws of New Jersey on June 1, 1887. Since that date it has promptly paid nearly half a million dollars for glass broken by hail.

At the present time it has no liabilities, and, besides its emergency fund, it has a reserve fund of $45,000. An insurance with the Florists' Hail Association means prompt payment in case of loss.

FLORISTS COMPELLED TO REFUSE ORDERS.

This city is not going to be stricken with the "Flu" as other cities have been afflicted, if "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." The mayor, in conjunction with the city health board, has just issued the most drastic order of any municipality in the state, whereby all schools, churches, theaters, soda parlors, moving picture shows, etc., are ordered closed indefinitely. All business houses are required to open at 9 a. m. and to close at 4 p. m. The disease is not prevalent here, as yet, to any alarming extent, and it is hoped by this measure to ward it off. Florists are included in the order and are willing to make any sacrifice if even a single life is saved thereby. During the past two weeks there has been an unprecedented rush of funeral work, which has kept the market cleaned up on every available flower. Due to early frosts, there was no outdoor stock available, and florists had to fall back upon the few roses which were to be had. As a result, funeral work was made up mostly of galax and magnolia wreaths, with a few flowers interspersed. Artificial flowers had to be used to some extent to fill in, and quite a few orders had to be turned down absolutely, something that has not happened in this city for years. Very few chrysanthemums were on the market and scarcely any carnations.

NOTES.

Schramm Brothers have been very busy with funeral work and are enjoying the best business of their long career. Frank Schramm told the writer that he never experienced a similar condition before and that if the demand kept up he did not know what he would do for flowers. The hardest thing he ever did, he said, was to turn down orders during the past week for lack of flowers, but he preferred to do this rather than turn out unsatisfactory work. He attended the F. T. D. convention at Cleveland.

Frank Kaminski, who for some years has conducted a prosperous greenhouse on Lagrange street, in the heart of the Polish district, has sold the business to his nephew.

Other florists who report a great demand for funeral flowers are Scottwood

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Dahlias.

Before the dahlias were through blooming they should have been carefully named and a label properly inscribed fastened to each plant that it is desired to save. As soon as the plants are killed by the frost they should be cut down and the tubers dug. Leave about six or eight inches of stem and firmly attach the label to this in such a manner that it cannot become loosened and lost. A good, dry cellar, either with a cement or earthen bottom, will keep them nicely through the winter, but it should be frost proof and not too near a boiler or heater.
The tubers can be placed closely together and then covered with soil and they will come through the winter and the tubers be nice and plump in the spring. They should be occasionally examined to see that they are not getting too dry or shriveling. If this happens cover the soil with papers and then sprinkle the paper and the soil will absorb the moisture.

Gladiolus.

As soon as the frost has killed down the foliage the gladiolus bulbs should be lifted and dried off. Keeping the varieties separate, the bulbs, with the tops attached, should be laid out in layers either on a light, dry shed floor or on boards in the open air where they can be protected at night during frosty weather. A set of boards or frame shutters spread along on the south side of a building make a very fine place to dry them off and fully ripen the bulbs. Have plenty of covering handy that can be thrown over them on cold nights. When thoroughly ripened the bulbs can be broken from the tops and packed away. Look the bulbs over carefully for any diseased spots and if any having these are found keep them separate from the sound ones, for it is the prevailing opinion that the disease may be communicated to a sound bulb by coming in contact with a diseased one. Of the finer varieties and those which it is desired to increase, save all the small corms, and these can be planted to grow on in succeeding years to make flowering bulbs. There are so many new and meritorious varieties now being placed upon the market that the grower who has a market for gladioli should make it a point to use these, for the advance has been very rapid and many of the new ones are far ahead of the older varieties. This flower has forged rapidly ahead in the last few years as a cut flower, and with the improvement now going on is bound to retain its popularity.

After Chrysanthemums.

The early chrysanthemums are now through flowering and the space that they have occupied should be made of use by a growing crop. The soil in which they have been grown should be removed. It is very seldom that a good crop of any flower can be grown in the soil that has produced chrysanthemums. While it looks to be all right and often has much manure in it that the chrysanthemums have not taken up, yet our experience has been that the soil will not grow a succeeding crop. It is better to throw it out in a pile where it can be subjected to the sweetening process of nature. The stock plants of the chrysanthemums can be selected and blocked up closely together and the surplus stock sold, and the space made ready for a following crop. Many growers frequently ask what can be grown to follow chrysanthemums. It depends greatly upon what the trade demands. Where the early frosts are not severe, the single violets are left in the field and planted in the beds, but in the northern section of the country the weather is often too severe, the plants being badly frozen and will not recover until mid-winter. Plant growers will require the space for the growing plants and the lilies where planted early can be moved into the benches. Sweet peas make a good crop in these beds for spring blooming. If the seed is planted in pots in October and then transplanted to the beds early they can be bloomed in March. There are a number of annuals that can be profitably grown, such as bachelor's buttons, and stocks, or early blooming herbaceous plants like Canterbury bells, and Coreopsis lanceolata, which will give an attractive assortment of flowers in early spring.

Mignonette.

As the weather grows cooler, the mignonette will begin to throw the long spikes that are so much desired by the best trade. The plants should be carefully kept tied or held erect, for if they get bent over the stems will grow crooked and they are worthless. Growers adopt different methods for doing this. Some grow them in wire rings similar to the carnation supports, others cut short brush sticks which they set between the rows of plants and still others run wire strings across, making a square around each plant in which it will stand erect. Other wires and strings are added as the plant grows. Keep the plants growing very cool from now on; a house at about the temperature of a violet house, that is from 36° to 40° at night, will produce the finest spikes of flowers. When the flower spikes begin to show keep the plants well disbudded, allowing only the center flower to bloom and all the side shoots should be cut off. This will have to be done very early with the first bloom that sets, for as soon as it forms three shoots will immediately start to grow at the base of the flower; these should be removed as early as possible, that the entire strength of the stalk can go into the terminal flower.

Callas.

The calla bulbs that were planted in pots during August should now have a fine start and should be placed in the benches or pots where they are going to bloom. Make the soil good and rich—it can hardly have too much manure to get the best results, but do not use too fresh manure, have it partly rotted. If grown in pots and the bulbs are large give them a good size, nine or ten-inch is none too large, and pot firmly. After potting give the plants a good soaking and then withhold water until the plants have obtained a good foothold in the new soil, when they will require lots of water. Place them in a house where the temperature can be held at 60° at night if flowers during the winter are desired. Keep the plants tied up, that the bloom may have straight stems. When cutting leaves be careful not to cut too low or the young flower that is unfolding in the leaf stem may be injured.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The events of the past month have been an experience such as is not likely to happen again to any of us who have passed through it. Such epoch making times come but once in a lifetime, and as this is without precedent in this country, let us hope it will never be repeated. It is, however, "An ill wind that blows nobody good," and the flower business, in all its various branches was taxed to the utmost by the great demand thrust upon it so suddenly.

A. F. Borden, Los Angeles, Calif.
Director-Elect, Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association.

The most important work at this time will be to strengthen the broken lines of stock, particularly wreaths. Those who had utilized the spare hours of the summer in getting up a stock of magnolia and oak leaf wreaths for the present and Christmas holiday requirements found them of great assistance when this extraordinary demand was at its height. The flowers that it took to make a $10 spray would decorate three $10 prepared leaf wreaths, adding at least one-third more to the volume of business and profit.

Everything possible in the way of prepared arrangements, that will in any way conserve flowers, should be gotten together at every opportunity and kept in stock to be used at a moment's notice. Baskets, large and small, for cut flowers, should be augmented with the use of greenhouse plants. There is much material, such as the bird's nest fern, Adiantum Croceanum, Pteris argyrea, P. alba lineata, P. Mayii, the Glory fern, and others. These, with the roots washed and mossed will take the place, and keep longer, than the flowers they conserve. Small palms, crotons, dracaenas, primulas, heather, cyclamen and other flowering and foliage plants will be found very useful, not only in basket arrangements, but also in spray and design work of all kinds. The wide awake dealer will have such stock set aside by his growers, on which he can draw, so that it will be in good shape whenever required.

The high levels which prices reached, caused by the great demand, was taken by the large majority of the flower buyers as a matter of course. Even at the advanced prices, it is necessary to handle the stock with the utmost care, and watch every item of expense, as all waste of material, time and flowers cost double that of normal times.

Pot chrysanthemums should be good stock at this season; they are fine for all kinds of decorations and in good demand as house plants for window decoration.

The demand for funeral flowers, owing to the ravages of the dreadful influenza, which extended all over the country, gave a great impetus to the business of the F. T. D. In many cases they were not very welcome, as while orders from good customers were being turned down daily, it was felt that they were in honor bound to care for the business their brother florists from out of town confided to their care. There is a great field for new business to all who will take advantage of the opportunity presented by membership in this organization of the livest men in the retail trade. After becoming a member, feature the idea in your own store. Let your customers know all about it. Many more orders will come your way than were ever thought possible.

Hallowe'en

The eve of All Saints' day is always a festive occasion, looked forward to particularly by all young people, as a time of parties, masquerading, and merry making. While it is not much of a floral holiday, it presents an opportunity, by observing the event with appropriate decorations, to call attention to the store as all such timely displays, being seasonable, are sure to be doubly attractive.

The conventional ideas for the day are the real or artificial pumpkin faces. Those cut in the pumpkins can be made by a skillful hand to take on a variety of expressions. The artificial jack-o-lanterns come in all sizes and can be hung about in great profusion. Small electric globes in each lantern are attractive at night. The black iron pot, suspended on a tripod of wood saplings, over fagots piled upon a red electric light simulating the fire suggests witches, while cornstalks with ears half husked, and autumn branches, make a good background. While all this is old fashioned and conventional, it carries out the ideas as outlined in the fairy tales that belong to the day, and without which Hallowe'en would lose much of its significance.

The wide awake florist, however, always plays his cards to win something, and with him the stop and look, is but the first step. He sees to it that there shall be something beside the unique decoration—arrangements of flowers in baskets or corsages, appropriate in color, that are at once seen to belong to the day and that would be appreciated as a souvenir and fit for a lady to wear with any appropriate costume. Ward roses or small Sunburst, with yellow and black ribbon, are the proper caper, which can be made to conform more strictly to the colors by the addition of a few black immortelles. Corsages of red roses can also be used. Boxes for cut flowers, decorated with some of the fancy crepe paper witches, black cats, etc., all of which stock material can be had in the fancy novelty shops, will make good decorative window material. A few of the boxes, nicely filled with flowers, with a small inscription "Say It With Flowers," with a miniature paper witch illustration stuck on one end, placed among the blooms, will at once suggest a possible use for the flowers. Baskets cut from pumpkins, filled with chrysanthemums, are also attractive and make good centers for table decoration, particularly for family affairs.

Some of the entertainments for young people are quite elaborate—autumn leaf branches, corn stalks, with half husked ears, wild smilax, a few palms about the rooms, and jack-o-lanterns suspended in doorways. Pumpkins, hollowed out and filled with flowers on tables and mantels, complete an effective decoration. Every opportunity to call attention to one's store by emphasizing with appropriate decorations all kinds of popular anniversaries should be taken advantage of by all up-to-date florists. As seen again and again, the public stamp the store as an enterprising, wide-awake establishment with first class stock, and where orders will receive the best attention.

A. F. Borden, F. T. D. Director.

A. F. Borden, Los Angeles, Calif., who was elected a director of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association at the meeting of that organization at Cleveland, O., October 8-9, 1918, is well known to the trade, being associated with Albert Knopf in the Redondo Floral Co., one of the leading retail establishments of Los Angeles. Mr. Borden is one of the city's pioneers and was one of the first growers of flowers for the southern California market. He was at one time manager of the Redondo Carnation Gardens and later went into business for himself. He formed a partnership with Mr. Knopf some years ago. He is a member of a number of societies, a Rotarian, and is everywhere recognized as a hail fellow well met.

October Demand and Its Lesson.

The extraordinary demand for funeral flowers occasioned by the epidemic of influenza, which appears to have spread generally over the country, has dominated every other feature of the business and taxed the resources of all branches of the craft to the limit. At this writing, October 18, in the eastern states it appears to be on the wane, but is still very serious, all the trade still having to work far into the night in preparing for the next day's business. Prices of flowers are still at the high level of the past two weeks, which is three to four times normal prices for the season. A sharp frost, which is now due any day, will cut out the dahlias, and then the greenhouse men will certainly come into their own, and prices are likely to attain such figures as make the words florist and profiteer synonymous.

PREPAREDNESS.

Through an experience in the retail trade of over 40 years, the writer has never seen such a business opportunity as that of the month of October just passing. Every retail florist turned out as much work each day (and night) as would have been a fair average, at this season, for the week. Prices jumped abnormally and only regular buyers with good credit were able to get a supply sufficient for their needs.

Those of the trade who are always looking ahead, who make use of every dull period in getting up stock for the busy holiday times and other occasions when there is a sudden or extra demand and had a large stock of magnolia and oak leaf wreaths made up ready for their flower decoration, profited largely as the result of their foresight.

We speak of this preparatory work again and again, as in going among the retail shops during this busy season not 20 per cent of them had such prepared work on hand. At least one-third of them were out of wreath forms and moss; many were spending valuable time mossing and others using excelsior, as they could not get the moss. Green and bronze galax were being stemmed up, using valuable time in this preparatory work, while hundreds of dollars' worth of orders were being turned down daily in very many stores because there was not time to get them out. We do not decry galax leaves; they have their place, but fully four-fifths of the customers would have taken well arranged magnolia wreaths, made up months before, which look just as good as the galax, when decorated.

No employee should ever be called on to moss up standard designs, such as wreaths, crosses and pillows, at any busy season. This work can all be done in spare moments, so that a stock sufficient for all ordinary demands will be on hand. Every shop should carry a good stock of standard prepared material, such as magnolia and oak and cypress leaves, wire frames, wire, stemming sticks, fern pins, etc. A good assortment of letters, inscriptions and chiffons is necessary. All this stock will keep until used; when on hand, much time is saved in preparation of orders, which, too often, are delayed by reason of waiting until something required is obtained from the wholesale house. The expense in carfares, telephone calls, messengers' time (who could have been of so much help in the store or in deliveries) is all avoided when these necessary articles are in stock.

Samples of wreaths of prepared material, decorated with cones, ruscus and other such furnishings, give prospective customers an idea how they will look with flowers. In some busy shops there is nearly always work of this kind in fresh flowers, which makes a good impression and removes all doubt as to "how it will look."

It is astonishing to what an extent artificial flowers were used. To a certain class of trade, particularly those of foreign birth, all sorts of designs of crepe and wax flowers found a ready sale. The wholesale houses cleaned out everything in made-up pieces in the first 10 days of the demand; then, for the most part, buyers were obliged to take the loose flowers and make them up as best they could. One wholesale supply house in Philadelphia advertised for girls, offering $15 per week to start, with a good job until after the holidays, or, if found capable, permanent situations.

Jos. G. Neidinger, of Philadelphia, believes that, while this demand for funerals was unusual, he is fully convinced that the florist trade had before them the greatest business they had ever experienced. The department stores are the closest in touch with the people. As early as last July he had received an order from a large house for 25,000 Christmas wreaths, in various sizes, which showed what they thought of the coming holiday business. How many florists are there at that time ready to give any kind of a Christmas order?

They are coming around now, however, but only those who are alive to the situation, make up their minds quickly and get their orders in are likely to obtain anything near what they will require.

Lilium Parkmannii, Hayward's Variety.

A new hybrid Lilium which flowered for the first time in 1917, was shown before the floral committee of the Royal Horticultural Society, August 27, 1918, and received an award of merit, together with the name of Lilium Parkmannii, Hayward's variety.

The production of a first-class hybrid between the auratum and speciosum groups of lilies is a notable event, and the long lapse of time between the arrival of L. Parkmannii and the flowering of the newcomer makes the new hybrid doubly welcome.

As the raiser of the latter I regret that L. Parkmannii did not exist in cultivation long enough to gladden the eyes of latter-day lily-lovers—myself among them. I have had many chats with growers of the older generation, who can remember L. Parkmannii when it was at its best, and some of those who saw the new lily after the meeting of August 27 asserted that it was not L. Parkmannii. Mr. Perry, of Enfield, whose interest in lilies no one will dispute, has seen the new hybrid, and is certain that it is not L. Parkmannii, as it differs from the latter in form, petal, and coloring. Mr. Perry, who has had access to the wonderful collection of lily paintings of Dr. Regel, of Petrograd, gave me a detailed account of the differences between the two lilies.

I do not wish to question the decision of the R.H.S. floral committee, but I should certainly like to see the whole question of nomenclature cleared up. The new lily can hardly be a variety of L. Parkmannii, as the latter disappeared from gardens long before the coming of the present lily, and of course took no part in its production. Further, Mr. Parkmann's account of his hybrid gives L. auratum as one parent, whereas in the present hybrid L. auratum macranthum was the parent—a very different plant from the typical L. auratum.—P. S. Hayward, in London Gardeners' Chronicle.

THE ROSE.

Fall Requirements.

It seems that the first frost, September 21, although a slight one, arrived early in the season; even if only enough to be hardly noticeable, it called for light firing in the houses, as the thermometer registered 38 outside, and we were glad to have everything in readiness as regards the heating plant. And, right here, if for some reason or another the heating apparatus has not been put into shape, get right after it and do not let anything "get by" that will have a tendency to save fuel. There is practically no excuse for leaky joints, valves, etc., and how these little leaks count up in fuel consumption when added together! For instance, the air-cocks and the ends of the coils. Some years ago we discarded the automatic type of air valves, after trying several kinds, and replaced them with the ordinary spigot type air-cock, which prevents a lot of trouble, as the air can be readily adjusted without a screwdriver and burned fingers. It also eliminates "cusswords" in a marked degree. But a lot of steam can be wasted by allowing these cocks to work too freely. Our way of handling them is to go through and adjust them as the steam is sent around in the afternoon, and as soon as the steam reaches them dry we cut them off entirely and caution the night man not to open them under any consideration unless the steam should drop, and he is also impressed with the fact that the pressure should not be allowed to drop out of circulation. In mild weather three pounds pressure on the ordinary gravity steam heating plant (if carefully installed) will keep the returns free of water, and where a pressure valve is used, or the main flow line set at three or four pounds, the heating will be much improved, as of course with this valve on the line the boiler carries its own pressure anywhere above this amount. And this arrangement on any range above 25,000 square feet of glass is indispensable. Especially where roses are the principal crop, enough sulphur will be saved in one winter's firing to pay for the pressure valve, with better results from the sulphur fumes, which often burn off rapidly on the overheated pipes, fusing the sulphur at too high a heating point and often doing more or less damage to the crop.

The only drawback to the pressure valve is the extra amount of pipe required to even up the difference between a 15 or 20 pound pressure and a three or four pound pressure and this will be taken care of ordinarily with about four more 1½-in pipes running the length of the house. As these valves are freely advertised in the trade papers and engineering magazines, full information can be procured for the asking. Another point that may be overlooked by the beginner, and sometimes by the more experienced grower, is the piping of the house so as to distribute the heat evenly throughout its entire length. A practical way to accomplish this is to use any reliable set of tested thermometers, say three to a house, one at each end, about six feet from the gables, and one in the center of the house, on a calm, cold day, a cloudy day preferred. If they run evenly they show that this condition is o. k. Now try them on a cold day with the wind northwest, and perhaps the west end of the house (if not protected with a shed on boiler-room) will run from five to eight or more degrees colder than the unexposed end. This calls for an extra gable coil at the most exposed end of the house, which, in spite of the extra amount of cross mains necessary at each end of the houses, will be found needful. Again, look out for the over-heated end. Often, by reducing this by pipe coverings, it will help wonderfully in evening up the heating and will be a coal saver. All portable types of steam or hot-water boilers should be covered with asbestos; also, all exposed mains from the boiler to the points where the unexposed heating surfaces are required. This will, it is claimed, save 20 per cent of fuel, and that is what we are after. We have got to figure things out economically this winter to "get by." So that is why I have apparently taken up so much of the space usually devoted to cultural methods. To tell you the truth, brother growers, I frankly admit that I hardly know what to submit along the ordinary lines of suggestions, for it is puzzling to the grower to know what to do in the way of cropping, etc., in the houses, and of course each grower will have to figure out the problem his own way, and cut out such houses as his judgment leads to, so as to get down to the 50 per cent consumption of fuel.

There is one thing that will not work, and that is running a rose house for any length of time below the temperature the varieties require, so if you do decide on what houses you are to run, make up your mind to hold them at their regular temperature. And make allowances for this. I am sure all of the growers are patriotic enough to try their best to get along under the fuel administrator's ruling, and the best way out of it, I think, is to handle what roses you do handle right; far better to have a fair amount of good, salable stock than even twice the amount of retarded plants. That is my idea, at least. As for the cropping or timing of any special heavy cutting, I would suggest no heavy cropping. Try by pinching frequently to split up the crop so as to have a fairly good cut continuously from the amount of plants carried through the season. You all know that October and most of November are usually the poorest months for the rose growers, on account of the chrysanthemums, and I presume this season will not be an exception; in fact, as far as I can judge, there will be even more chrysanthemums on the market than usual. Go out and look up your brother growers and see for yourself "what's doing," is good, all the year 'round advice. Do not stay home all the time and get round-shouldered over worrying and fretting. Look them over while the going's good, at least in your own home town. I believe I can truthfully say that I never have visited a grower that I did not pick up some little idea that was a help to me; but, of course, one cannot carry out all of these ideas, unless they stay at home the most of the time, but as often as one can get out among the growers, without neglecting home duties, the better it will be for the trade all around. Every good-sized visit is a miniature convention.

At last, I will get down to brass tacks, if you have had the patience to go this far, or if the "blue pencil" has not got me. Now is the time to do some real ventilating. Look out for draughts, raise and lower them gradually, and no need to tell you, perhaps, to cut out all artificial heat as early as possible. Do not forget to carry a crack of air at night, and do not delay putting on the night fireman. Up and down temperature at night raises can with the stock. Ever had the plants covered with cold condensation? Oh, well, you know what happened after two or three such doses. We had one this season, and although it was light, we were scared. This should never happen with a night man on in time, so look out.

The danger zone is between midnight and sunrise, and fixing the fire at midnight to go till daylight has fixed many a good house of roses. Remember also to look out for the watering and the syringing. There is less sunshine now and less evaporation these shortening days, and when syringing, do it thoroughly. Get under them. Fumigating can now be done by using the nicotine liquid applied to the pipes. We use a pint-size oil can filled with diluted nicotine, two-thirds nicotine liquid and one-third water, going up one side of the house and back the other as rapidly as one can do the stunt. With the pipes quite hot, if this is done before the green flies make their appearance, the houses can be kept clean with less expense than any other method we have employed; one pint of liquid to a house 40x200. If there should happen to be considerable flies in the house, use full strength and several applications if necessary, several mornings in succession, as the sooner one is entirely rid of this pest the better for both the plants and the pocketbook.

Do not forget to give that pressure valve suggestion at least the "once over," for the sulphur fumes and the proper temperature are most important, and do not forget that a little part of your range is better run properly than all of it as a losing proposition with a temperature away below normal. E.

THE CARNATION.

Stem-Rot.

The extremes between the day and night temperatures at this season of the year create a condition which causes a great deal of stem-rot among the freshly benched carnation plants, unless they are given the most careful treatment. The wide difference between the outside temperature of 70 degrees at noon to near the freezing point at midnight makes it necessary that the grower use extra caution against excessive dampness, especially late in the day.

One of the principal causes of stem-rot is a cold, wet surface soil around the stem of the plant while the soil underneath at the roots is in a drier condition. This can many times be traced to late syringings and haphazard watering. It should be the aim of every grower to make sure the soil is kept in the same degree of moisture at all times.

The plants can now go several days without overhead syringing, and when any syringing is to be done select a bright morning, doing the work early enough to give the plants a chance to dry up well before night. Another cause of stem-rot, as stated before, is haphazard watering. All soils cannot be treated alike as regards water; one watering of a stiff, heavy soil generally suffices to get into it the same degree of moisture clear through, while a soil that has a dusty, sandy texture needs a second attention before the bed is in the same degree of moisture clear to the bottom.

Another cause of stem-rot is an excessive amount of fresh manure in the soil, to sour it and prevent proper drying out. When this is found to be the case, a light surface dressing of air-slaked lime, lightly worked into the beds with a hand-scratcher, will help sweeten the soil till such a time as the plants have better control of it. Another cause of stem-rot is too early mulching of the beds, due to the impatience of the grower to get a mulch on the soil before the plants have become established and under proper control.

The stem, or collar rot, as it is sometimes called, is an entirely different disease from dry-back or branch-rot. The one is caused by unnatural conditions of heat and moisture, and the other, branch rot, by a disease which attacks the plant at its root branch, gradually working its way up the side of the main stem until it strikes a branch, which dries up and withers away, and when once a plant is affected it might as well be pulled up and thrown away, because even though the diseased shoot is cut off the whole plant will become affected sooner or later.

The collar rot usually attacks the strongest and most luxuriant plants first. One day the plant may appear to be among the strongest; the next, the bright healthy green will be found to be turning to a light slate color, and in a very short while the plant will be gone.

The best and safest way to guard against stem-rot, or any disease, is to give the plants the cleanest and most natural treatment possible. It is a very easy matter to let some of the little details of the general routine care of the plants slide until some more opportune time, but it is often the case that a seeming little neglect is often the source of considerable trouble later on. And it is well to remember that this is the season for fungi growth, both outside and in the greenhouse. After steady firing is started, the plants will be under better control.

As soon as a plant becomes affected with stem rot it should be pulled up and burned, the soil directly around removed and replaced with fresh soil, and a new plant put in from the surplus stock being held in 4-inch pots for this purpose. We have also found it to be a good plan to double up some of the plants at the end of each variety for the purpose of filling in, if necessary, finding that they transplant and recover quicker than the pot plants, which always are a little way behind the original bench plants throughout the season.

It is time all the plants were properly supported. If this has not been attended to, see to it that the work is pushed along without further delay.

Federal Horticultural Board Hearing.

Florists and plantmen who attended the hearing before the Federal Horticultural Board at Washington, D. C., October 18, 1918, seem confident that the board will see the justice of their contention that the proposed new quarantine regulations should be withheld from operation until some reasonable time after the conclusion of the war, and will let the matter drop for the present. The proposed quarantine and regulations are to go into effect June 1, 1919, and these will exclude all plants and plant products for propagation from all foreign countries, except as separately provided for in the regulations.

C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the board, opened the meeting by giving a brief historical review of the matters which led up to this meeting. He laid great stress on the fact that it was not necessary for the board to hold this meeting, but it had been its desire to do it in order to give the parties interested another opportunity to submit constructive suggestions. Faces fell at his announcement. His words were as the death knell to the importing business. It was made very clear by the speaker that the board had given the matter all of the attention that was necessary, and that this meeting, and the hearing of May 28, were merely to give opportunity to the opponents of the regulations to state their objections, the May meeting being held merely to comply with the law, the present meeting prolonging the agony.

Whether or not the proposed quarantine and regulations represented good judgment on the part of the department of agriculture was brought into question by J. D. Eisele, vice-president of H. A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., who made a very interesting talk on the whole problem of plant production, contrasting conditions in this country with those that exist abroad, and pointing out the many difficulties that would result if our importations were cut off. He took up first the problem of kentia production, stating that H. A. Dreer, Inc., during the past 10 years has imported kentias to the value of $359,000, although having at the same time planted about 5,000,000 seeds of the same variety. To produce sufficient palms to make importations unnecessary, would require from 20 to 35 additional acres of glass, and this the firm would not undertake during war time, or any other time, when the possibility existed of the board reconsidering its quarantine action at some future date, and again leave free to importers the bringing into this country of kentias to compete with the costlier home grown plants.

Mr. Eisele pointed out that to produce a kentia, seven-inch pot, would require about six years' time in this country, as against four years in England, Scotland, or Belgium. Climatic conditions have much to do with the growth of these plants and these conditions cannot be overcome under glass here. Nor can they be produced to advantage in California, for the plants from that section are the same as those from Algeria and Southern France, and it takes two years in greenhouses to bring these plants into a finished condition. The speaker emphasized this declaration with two stories. One of these was how a Scotch concern had sought to make linen in this country and supply their American customers with domestically-produced materials. Something was lacking, and upon study it was found that the Scotch mists were necessary to give the linen the proper quality. Artificial means were employed to produce a mist similar to that of the old country, but this was ineffective and this firm now supplies its American customers from its European mills. The other story concerned a traveling salesman of H. A. Dreer, Inc., who returned from a California trip some years ago with the determination not to cover that territory the next year because a California firm had set out thousands of kentias, and being near the seat of delivery could better supply the customers in that section. He made the trip, however, and sold more kentias than ever before, the reason being given that the palms of the California concern were not finished plants like the imported ones. A third story told of how some concerns had advertised kentias with the statement that they had never imported any and declaring that their offerings were domestic plants. He stated this was incorrect, because his firm had sold kentias to these concerns and that the kentias had been imported by the former. Despite the fact that Henry A. Dreer, Inc., are the largest individual growers of kentias in the United States, they believe it absolutely necessary to be permitted to import these plants without prohibition from England, Scotland and Belgium.

Speaking of araucarias, he stated his firm had imported during the last 10 years about $57,000 worth, this representing perhaps 200,000 plants. No other place than Belgium produces these. About 15 years ago Henry A. Dreer, Inc., tried growing them here and it was thought a splendid beginning had been made, but the hot weather produced long joints, and to be good these plants should have short joints. The speaker declared that there is a firm in California growing these, the house being planted three years ago, but up to this time they had failed to put a finished plant on the market. The seed has to come from the Norfolk Islands, and the proposition of producing them here is full of chances, in that the seeds are fertile only once in four years. It would be necessary to grow on the seedlings for two years, and the second cutting is only good as a seedling, and it is only after four generations that salable stock is produced. It will be at least 12 or 15 years before stock of this kind can be put on the market.

Mr. Eisele submitted a list of bulbs which he declared could be imported without danger and urged that consideration be given these. He then pointed out the effects of the regulations upon the big estates of the country, whose owners have caused the destruction of large plant collections in order to save coal or to devote the space occupied by them to food production. The new regulations will prevent these people re-establishing their collections after the war is over.

Although there were from six to 10 pages in the Dreer catalogues heretofore devoted to water lilies, next year there will be none of these listed. The producers are meeting with great difficulty in getting people to work in the ponds, and so the speaker predicted that if it is impossible to bring them in from Holland, where the country is peculiarly fitted for their production, or from Japan, there will be none here but the commonest varieties.

No effort during 1918 is to be made by this concern in importing roses, and it has this year been able to buy in the United States about 60,000 plants to handle the trade with. However, this lot does not include all the varieties it desires. In 1918 there were listed in its catalogue 132 hybrid tea roses, the best that can be selected, but of these only 10 are of American origin, and these have been produced from foreign parentage. He said he could not see how any harm could result from the bringing in of rose plants without earth at the roots. The speaker had a complete list of plants that would be cut out under the terms of the new quarantine and regulations, including bay trees, Japanese iris, etc. Upon his argument and the results of the proposed rulings he based his suggestion that the matter be delayed until after the war, when the trade will have had an opportunity to readjust itself to after-war conditions.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was another of the speakers, although he devoted himself mainly to an effort to gain the co-operation of the board in getting in imports of plants, he having found difficulty in securing import licenses from the shipping board.

Orlando Harrison, of Berlin, Md., representing the American Association of Nurserymen, said he did not think it necessary to go into details, but asked that the time for putting these regulations into effect be extended.

Charles H. Totty, president of the Society of American Florists, had opened the argument for the commercial growers, saying that because of other restrictions upon the florists resulting from the war it was felt that the government should lay the import regulations aside until after the period of readjustment. He also presented a statement from the National Association of Gardeners, the membership of which is decidedly opposed to the quarantine, because, with thousands of dollars' worth of plants "thrown on the dump" because of the coal shortage, they will not be able to build up the collections in the private greenhouses after the war. Mr. Totty stated that when the war is over the owners of these private estates will be desirous of replacing the ornamental stock thrown out to make room for food plants. There will be a heavy demand for nursery stock and plants, and the American nurserymen will be unable to fill the orders. No obstacle, he said, should be placed in the way of this work when such restrictions mean the loss of trade to some of the foreign nations which will be incalculable. The collections of palms and exotic plants destroyed because of the fuel shortage cannot be replaced if the restrictions are adopted, and they should therefore be suspended until such time as the trade is able to meet the situation.

Glass Business in Wartime.

The tariff commission has been investigating the condition of the glass industry and finds that in all branches war very seriously handicapped it. The supply of imported ingredients, notably potash, was cut off. Experimenting to discover domestic substitutes for these ingredients took a long time. There were great difficulties in transportation of materials and fuel and in delivering finished products. Some markets were lost. Some staple products could be turned out or disposed of in only limited quantities.

Nevertheless, commercial production has increased and the export trade extended to countries not hitherto reached in certain lines by American manufacturers. "The consensus of opinion of glass manufacturers is that war . . . has stimulated the industry to a remarkable degree, and been the principal factor in the development of a number of new branches of manufacture. . . . The information obtained by the commission warrants the conclusion that a new era has set in for the industry."

Of the chief foreign competitors, Belgium and France, have suffered extensive destruction as to glass manufacture. Exports from Germany and Austria are shut off. We have already taken their places to an important extent in making optical glass, our product in that line now equaling the finest known in Europe before the war.

As to cheap foreign labor after the war one paragraph is significant: "Without the aid of a human hand an automatic machine now produces complete one-dram bottles at the rate of a hundred and sixty-five a minute. The labor cost is 'practically nothing,' said a manufacturer. In making window glass a machine blower in the most efficient American factory can blow a cylinder thirty-nine feet long and thirty-two inches in diameter in less time than a Belgian hand blower can blow one five feet long and fifteen inches in diameter."

There are few businesses for which war does not spell opportunity as well as handicap. The problem is to find and take advantage of the opportunities.—Saturday Evening Post.

Flowers Are Winning.

Evidence accumulates that when the war is over the florist business of this country will enter an era of great prosperity. There are several reasons for such a view. Many of the thousands of soldiers who in hospitals have been made happy by the flowers taken in by benevolent women, who have been tireless in collecting and distributing them, will go back to civil life inspired by a warm affection for the things that so cheered them in their days of suffering and inactivity. Another feature will be the knowledge that has been acquired by the thousands of boys and girls, the latter being humorously styled the "farmerettes," who have gone to farms and gardens to work and have fallen in love with their occupation. Probably many of them started it in the spirit of adventure and amusement, but the fascination of contact with Mother Earth and watching the development from the tiny seed to the flourishing plant will remain with them through life. Settled in homes of their own, they will either cultivate or buy flowers, and in either event the influence of the trade will be strengthened and extended.

A recent article in the New York Times, entitled "Flowers a Boon of War," is as follows:

"One pleasing outgrowth of father's vegetable war garden is mother's war flower garden. Thousands of homes in the less densely populated parts of New York now have flower beds where four years ago the lawn stretched without a break from the houseline to the sidewalk, with an occasional shrub or rosebush, or lilac, or syringa, that really required no attention except for a few minutes perhaps each year. Now it is the exception to find a detached house that has not a bed of cultivated flowers against the south wall, with perhaps another at the front, and not a few lawns have become merely broken strips of green border to set off the flowers. Mother's flower garden has been a perfectly natural development. With father pottering around among his beans and beets in the back yard, how could mother restrain her interest? And seeing the health and happiness he got from playing in the soil, how could she help turning to the same source of pleasure? But vegetables can't be raised with gloved hands, and they must be attended to in the sunshine; so mother, generally being more or less of the old-fashioned sort, had father spade up some of the lawn and fertilize it, and buy the flower seeds and plant them, she promising in return to water the plants and pull the weeds and maybe scratch the ground when necessary with a hand weeder. These were all jobs that could be done mornings and evenings and contemplated from the veranda in the heat and burden of the day. Of course, it always fell out that when father watered his vegetables he also watered the flowers and when he was hoeing his beans he hoed the flower beds, but it was mother's flower garden just the same by right of eminent domain, discovery and instigation. It surely was mother's to harvest, and the daily bouquets of snapdragons, poppies, nasturtiums, sweet peas and the like gave conclusive evidence that as a harvester she was 100 per cent efficient."

Thus all branches of the trade will be benefited, for seeds, bulbs and shrubs will have increased sales. We pride ourselves, and with some reason, on our great advancement in cut-flower growing, but we are yet far from perfection. On the other hand, the home gardens and grounds have in many instances been sadly neglected. Flowers should not be considered a luxury, but a necessity, not, of course, in the sense that bread and meat are necessities, but to brighten life, to impart a cheering and refining influence to every home.

God might have bade the earth bring forth
Enough for great and small,
The oak tree and the cedar tree
Without a flower at all.

Then wherefore, wherefore were they made?

To comfort man—to whisper hope,
When'er his faith is dim,
For Who so careth for the flowers
Will much more care for him!

In his heart-breaking story of Madame Roland's prison life, Jacob Abbott wrote: "Her friends brought her flowers, of which from childhood she had been most passionately fond. These cherished plants seemed to comprehend and requite unaffected love. At the iron window of her prison they appeared to grow with the joy and luxuriance of gratitude. With intertwining leaf and blossom, they concealed the rusty bars, till they changed the aspect of the grated cell into a garden bower, where birds might nestle and sing, and poets might love to linger."

They did not save that pure and noble woman from the fury of the wretches who were thirsting for her blood—but they saved her from the guillotine—but they brightened the valley of the shadow of death.

MARKET MAINTAINS HIGHER PRICES.

Market conditions remain unchanged, with prices high and wholesalers buying up everything in sight. Stock is arriving in more liberal quantities. Carnations are selling at $8 and $10 per 100. Short-stem roses are in great demand, but long grades drag. Chrysanthemums are plentiful and are offered at $2, $4 and $5 and clean up easily at these figures. Snappdragons, pansies, calendulas and yellow marguerites find a ready market for basket work.

NOTES.

At Philip L. Carbone's excellent business was augmented by a handsome window arrangement of orange trees in terra cotta jars and boxes; also, florentine vases with cherry and pepper trees, which sold readily on the "cash and carry" plan.

Arnold & Fisher are cutting some of the best chrysanthemums sent to this market. Their varieties include Golden Queen, Smith's Advance, Halliday and a good assortment of buttons; also, excellent carnations.

Hoffman, during the high-price period of flowers, made an inviting display of fruits, two windows being devoted to flowers and fruit in combination.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. are doing an excellent business. Roses, carnations, Easter lilies, lily of the valley and violets are among the offerings.

At Henry R. Comley's store on Park street business in funeral work has been very brisk, the force working late into the evening getting out orders.

At the store of Penn the Florist business keeps up well. An attractive Liberty Loan window drew much attention to this store last week.

Herman Waldecker, with a range at Braintree, is sending in Pacific Supreme, Smith's Advance and October Frost chrysanthemums.

The Boston Rose Co. is receiving large shipments from its Hadley range. Russell, Ophelia, Hadley and the new Boston rose are leaders.

Business at B. A. Snyder & Co.'s is very good. This firm is receiving large daily shipments from New York and Philadelphia.

Welch Bros. Co. has been very fortunate during the crisis, and is carrying an excellent supply at reasonable prices.

Kidder Bros. have started cutting 10,000 violets daily, which sell easily at $10 per 1,000.

A. S. Caplan has been unusually busy at his store on Massachusetts avenue.

Jack Foote is cutting Jasmine bouvardia and single pink and red varieties.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR ALL STOCK.

Trade conditions have been very brisk the past two weeks, the retail stores being simply swamped with funeral work. The influenza is taking a heavy toll in all walks of life, especially among the younger people. Many in the trade are among the sufferers but as yet there have been no fatalities. Flowers are very scarce and everything is used up regardless of color. Hospitals and sickrooms also demand their share. Outdoor flowers have passed and quite a number of greenhouses are closed owing to the coal shortage. It is feared conditions will be even worse next year, for the fuel controller has announced that in all probability there will be coal only for essential industries. The help problem is also a serious proposition. There is a fair supply of pot plants in sight, as this city might be called the pot plant headquarters for the Dominion. The ferns are second to none and our cyclamens are not to be surpassed by any. Christmas plants are in abundance and are coming along splendidly in spite of unfavorable weather.

NOTES.

Several new stores have opened lately and seem to be doing a good business. Georges Eon, recently with McKenna, Ltd., as a decorator, has opened a splendid shop near Guy street.

E. J. Hayward, past president of the Canadian Horticultural Association, is laying plans to give new life to the organization, and is being assisted by many of the members.

Landscape work is at its lowest ebb, but nursery stock that is available sells fairly well. Quite a number of small plantings are being made.

Charles A. Smith, of Lachine, has torn down his houses and retired from business.

GENERAL CONDITIONS SATISFACTORY.

Business is very good. There is only one trouble. That is, the inability of the wholesalers to get enough stock to satisfy the present demands. Everything available sells readily and at good prices. Shipping business is very good. Chrysanthemums are getting to be fairly plentiful and are proving a great help in taking care of the present strong demand. All sizes are available, but there are more of the medium than of the large and the smaller grades. All of them have been selling readily and many of them are being shipped to outside points. The cut of roses has shortened somewhat during the past week, and as a result, many more than are available could be used if we had them. Carnations are still running short of actual needs in this line. Dahlias continue plentiful. Many of the offerings are fine, large, choice blooms and all sell readily. Cosmos is fairly plentiful and finds a good market. The single violets that come into the market are cleaning up on sight.

NOTES.

Miss Elsie Bolison, who looked after the office of the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange, for her brother-in-law, Alex Ostendarp, for some time, passed away on Monday of this week, a victim of Spanish influenza. By her close attention to her duties, and by her pleasantness at all times, she won the sincere regard and respect of all with whom she came in contact. They mourn her untimely death and sympathize with her family in their bereavement.

Although C. E. Critchell has been unable to augment his force after losses due to men entering the service, the balance have succeeded in keeping up with the rush of the past few weeks.

E. G. Gillett and Alex Ostendarp were each successful in selling Liberty bonds in their respective districts.

Wm. Sunderman has been sending some excellent chrysanthemums to L. H. Kyrk.

LORAIN, O.—Louis Hody has opened a flower shop at 726 Broadway.

ARDMORE, PA.—Arthur Lanser will close his range for the winter.

WEATHER BRINGS IMPROVEMENT.

The warm sunshine of the past week, together with the drastic closing order issued by the state board of health, which has helped to check the spread of the influenza epidemic, have been prominent factors in improving the flower market in this city. The supply is increasing under favorable growing conditions and, although there is not yet enough stock to fill the demand, there is some relief from the distressing conditions of the week previous. Carnations are more scarce than any other flower, the short-stemmed flowers from the new crop selling at $1 per dozen. Lilies are almost unobtainable, only a few rubrums being shown. Roses are holding their own, and some fine specimens of Hoosier Beauty, Mrs. Chas. Russell, Shawyer, Columbia and Ophelia are coming in. A large number of varieties in chrysanthemums made their appearance last week. Pompons are appearing in all sizes, and there is an exceptionally fine supply of chrysanthemum plants, which bring from 75 cents to $2. Fine greenhouse snapdragon help out considerably with funeral work.

NOTES.

Funeral work has made heavy inroads on the stock at the store of Ed Wenninghoff. He has been using baskets of pompons to help out in funerals during the scarcity of other flowers.

The Flick Floral Co. is receiving excellent double chrysanthemums and Ophelia, Columbia and Shawyer roses from its greenhouse. The firm made two large magnolia wreaths which were tied with ribbons of red, white and blue, and which were dropped by two aviators on the grave of a soldier stricken with influenza who was buried here last week. A number of large pieces, including casket covers, were also sent up by this firm.

A. J. Lanternier has been making a specialty of foliage wreaths and flag designs done in immortelles in the national colors during the scarcity of cut flowers. He is cutting some very fine Wm. Turner chrysanthemums, also the new variety, Tiger.

The Doswell Floral Co. is cutting some fine Wm. Turner chrysanthemums and pompons and reports heavy funeral work, with difficulty in obtaining enough flowers to fill all orders.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are having a record cut of roses and chrysanthemums, and also an excellent orchid crop.

DEMAND STILL EXCEEDS SUPPLY.

The funeral demand is still very heavy and the call for flowers is greater than can be accommodated. There are quite a lot of roses and chrysanthemums on the market, but the supply is still inadequate. On the other hand, were it not for the funeral orders the market would be glutted. Roses are selling at from $6 to $15 per 100; the quality is very good, but there are not enough short-stemmed offerings. A few carnations are seen, which sell at $4 to $6 per 100, very high considering the season. Dahlias are still arriving in heavy supply and the quality is the finest ever seen here. They are wonderful in color and can be used for almost all kinds of work. The first heavy cut of chrysanthemums is now coming in pink, white and yellow. They are not of great size, but the price is high enough. Lilies are practically off the market. The first lily of the valley was seen on the market during the past week and sold at $10 per 100. The demand for orchids is very heavy, and the supply houses are doing a fine business in this line. Baskets and wire designs are also on the move. Greens of all kinds are very scarce.

Kaufman's have been displaying wonderful dahlias, the specimen blooms causing considerable comment. They are taking orders for spring delivery.

Henry Ludwig, who has charge of the greenhouses of the E. C. Ludwig Co., has been confined to a hospital with the influenza. M.

INFLUENZA HITS CITY HARD BLOW.

The past week has been a busy one, this city being hit about as hard as any in this section by the epidemic of influenza. The supply of medium roses was very poor with short stemmed grades plentiful, demand very good and prices correspondingly high. Chrysanthemums are coming in larger numbers and relieve the situation. All of the retail stores have had more work than they could handle owing to the short time allowed for preparation of the designs before delivery. The opening of a bank gave an opportunity to move American Beauties and chrysanthemums for the decoration of the banking room. Many stores are suffering as are the greenhouses, from lack of help, many employes being sufferers from the epidemic.

NOTES.

Local florists are happy in having exceeded their quota in the Fourth Liberty Loan. Chairman Anderson and his committee did wonderful work and deserve unstinted praise.

No. 301 Main street will be headquarters for S. A. Anderson in his campaign for county treasurer.

Omaha, Neb.

Hess & Swoboda report that never in the history of their business has the demand been so heavy, the force being kept on the jump from early morning until late at night making up funeral designs, due to the epidemic of influenza. Fine weather prevails—the regular Indian summer variety. J. J. Hess, of this firm, sold Liberty Loan Bonds to the amount of $11,000, during the recent campaign.

BALTIMORE, Md.—John L. Wagner, well-known florist, of Towson, was injured when his auto was struck by another machine, September 20.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—Fire in the boiler room of the Burrows Greenhouses, Michigan street, caused a loss estimated at $250, September 20.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Edward Amerpohl, well-known florist of Janesville, Wis., is visiting his son, who is in the motor mechanics service here.

HARRISBURG, KY.—Glover Kyle, C. D. Thompson and L. Bonta have incorporated the Walnut Hill Flower Co., with a capital stock of $2,500.

CORRY, PA.—Wm. D. Rowe reports unusually heavy business in funeral work, many cases of influenza resulting in two and three funerals a day.

SEATTLE, WASH.—Miss L. W. McCoy, well known florist of this city, will spend the winter in southern California, as usual, leaving October 18.

MORRIS PLAINS, N. Y.—The estate of C. Grayson Martin, consisting of 10 acres and greenhouses, has been sold to David L. Lasher of Newark, N. J.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—The new greenhouse in connection with the Joseph Slocum College of Agriculture being erected at a cost of $15,000 is rapidly nearing completion.

OBITUARY.

Ralph M. Ward.

Ralph M. Ward, head of the firm of Ralph M. Ward & Co., 25 Murray street, New York, died in Roosevelt hospital, that city, October 17, after but a few days illness of pneumonia. Many in the horticultural trade of the city were shocked when the news of his death became generally known, as but few outside of his family, office associates and assistants had known of his illness. He had been a man of robust appearance and was in the prime of life, being in his thirty-ninth year.

Ralph M. Ward was born in Iowa, but his business career was, so far as we are aware, centered in New York and Philadelphia. Along that line, our first record of him is when he was with the firm of Hagemann & Meyer, horticultural importers, of Philadelphia. Eventually they removed to New York, and a few years later the firm was dissolved. Mr. Ward and William Hagemann then formed a partnership under the firm name of William Hagemann & Co. About a year later, in 1903, he retired from the partnership and went into business under his own name, and, up to the placing of the embargo, had been an extensive importer of Japanese lily bulbs, also doing a general importing and exporting business. In connection with his bulb business he had visited Japan. He was active and prompt in his business methods, was a liberal advertiser and had original ideas about advertising.

He was a life member of both the Society of American Florists and the New York Florists' Club. In social life he was genial, companionable and hospitable. At his fine home in Bound Brook, N. J., his friends were always cordially welcomed. He is survived by his wife, Elizabeth M., a daughter, Cora, by his father, Charles W. Ward, and a brother, C. Wayne Ward.

The funeral, which was private, was held from his late residence in Bound Brook, N. J., October 20.

Dominick Rusconi.

Dominick Rusconi, veteran seedman of Cincinnati, O., died October 19, following a stroke of apoplexy at his store. He was 73 years of age. The deceased began his career by selling flowering bulbs to the trade in the south and about 40 years ago established himself at 32 West Sixth street, Cincinnati, carrying a stock of bulbs, seeds and nursery stock, catering principally to florists and the retail trade. His business was very successful and later moved to more commodious quarters at 128 West Sixth street. Recently he took his sons into business with him. Through his fair and generous spirit, Mr. Rusconi made many friends who mourn his death. He is survived by a widow, two daughters and three sons, the eldest, Peter, being in the engineering corps with the American expeditionary forces in France as an interpreter.

H.

John Chugranis.

John Chugranis, for over 20 years in the retail florist business in New York, died, October 21, after an illness of 10 days, of pneumonia. For the past five years, in partnership with a brother and John F. Larkazikes, who came over on the steamer with him from Greece, 27 years ago, he has conducted the business known as the Regent Florist, Seventh avenue and 116th street. Previously, for a number of years, he had a small store on 42nd street, opposite Bryant park, and was known as the Bryant Park Florist. He was well known and esteemed in the wholesale district for his honest and cheerful disposition. He is survived by five brothers, all florists of New York. His funeral was held at the Greek church, October 23.

Walter R. Siebrecht.

Walter R. Siebrecht, youngest son of Henry A. and Mrs. Emma S. Siebrecht, of New Rochelle, N. Y., died, October 16, after a brief illness of pneumonia, aged 29 years. His father being a well-known florist, Walter had followed the business since completing his education. For several years he was in the wholesale business in West 28th street, New York. About two years ago he removed to California, where his brother Henry conducts a growing business. He had visited New York on a business trip when stricken with the prevailing malady. He is survived by his wife and two children, his father and mother, two brothers and one sister. His funeral was held at the family home in New Rochelle, October 19.

John Manolos.

John Manolos, a retail florist, who for a number of years has conducted a business at the northwest corner of Columbus avenue and 86th street, New York, died, October 17, after two weeks' illness of pneumonia. He was born in Greece 35 years ago, and had been in this country about 20 years and engaged in the florist business. He was for a time in partnership with George Hanges, an eventuality in the florist business, which he conducted until stricken with illness. He is survived by his wife and one child.

Edward G. Beck.

Edward G. Beck, of Lancaster, Pa., died October 20. The deceased was employed by Thomas Fries for several years, but after his marriage leased an establishment in the southern part of the city and built up a nice trade, but owing to the coal shortage last winter closed his range and took a position as gardener on a private estate in New York, but later was employed by the B. F. Barr Co., of Lancaster, and was wonderfully successful as a salesman. He is survived by a widow and three children, who have the sympathy of the trade.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that The Elm City Nursery Co., Woodmont Nurseries, Inc., of New Haven and Woodmont, Conn., submit for registration the new plant mentioned below:

Box-Barberry, seedling of Berberis Thunbergii, dwarf, upright, foliage one-half less in size than type, growth more slender. Foliage green, changing to intense red and orange autumnal tints, with an abundance of bright red berries. Originated at the company's nurseries about 20 years ago. Quite as hardy as parent type. Box-Barberry is an ideal dwarf hedge and edging plant, serving a similar purpose as dwarf border box. Its autumnal glory adds an unique feature to the garden border.

Any person objecting to this registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration the same will be made three weeks from this date.

COMPLETED REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that as no objection has been filed against the registration of Asparagus Fletcherii (densifolium) by F. W. Fletcher, of Auburndale, Mass., and Orlando, Fla., the same becomes complete.

National Publicity for Flowers.

Eighteen national magazine advertisements are included in the programme for campaign publicity as arranged by the committees for the remainder of 1918, and with the general average of readers of these magazines taken into account, 20,000,000 or more persons will receive our message in various forms, all emphasizing our slogan, "Say It With Flowers." These advertisements are to occupy spaces ranging from whole to quarter pages, and the copy matter used has been so carefully considered that the desired results are confidently expected to materialize. If we could add the duplicated circulation naturally coming from an advertisement used as many as three times in one magazine, we may safely estimate, on the very lowest basis, that these advertisements will be seen 60,000,000 times. Going further, when it is considered that a favorite magazine is looked over by a subscriber several times, it is easily guessed that 100,000,000 persons ought to be the lowest average we might expect.

Here is the programme. Let anyone figure it out:

It was to finance this publicity that our committees have made weekly appeals to the florists to help us complete our $50,000 fund for 1918. The fund is not completed, but the committees have sufficient confidence in the trade to meet the deficiency and to warrant their going ahead with the programme as prepared.

From every section of the country subscriptions to our fund have come, but there are yet many florists to hear from. If you who read this are among the number, can we not persuade you to add your mite? No matter where you are located, you are benefited by this publicity. Look over our list of magazines; you will find all of them circulating in your neighborhood. Surely it is not too much to expect that you will contribute something within your means.

Think it over, now, before the matter again slips your mind.

JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Echoes of F. T. D. Meeting.

What a thrill of pleasure came over me upon entering the convention hall at the Hotel Hollenden, Cleveland, O., to see the progress of florists' advertising as the chief factor in an exhibit that went all around the hall. And, right here and now, I venture to say that the interest of that display will go a long way towards helping others to get started in the same direction, and a great deal of credit is due Herman Knoble, who's must have labored untiringly to get it up in such good shape. It would have done credit to an ad men's convention.

Next, the beautiful decoration of the hall itself in flags, bunting, palms, huge baskets of roses, etc.; was surely appreciated by all present, and helped to make our convention snappy right from the start.

Also, the loyalty and team work of the Cleveland boys as a whole. What a fine example for emulation for other cities to copy. It sure was food for thought to the thinking mind of the value of co-operation and the immense good attained, for to the credit of the Cleveland boys, who, without any need of entertainment, was the F. T. D. meeting a complete success, and those who were present will appreciate the effort made in this direction led by Fred Brown, who opened the convention.

The meeting, while not as large in attendance as in previous years, held the attention of the most of those present, who went away well repaid for their attendance.

The Canadian florists were well represented, and entered into the discussion freely, showing their intense interest and progressiveness in making such a good showing for the number who belong to the F. T. D.

The programme was most interesting, and this branch of the business is growing to such an important factor that it seems hardly possible to understand how any florist, who is a florist, can not afford to affiliate and join immediately. The benefits are too numerous to mention, and those who join, will only then realize what they had overlooked.

There is no affiliation that I prize more highly than the F. T. D.; hence, this expression to what was a most successful meeting, which will merit its own reward.

NO GREAT CHANGE IN THE MARKET.

There are no great changes in the market conditions since last week, consequently stock in almost all lines is scarce and continues to bring high prices, but in some items not quite as much as before. The Spanish influenza as an epidemic continues to exact heavy toll in this city and the death rate downstate has been exceedingly high. Raiding was begun Saturday night, October 19, to enforce the influenza war order against crowds being permitted to congregate in saloons and other places. The raids were made under a section of a city ordinance which provides fines ranging from $10 to $200 for the violation of any emergency order issued by the health commissioner during an epidemic. Acting Chief of Police Alcock, under the direction of Health Commissioner Robertson, ordered the prohibition of public, church and chapel funeral services, wakes and gatherings at funerals, and limiting, wherever possible, the age of pallbearers to at least 40 years. The orders add that no one except adult relatives and friends not to exceed ten persons in addition to the undertaker, undertaker's assistant, minister and necessary drivers shall be permitted to attend any funeral. Church services were limited and the new orders have to a large extent affected the local trade, many undertakers refusing to handle flowers under the restricted conditions, consequently deliveries had to be made direct to the cemeteries at an additional expense to the dealer. Many of the death notices bear the wording, "please omit flowers," and in one instance an undertaker published an advertisement in one of the Polish papers advising the people not to purchase flowers, as they were a luxury.

Cut Flowers and Greens

The death rate, however, has been so heavy that the new conditions have not affected the market to any great extent, although in some items prices are not quite as high as they have been and probably this may be attributed directly to this cause. The shipping trade, however, is particularly heavy and there is no surplus in any line when the stores close at night. Chrysanthemums are more plentiful and the same holds true for pompons, but they are both cleaning up regularly at good prices. American Beauty roses are in brisk demand at high figures and the same holds true for Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia. Roses in general are moving fast at the advertised quotations, and there is never any surplus. Carnations are good property and clean up early. Orchids command $10 to $12 per dozen and lily of the valley is more than holding its own. A few late asters from Michigan are arriving and bring high prices. Lilies are easily bringing $15 per 100. Gardenias are none too plentiful at $3 per dozen. Sweet peas, daisies, snapdragons, calendulas, violets and other miscellaneous stock including outdoor flowers are also in the offerings and clean up quickly at high prices, owing to the scarcity. Green goods are selling at a premium, especially ferns, leucothoe, adiantum, boxwood and in fact everything in this line. Magnolia leaves are selling at $1.75 to $2.00 per carton, with the supply of stock rather limited. Artificial flowers never sold so well and the wire manufacturers are working overtime to keep pace with the orders. Business in both the retail and wholesale line is exceedingly brisk and everyone in the trade agrees that October so far is away ahead of any other year. The florists put another feather in their hat when they subscribed for over $350,000 worth of Liberty bonds from the last issue and, while it is to be regretted that the death rate from the Spanish influenza has been exceedingly heavy, the brisk business of the past month must be credited directly to this unfortunate condition. NOTES.

George Fehrmann, son of Charles Fehrmann, well known florist, 3744 Lamon avenue, succumbed to pneumonia which developed from an attack of influenza, at an army camp in Alabama, October 14, aged 28 years. The deceased had been identified with the business for a number of years and was well and favorably known. The funeral was from his late residence, October 21, with interment at Montrose cemetery.

John Walsh, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, is again on duty after a hurried trip to Minonk, where he was called by the serious illness of his wife, who is suffering with a severe attack of Spanish influenza. Mrs. Walsh contracted the disease while she was attending the funeral of a brother there, and her condition for a time was critical, but at this writing she is improving and well on the road to recovery.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has a fine supply of pot chrysanthemums ready for immediate delivery, specimens of which are on display at the store this week. The supply department announces that in order to conserve the wire supply it will not manufacture any more double wreaths until after the war or until conditions change sufficiently to warrant it.

Everett R. Peacock, 4013 Milwaukee avenue, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his mother, whose death occurred Wednesday, October 16, from a severe attack of pneumonia. She was 62 years old. The funeral was held the following Saturday with interment at Montrose cemetery.

Zech & Mann report business in the shipping line as exceptionally good, with a heavy call for roses and chrysanthemums. Chrysanthemums are in large supply here and some magnificent stock in this line is attracting the attention of the city buyers.

Vaughan's Seed Store is moving some odd lots of Dutch bulbs which have filtered away from the first two English steamers carrying this stock. A full line is expected to be ready to move out before the end of the month.

The John Kruchten Co. is handling a good supply of carnations, particularly Aviator, which are grown at the Kruchten greenhouses and command high prices. Their shipments were heavy during the scarcity and the largest percentage of their offerings consisted of this variety, which is holding up its reputation as a producer.

J. A. Budlong never had such a fine supply of roses as right now—which are still good property and command very satisfactory prices. This firm had a large steady cut all through the shortage, which will make their October sales show a big increase over the same month of 1917.

Louis Finermann's sister-in-law is seriously ill with the Spanish influenza. His business partner, Morris Grossberg, reports that his mother and sister are also confined to their home with the same sickness.

At Kennicott Bros. Co.'s store the shipping trade is keeping up remarkably well and stock is cleaning up nicely in all lines right along. Fancy chrysanthemums are a leader here this week.

Andrew McAdams has gone to his winter home at Melbourne, Fla. Miss May E. McAdams is assistant professor in landscape gardening at the University of Illinois.

Kyle & Foerster are handling a most complete line of stock of all kinds, including a particularly fancy grade of pompons, which are in good demand this week.

For Your Supply of CUT FLOWERS

 Remember when ordering that our line is so complete that it includes every item offered in the Great Chicago Market.

Miss Charlotte Paradise, with A. L. Vaughan & Co., received five letters this week dated at different intervals from her brother, Eugene, who is with Pershing's troops in France. He has been over the top several times but has escaped injury so far and mentions in one of his letters that his company one day gained its objective five hours ahead of time without the loss of a single man.

Percy Jones, Inc., is as usual handling a large quantity of green goods among which are now noted the finest leucothoe seen in the market this season. Ferns have been in good supply at this house regularly notwithstanding the general scarcity the past few weeks.

John Whitbold, eldest son of Louis Whitbold, is with the colors at Lake Charles, La. He tried to enlist in almost all branches of the army, but was rejected on account of poor eyesight and finally accepted for ground work only in the aviation department.

The number of new cases of Spanish influenza jumped up again in this city, October 23, but fell short of the high record of last week. There were 2,244 cases of influenza and pneumonia reported to the health department and the high mark was 2,395.

H. A. Cecil, one of the George Wittbold Co.'s traveling representatives, was obliged to return home from Iowa last week on account of illness. He was confined to his home the greater part of this week but is now well on the road to recovery.

A. T. Pyfer & Co.'s tickets show that they supplied their trade with $0,000 cut ferns during the extreme shortage that prevailed last week. Mr. Pyfer distributed them as evenly as he could and took the best of care of his regular customers.

Wietor Bros. are in heavy crop with chrysanthemums in all the seasonable varieties and some particularly fine stock in this line is seen at their store. Pompons are also arriving in good supply in a large number of varieties.

Sergeant Al. Campiche, who is stationed at El Paso, Texas, is home on a 15-day furlough. He is a picture of health and from every indication cavalry life in Uncle Sam's army seems to agree with him.

At Peter Reinberg's store the shipping trade continues to be exceptionally heavy. The number of boxes sent to out-of-town points, October 21, from this house, were the largest of any one day this season.

James Foley, of the Foley Greenhouse Manufacturing Co., who was rejected for general military service on account of poor eyesight, has enlisted in the quartermaster's department.

A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., is expected home this week from New York where he attended the funeral of the late Ralph M. Ward, October 20.

At a meeting of the creditors of William Langhout, bankrupt, in the office of Referee in Bankruptcy Eastman October 22, trustees were elected, but no further action taken.

O. Johnson of the Batavia Greenhouse Co., is working short-handed this week, his right hand assistant, George Kasper, being on the sick list.

Tony Then is back on the job at A. T. Pyfer & Co.'s store after being confined to his home for several days with the Spanish influenza.

Albert Lies, of Niles Center, and Matt Mann attended the funeral of a relative at Milwaukee, Wis., this week.

James Karins, with Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa., called on the trade here this week.

Chicago Florists' Liberty Loan Record.

Florists and allied trades of Chicago and Cook county contributed a huge over-subscription to the Fourth Liberty Loan, as shown by the following report:

Total.....2294 Subscriptions....$392,050.00

The final compilations of the Chicago Liberty Loan committee place the florists at the head of all trades identified with Division 19. The magnificent way in which the trade responded will live forever as an inspiration to all.

As in other districts, the florists of Chicago were overwhelmed with work during this campaign, which made the task most difficult and, consequently, it was necessary to put forth tremendous effort; nevertheless, not a single worker permitted the drive to lag.

Every florist can share in the glorious showing made by our trade, and the credit goes to all—those who have worked so hard and faithfully and those who subscribed so generously.

F. LAUTENSCHLAGER, Chairman,
Florists and Allied Trades Committees.

OLEAN, N. Y.—J. G. Layton has taken possession of the flower store in the Olean hotel.

RIDGEWOOD, N. J.—The range and stock of the late A. V. D. Snyder have been disposed of at public auction.

LEOMINSTER, MASS.—Walter A. Finney, florist, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. Liabilities are scheduled at $1,280; no assets.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—Mrs. N. Copeland has purchased the flower shop of the Misses Hannon, who will move to Sunnyvale, Calif.

HELENA, MONT.—At least 1,000 residents of this state are harvesting as a side line dandelions, which are being bought by a New York drug concern at 23 cents per pound.

STOCK PLENTIFUL BUT HIGH IN PRICE.

The last week showed brisk business with plenty of stock, and everything bringing top prices. This proved beneficial to grower, wholesaler and retailer. Some few items such as roses are too high in price to be handled profitably. This also holds true of carnations. The latter at $6 per hundred are all right for good stock, but the quality is very poor and is not worth more than half that price. A majority of the retail florists have not handled a carnation for weeks. Dahlias have been exceptionally fine and the supply has been steady. Chrysanthemums also are arriving in quantity, but up to the end of the week held up well in price. Now they have begun to drag somewhat. Cosmos does not move any too well, and can be used only in limited quantities. Fancy ferns have been very scarce and proved quite a problem with the great amount of funeral work. The situation, however, eased itself the latter part of the week with the arrival of large shipments. Other greens are in ample supply.

NOTES.

The dahlia growers have reaped a harvest this year. The cut has been very large and the stock of fancy quality. Among those bringing in big cuts daily are W. A. Rowe, Kirkwood; Davis estate and E. M. McDonald, of Overland Park; Jos. Hauser, of Webster; Ed. Kalisch, Kirkwood; Oscar May, Sappington, Mo.

The Bourdet Floral Co., A. Senger, Geo. B. Windler and Chas. Beyer, have some very fine pot chrysanthemums coming fast. The warm weather of the past few weeks has rushed them along. The majority are the pompon and daisy flowering varieties.

Phil Goebel, Jr., and Al Kopp are bringing in some large cuts of chrysanthemums. They both state if the warm weather continues, there will be few chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving.

The flood of funeral work the retail florists have been having has never before been equaled. The rush has been going on now for about three weeks, with the end not yet in sight.

Otto Bruenig, A. S. Cerny and W. J. Filcher are supplying this market with some very fine roses. The bulk of the cut is Russell and Ophelia.

Leo Von Graffen, for five years with the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., has left his position to work for the government.

FUNERAL WORK VERY HEAVY.

Market conditions prevailing recently have not improved to any great extent although the supply, while still inadequate, has shown some improvement. Funeral orders are four times as numerous as usual. As a general rule, flowers at this season are scarce but in sufficient quantity to care for all ordinary demands. This being chrysanthemum and rose time, carnations and lilies are not being brought in. Chrysanthemums are being cut so close that they do not have time to open before being used, but in a few more days the supply will be better. Carnations are not seen to any extent and those arriving are of indifferent quality. Roses are better than they have been and some very nice offerings are seen. In the recent rush, the florists even made use of wild flowers gathered from nearby woods, eupatorium and golden rod being seen in a number of designs. Dahlias are appreciated as they never were before, taking the place of the roses, when the supply of the latter was exhausted.

NOTES.

Geny Bros. have been very busy and have been able to stand the strain fairly well. They are getting in good roses, American Beauty and Columbia, of which they make a specialty, being very fine. Their Killarneys, both in white and pink, are also excellent. The chrysanthemums are also coming good, but few are open enough to cut.

The Joy Floral Co. has been most fortunate in having a large and varied cut of flowers, including White and Pink Killarney, Ophelia, Columbia and Russell roses, many carnations, some lilies and plenty of chrysanthemums. These with small flowers enabled them to fill the greater part of their orders.

L. H. Haury & Son, like the other local florists, have been short in supply and had to turn down many attractive orders. They have the usual run of stock, roses, carnations and chrysanthemums of good quality.

SUPPLY MEETS HEAVY DEMAND.

The summerlike weather, which prevailed all last week, helped to hasten the cut of indoor flowers considerably, but the excessive demand, both locally and throughout the state, due to the influenza, which caused a good many deaths, was far ahead of the supply until October 19. Roses arrived in greater quantities, and with the spray or bunch chrysanthemums, in all the different shades, making their debut, it was a little easier sailing than during the three weeks previous. The cut of large chrysanthemums also was on the increase, which helped relieve the anxiety to some extent. The carnation supply is not yet normal, consequently short stemmed stock for design work is still inadequate, and brings good prices. Due to the heavy demand, common ferns have gone up a notch.

NOTES.

Gust Rusch, of Gust Rusch & Co., is under the weather at this time. He reports his whole family on the sick list last week. Oscar Meyer, better known as "Shorty", the delivery man, who was taken down with the influenza, October 19, was reported in a critical condition, October 21. Norbert Sebastian, of the same firm, is also afflicted with the disease.

Due to the total lack of rain this summer, the C. C. Pollwirth Co., who rely upon rain water for their supply, are now handicapped as they cannot pump enough well water to meet demand. In spite of this shortage, their stock does not yet show the effects.

Miss M. Jaekels, office employee of the Holten & Hunkel Co., who was absent about two days, due to sickness, ventured out too early and had a relapse. This firm is in good shape on roses and is beginning to cut fancy chrysanthemums.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

BETTER SUPPLY HELPS SITUATION.

There appears to have been a much better supply of cut flowers the past week. The mild weather has brought out the dahlias, which have been arriving in large quantities, and they have never been finer than during the past two weeks. They maintained their high price until Thursday, when they dropped from six to eight to four and six cents for fancies, and as low as three cents for mixed boxes of smaller grades. Specials brought from eight to 12 cents. Chrysanthemums are now a factor, with increasing shipments every day. Polly Rose, October Frost, Oconto and Razer are first among the whites. Very fine Chrysolora are succeeding Golden Glow. Tint of Gold is a good bronze, while the Golden Yellow is a splendid, medium sized flower. Roses are becoming more plentiful; the specials are shading a trifle in price, but the short to medium grades still bring from $6 up per 100. With most of the houses coming more or less into crop, the acute conditions of the past two weeks are relieved and not likely to occur again, except perhaps, when Jack Frost takes the dahlias. Carnations are also more plentiful, but full crops will not strike the market for another month. They have ranged from six cents to eight cents, with the lowest grades bringing four cents. There has been quantities of cosmos, very good stock, which has sold up clean every day. The double cosmos in the various shades is a beautiful flower, working in with the best sprays and wreaths. All kinds of outside flowers, such as alyssum, candytuft, feverfew, larkspur, snapdragon, wild eupatorium and asters were in great demand at top prices. Autumn leaves have had a tremendous sale, being in great demand for sprays. Easter lilies still range from 20 to 25 cents. Cattleyas are more plentiful, but meet with a good demand. There is very little lily of the valley. Greens of all kinds are in great demand and still bring top prices. New crop green galax and leucothoe sprays are in, and will help out. The bronze galax is almost out of the market. In spite of the great demand, bronze magnolia leaves hold out, although they are said to be down to each day's production at the manufacturers'.

October 21.—The market opened today with a better supply, there being large shipments of chrysanthemums. While the demand is very good there was not the eager "I will pay any price" urgency and prices fell. Chrysanthemums that held firm at 25 cents a week ago could be bought from $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Carnations dropped to $1 and $1.50. Roses in the medium grades were lower with medium and lower grades holding well. The epidemic of influenza seems to be broken, each day showing fewer cases. On October 19 there were 1,332 new cases reported as against over 5,000 two weeks ago. There were 4,596 deaths last week. The retail stores report a falling off in orders, although there is enough business to keep most of the force going all day long.

more for good measure. With everybody on the job the past week, it just simply could not help piling up. While the amounts in some cases were very disappointing, in others they were surprisingly large, such amounts as $500 and $1,000 coming from small retail shops. Had it not been that the committment were so tied up with the great demand for funeral flowers, there would have been even better returns.

IN THE RETAIL STORES.

The plague, for the influenza can be said to have attained this distinction, is, we are glad to say, abating. The new cases reported having fallen off each succeeding day the past week. The death rate is still large, but the authorities believe the worst is over, and in the course of a few weeks health conditions will be normal. The conditions in the stores have been like the strenuous times of the holiday season, long drawn the other fellow, for while prices jumped two and three times above normal, visitors were all the time asking, "can we get some flowers?" and spending $10 to $15 with apparently the same freedom as when they used to pay $5. One retailer limited his customers to pillows, wreaths and sprays, and would take no order for less than $5, except dahlias, by the dozen, which were $3 and wrapped in paper. Even then, he turned many orders away for lack of time and flowers. In many stores, orders were only accepted for cash, while others would not promise to deliver, the designs to be sent for when finished. The large stores in the center of the city turned out enormous quantities of work, which kept them going all day and far into the night. Blankets were an every-day occurrence, and many other large pieces, such as $25 to $50 wreaths, were frequently seen under way. There was quite a run on baskets of flowers, which were sent to funerals, taking the place of designs. The demand was so great that even the largest stores, with the most efficient organizations, were obliged at times to turn down business from other than regular customers. In consequence of this extraordinary business, the stores are cleaned out of all the prepared leaf wreaths, which had been accumulated and worked up ahead for the holiday and other emergencies. Stocks of ribbons, chiffons, letters of all kinds and standard inscriptions, were used up and renewed several times. The wholesale houses finally ran out of letters, and chenille had to be resorted to. Again and again was heard the comment from the tired workers, "I wish it would let up; there is too much work; we seem never to be able to catch up." A woman florist, who does a nice business and who had a greatly enlarged demand, said: "It is getting on my nerves; there is so much distress—I do hope it will soon be over." Frank Ross, who makes a specialty of funeral work, has done a wonderful business in his three stores. His Girard avenue establishment alone turned out over $700 worth of work in one day.

WITH THE WHOLESALEERS.

Leo Niessen, in speaking of the business of the past week, stated that the stock of flowers coming in would have flooded the market under normal conditions, but until Saturday nothing had accumulated, and, while there was still a very strong demand, the coming of the chrysanthemums and the large dahlia shipments had, together with a slight falling off in both local and out-of-town buyers, about brought things to a level. Referring to the prevailing high prices, he said that they did not approve of the extreme figures which could easily have been obtained. While good market prices, warranted by the quality of the stock and the demand, were, in the interest of their growers, secured, extremes were avoided, as the retailers had also to be considered, particularly those whose regular daily orders were the mainstay of the market.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have been taxed to the utmost to manage the immense volume of business thrust on them the past month. Everything in made up wreaths and other designs were sold out early, and their whole force worked over time to get out orders, with no chance to make up stock ahead. There was a slight falling off in the demand at the end of last week. Paul Berkowitz missed the F. T. D. meeting at Cleveland, as it was impossible to get away.

The Jas. Heacock Co. now gets its roses in by the "Pennsy," the shortened service of the Reading requiring this change which makes necessary four miles of auto service to get to the station. Exceptionally fine Columbias are features of their stock. Prices on specials are being shaved in all varieties, but lower grades are still in great demand. Robert Jamison, the manager at Roelfs, and his wife, have been down with the influenza, but are now about again.

The Robert Craig Co. helped out in the scarcity of flowers with cut crosno leaves and sprays, putting up baskets and boxes of $10 worth each. These met with a good demand from the leading florists in all the large centers, who found them of great assistance in all their choice work.

S. H., son of S. S. Skidelsky, has joined the colors and is now at Camp Lee, in the officers' training corps. S. S. is very optimistic about the close of the war and wanted three boxes of cigars on Friday last that it would be over inside of a week from that time.

John Berger had never seen anything like the business of the past three weeks. The dahlia men had a harvest, which would be turned over to the chrysanthemum growers when Jack Frost stepped on the dahlias.

Edward Reid reported the business had broken all records for the season. He had never experienced anything like it. Now that chrysanthemums were in and roses coming into crop, he looked for an easier market.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Exchange was particularly strong in dahlias the past two weeks. Very good cuts of roses were also features.

NOTES.

E. G. Hill spent several days in Philadelphia the past week on his return from the hearing before the horticultural board in Washington. They will allow entrance of manetti stocks, but the shipping board say there are no men to put them on the ships in England. Mr. Hill reports having sold over 300,000 plants of Columbia, and that Premier promises better, as they already have orders for 150,000 of this great rose. His son, Joseph J. Hill, had a narrow call with the influenza for the past two weeks, but is now out of danger.

Robert Craig has been laid up for several days with a severe cold, but is about again. The force at Norwood has been improved by the addition of such experts as Jacob Becker, August Lutz, and Jas. McGregor, all retired war horses, but who have gotten back in the harness again to help out their friend, Robert Craig. One of the force, Louis Hutchings, a young man of great promise, died from influenza last week.

The annual exhibition and chrysanthemum show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, to have been held November 6-9, has been called off, as most of the large exhibitors in former years were unprepared to make their usual entries.

Robert Craig, Clarence J. Watson, and M. J. Callahan, who were down with the influenza, are all now out of danger. Robert Shock, of the M. Rice Co.'s force, had a mild attack, but is now out on the road.

Marguerite, a daughter of the late Wm. K. Harris, was a victim from influenza last week. Her married name is Mrs. Hagerty. She leaves a son two years old.

Walter Mott, representing Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, Beacon, N. Y., is in the city calling on the trade.

J. Austin Shaw will soon leave for Hollywood, near Los Angeles, Calif., to spend the winter.

INCREASED SUPPLY QUICKLY TAKEN.

Although there has been an increase in the supply of cut flowers, particularly chrysanthemums, since our last notes were written, prices remain at a high level for anything that can be used in funeral work, meaning more definitely, the shorter grades of roses, carnations, lilies, lily of the valley and dahlias. While it is true that orchids, American Beauty and special tea roses, and even large chrysanthemums, may be used for that purpose, the average retail florist naturally looks for cheaper stock. That, for the past few weeks, has kept the market in its present condition. There is now an abundant supply of large chrysanthemums on the market, but both wholesalers and retailers agree that they move slowly, the cheaper grades and pompons, which are now arriving, finding more favor. But, it must not be supposed that anything is going cheap or is likely to this season, unless in the course of time, the unexpected happens, and the bottom falls out of the market. The outdoor stock, which has been a boon to the trade and brought good prices, cannot be expected to last much longer; indeed, it is surprising that so much of it has held on. While we are not alarmists, it is a plain fact that regardless of the rosy views of boards of health and various officials who are supposed to be fighting the twin plagues of influenza and pneumonia, conditions are serious. The writer has no official figures at hand, but from general knowledge is convinced that the death rate in this city alone is four or five times greater than it was this time last year, and the demand for funeral work is on the increase. It will not be long until the sole dependence will be on greenhouse stock, and we all know the coal situation.

October 21.—There is a continued demand for stock suitable for funeral work and prices remain firm, the demand for Nos. 1 and 2 and extra roses being much greater than for specials. Large chrysanthemums continue slow. The weather is fair and mild and is increasing the supply of stock.

NOTES.

All good citizens are more concerned about the health of their families and the public health than pecuniary profits or losses. The course that has been pursued by the health officials of this city relating to the prevailing epidemic is truly amazing. An order was issued and generally obeyed, opening and closing offices and business houses at 8 a. m. and 8:30 a. m. and closing them at 4 and 4:30 p. m., the reason given being that it would thin out the crowds on the transportation lines. At the same time hundreds of moving picture and similar houses, nurseries of disease, are allowed to run wide open, and the crowds in the subways and other lines are as great as ever.

The sympathy of the trade is with Mrs. J. Clark Curtin, a lady who has been active in the National League for Women's Service, in collecting and distributing flowers among the soldiers in the base hospitals. Her son, Frederick J., died October 17, at Dalton, Mass., after a three days' illness of pneumonia, leaving a young widow.

We are pleased to state that the Brooklyn florists "went over the top" in the Liberty Loan drive. They were allotted $50,000 and raised $75,000. The following committee handled the business: William A. Phillips, chairman; George Blake, secretary; William H. Kuebler, Alfred Demuessey and Hugo H. Jahn.

F. L. Supplee and Miss Hollingshead, both old employees of Thomas Yeung, Jr., are conducting his wholesale business in the sale of the stock from the Beechwood Heights Nurseries, at 53 West 28th street.

B. S. Slinn, Jr., in the rooms of the Cut Flower Exchange, is handling an exceptionally fine quality of Rhinebeck violets. The directors of the Exchange have decided to keep open for business on Sundays, until further notice.

The United Cut Flower Co., 111 West 28th street, in addition to other good stock, is handling exceptionally fine dahlias of the variety Elsie Burgess, large flowers on three foot stems.

William P. Ford, 107 West 28th street, is receiving an exceptionally fine lot of pompon chrysanthemums of English origin, 50 varieties all told, which are attracting much attention.

Miss Florence Cadieux, of the Cadieux Co., retail florists, 1007 Madison avenue, who has been seriously ill of pneumonia, is now believed to have passed the danger point.

Joseph Crawford, for the past three years with Harry O. May, Summit, N. J., has returned to his former position with Alex. M. Westwood, the Pennsylvania Terminal florist.

Ralph Armstrong, the Madison avenue retailer, who has been in St. Luke's hospital with a broken ankle, has sufficiently recovered to be removed to his home.

S. Masure, 256 Fulton street, Brooklyn, has been greatly rushed with funeral work, but he found time to make a large subscription to the Liberty Loan.

Nicholas Cardis, a fine young man 29 years old, an employee of the New York Florists' Supply Company, 28th street, died October 18, of pneumonia.

At the store of James Weir, Inc., 324 Fulton street, Manager McCarthy recently stated that their funeral orders had been exceptionally heavy.

In addition to a good stock of cut flowers, William Kessler, 115 West 28th street, has a fine showing of chrysanthemums in pots.

George J. Polykranas, 104 West 28th street, is handling a fine stock of chrysanthemums and dahlias, also pink bouvardia.

James Dean Memorial Resolution.

The New York Florists' Club, at its meeting, October 14, adopted the following resolution on the death of the late James Dean:

"In the death, at a ripe age, of James Dean, the New York Florists' Club sustains the loss of one of its pioneer members, and a past president, an earnest worker for the success of the club in the early days of its existence, and a loyal member in more recent years, when he enjoyed a well-earned rest from the cares of an active business life. Always known as one of the best grovers of horticultural products of his day, he was a most liberal exhibitor at the early flower shows promoted by the club. His charming personality endeared him to all whose privilege it was to enjoy association with him, a man of sterling merit, strong in his friendships, and hospitable in the extreme. The horticultural world has lost in him one of its bright stars, his beloved family, an honorable husband and indulgent father.

"It is therefore resolved, that the club tenders its most sincere sympathy to the bereaved family in their great loss, and that this resolution be entered upon our minutes, and a copy of same sent to Mrs. Dean.

BY THE COMMITTEE.

West Orange, N. J.

William J. Manda, youngest son of Joseph A. Manda, has been discharged from a hospital, "somewhere in France." Some time ago, he was severely wounded in the battle of Chateau Thierry. Judging by the photograph, which he has sent home, he is now fit to take another whack at "William the Damned."

Joseph A. Manda has recently bought the range of greenhouses formerly conducted by G. Atkinson, dismantled them and removed the material to his own land, where he will re-erect adjoining his present range. The range consisted of six houses, each 20x150 feet, Hittings construction.

TUXEDO, N. Y.—The Tuxedo Horticultural Society, it is reported, will not hold a fall exhibition.

SCARSDALE, N. Y.—John F. Burfield has filed a petition in bankruptcy. Liabilities are $10,713; assets $330.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Robert Holton Lacey, son of R. J. Lacey, well known florist of this city, with the American forces, is reported wounded in action and is now in a French hospital.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.—Professor C. C. Carpenter, supervisor of gardening in the city schools will be in charge of the department of horticulture at the Joseph Slocum College, Syracuse, N. Y.

American Seed Trade Association.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C. President; Wm. G. Scarlett, Baltimore, Md., First Vice-President; David Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., Second Vice-President; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O., Secretary-Treasurer. The thirty-seventh annual meeting will be held June, 1919.

ALL fertilizer prices continue on the up grade.

VENTURA, CALIF.—Charles Cole, son of Samuel Cole, is at Camp Taylor, Louisville, Ky.

THE death of Ralph M. Ward, New York, is recorded in our obituary column this week.

ALBERT DICKINSON and wife, of Chicago, have gone to Orange City, Fla., their winter home.

THE United States tax collector at Chicago is checking up the annual reports of local seedsmen.

HOLLY cutters report one-third to one-half a crop of good quality, with berries not yet turning.

THE Western Seedsmen's Association will meet at the Baltimore hotel, Kansas City, Mo., October 26.

A. H. GOODWIN, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, and wife, are now located at the Hotel Metropole for the winter.

VISITED NEW YORK: Alex. Henderson, of A. Henderson & Co., and President Miller, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago.

SAN JOSE, CALIF.—J. W. Edmundson, of the California Seed Growers' Association, will leave for the east shortly on his usual contracting trip.

OCTOBER weather in the west has been all that could be desired for digging, curing and housing gladiolus bulbs, while the school closing has released labor for this work.

FOR some months the commission box trade have discussed the question of advancing packet prices from five to 10 cents. A compromise has recently been tentatively accepted on a basis of two packets for 15 cents.

GUNNER LAWRENCE S. PAYN, who for a number of years has visited the American trade in the interests of Simon Louis Freres & Co., Bruyeres-le-Chatel, France, sends regards to his many friends in this country from the French battle front.

VISITED CHICAGO: Lester L. Morse, of C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Calif., returning from the east; A. J. Brown and son, Herschel Brown, Grand Rapids, Mich.; George C. Thomson, representing Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, Minn.

WETHERFIELD, CONN.—William Mergat, the veteran seedsman, entertained his friends, Lester L. Morse and Watson Woodruff, last week, while confined to his home. His conversation retains its old-time fire. What a fund for the future seed historian might be gathered at his fireside!

A SEEDSMAN tourist recently covering a wide range of territory, east and west, says seedsmen are much perturbed over the outlook for 1919 trade. High costs, overstocks, difficulty and expense of imports, uncertainty in fixing selling prices and recollection of 1918 losses, make the future far from hopeful.

Seeds Added to Export Conservation List.

The War Trade Board, in a new ruling, has announced the addition to the export conservation list, effective October 19, 1918, of garden seed and vegetable seed. Individual licenses are not required for exportation of these seeds to Canada and Newfoundland when the shipments are of 50 pounds and under.

French Bulb Steamer Arrives.

A steamer carrying bulbs from the south of France, delayed five or six weeks at French docks, arrived at an American port last week. Entry of the cargo was delayed because a new purser could not supply regular papers. Three days later bonds for lacking bills of lading had been furnished in most cases, and importers were getting a look into the cases to determine what sprouting had occurred because of the long delay. Telegraph advices state the bulbs have been found in good condition.

Philadelphia Seed Trade.

The French bulbs have arrived. It is said, however, this stock will be scarce, as the number of cases received is not up to expectation, but there is no guarantee that more will not be thrown on the market later as was the case last year. Dutch bulbs, tulips and hyacinths, are now in the stores and orders are being filled rapidly. Prices are about one-third higher than last year. Hyacinths are offered at retail at $1.50 per dozen.

The trade was shocked to hear of the death of Ralph M. Ward of New York. Mr. Ward received the rudimentary knowledge of the business in this city, starting as an errand boy in the office of William Hageman, who at the time made a specialty of Berlin lily of the valley pips.

The H. F. Michell Co. handled a number of cases of Lillium longiflorum which arrived last week from the Azores. All sold quickly at $140 for 7-9 and $200 for 9-11.

New York Seed Trade.

Bulb importers are in a mad rush to get the accumulated stocks of cases away from the docks. A checking of Dutch invoices against advance orders indicated more shortages than surpluses. When real excess freight charges are added, cancellations may shift the proportions.

To judge by the vegetable displays in the seedsmen's windows, all of them sell good seeds. The latest we have noticed is at the store of J. M. Thorburn & Co.—exceptionally fine beets, carrots, pumpkins, etc.

The funeral of Ralph M. Ward, whose death is elsewhere recorded, was held at Bound Brook, N. J., October 20, and was private.

A French steamer arrived at an Atlantic port, October 18, bringing about 20,000 cases of bulbs.

The seed stores are badly handicapped with many of the employees ill with the "flu."

Patrick O'Mara, of Peter Henderson & Co., has been visiting the west.

Burlap Substitute.

Manufacturers engaged on government contracts are being offered a substitute for burlap by a large Massachusetts mill, which has discovered a material that can successfully be used for baling. Instead of 100 per cent jute, the substitute is made of one strand of Swedish pulp paper and two strands of jute. It is made nine and 12 ounces in weight and 36, 40 and 48 inches deep. A government test of the nine-ounce product shows a tensile strength of 119 pounds, as against 90 pounds for the regular eight-ounce burlap.—New Bedford Standard.

Prices of Indoor Fruits and Vegetables.

Chicago, October 22.—Cucumbers, 2-dozen box, $1.75 to $2.15; celery, crate, 50 to 75 cents; head lettuce, 2-dozen, $1.00 to $2.00; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.00 to $1.25; tomatoes, per box, 25 to 35 cents.

New York, October 21.—Celery (state), per bunch, 15 to 60 cents; cucumbers, $1.50 to $2.25 per basket; mushrooms, $1.25 to $2.25 per basket; tomatoes, per carrier, 50 cents to $1.50; lettuce, per package, 25 cents to $1.50; radishes, per 100 bunches, $1.50 to $2.50.

Vegetable Markets.

From reports received by the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, for the period October 15-21, the general movement was indicated as still liberal with prices rather weak. Potato values recovered, the declines of the previous week being more than made up in several important markets. Eastern consuming sections have followed a comparatively steady trend for several weeks. Minnesota and Wisconsin No. 1 sacked white stock fully recovered, advancing rapidly and closing at $2-$2.10 per 100 pounds in carlots at Chicago, compared with $1.61-$1.70 the previous week. The general jobbing range was $2.15-$2.75. Cabbage continues weak, declining $2-$3 at shipping points, closing at $9-$11 per ton in bulk f. o. b. Rochester and Danish Seed stock made a similar decline, closing at $16-$18. New York Domestic was weaker in consuming markets at $12-$22 per ton. Colorado stock also weakened slightly. While onion prices were fairly steady, there was a slight downward trend in a few sections. Eastern yellow sacked stock ranged generally at $1.25-$1.75 per 100 pounds and mid-western stock held at $1.50-$2. California Australian Browns weakened to a wide range of 55 cents to $1 per 100 pounds sacked at Stockton. Sweet potatoes ranged lower in the leading markets at $3.25-$4 in the east and $4.25-$5 in the west. Jersey stock held at $1.50-$1.75 per hamper. Bean conditions remain unchanged.

Vegetable Drying in Germany.

The Deutsche Tageszeitung of February 20, 1918, according to Commerce Reports, reported in brief an address which was delivered before the German Agricultural Society shortly before that date by Dr. Eisener, a member of the "Central Office for the Drying Industry," a summary of which follows:

The vegetable-drying industry in Germany has developed tremendously during the war; in fact, it has developed to such an extent that it may be taken to have reached its zenith. Lack of vegetables will prevent further expansion. Attention is called to the fact that the number of factories established for the purpose of drying vegetables for human consumption and for feeding purposes has increased to such proportions that even kitchen refuse is being experimented with in the larger cities. Dr. Eisener predicts that the importance of this industry will greatly diminish after the war, when Germany becomes less dependent upon its own production of vegetables than now, and therefore does not need to be so sparing.

NUMBER OF DRYING ESTABLISHMENTS.

According to a recent census, Germany now possesses over 700 factories for drying specially potatoes, 150 corn-drying establishments, 400 open drying plants suitable for partly desiccating different products, 250 vegetable-desiccating factories, 22 milk-drying establishments, and 400 plants established specially for the drying of cabbages. As an indication of the increase in the use of dried vegetables, statistics regarding the drying of potatoes may be cited from the "Eleventh Supplementary Memorandum on War Economic Measures," which was laid before the Reichstag early this year. This memorandum gives the following figures regarding potatoes dried in Germany during the years mentioned, as follows: 1913-14, 11,500,000 hundredweight; 1915-16, 17,500,000 hundredweight; present capacity, 37,000,000 hundredweight. The same memorandum further states that about 200 of Germany's total of 1,500 malt kilns are equipped for vegetable drying.

PROFITABLE INDUSTRY IN HOLLAND.

Vegetable drying in Holland was quite unknown before the war. During the past three years, however, numerous factories have sprung up in all parts of the country, and vegetable drying is today one of Holland's most profitable industries. The profit in this industry is largely due to the very strong market in Germany for Dutch dried vegetables. It is reported that the vigor of this market results from requirements in Germany for army consumption. The Dutch industry latterly has been working under serious difficulties on account of lack of fuel. Formerly kerosene was largely used in these factories, but several months ago the stocks of kerosene in Holland became so small that the government discontinued permitting its use for the purpose of drying vegetables. German coal was then resorted to, low-grade Dutch anthracite being unsuitable and unavailable in sufficient quantities. But supplies of German coal have also failed. At the present time most of the factories are using wood almost exclusively as fuel.

CONTROL OF THE INDUSTRY IN GERMANY.

By order of January 23 last the German War Food Minister placed the so-called German Imperial Office for Vegetables and Fruit (Administrative Division) in supreme charge of all regulations regarding the working up of vegetables and fruit for commercial purposes. Among other things this regulation provided that the so-called war company for vegetable conserves and the war company for dried vegetables would have exclusive authority to grant permission to use vegetables respectively for conserving and drying purposes. According to this same regulation, manufacturers of these products should be required on demand of the above-mentioned companies or on demand of the Imperial Office for Vegetables and Fruit, to furnish all information regarding their purchases, sales, etc.

One of the chief functions of the Imperial Office for Vegetables and Fruit has been the keeping of records of activities of different drying establishments. As a result of these records, idle or partially idle factories have been supplied with vegetables from districts where factories were being overworked.

Various of the German states have been establishing special commissions, etc., for the purpose of studying and promoting the drying of vegetables.

USES OF DRIED VEGETABLES.

Along with its work of promoting the economic use of vegetables, the German Imperial Office for Vegetables and Fruit has been carrying on an active campaign to popularize the use of dried vegetables. Comprehensive practical cooking experiments have been carried on, and on the basis of these experiments pamphlets containing recipes for the household use of various vegetables have been issued in large numbers and distributed widely. At present the Imperial Office is said to be conducting careful experiments as to the best method for drying vegetables so as to preserve as much as possible the original flavor. Dried vegetables are not used to any extent in Holland.

An owner of a large vegetable-drying factory in Holland recently stated that the drying processes now used in Holland reduces the weight of root vegetables, including potatoes, by about 80 or 85 per cent, and reduces the weight of such vegetables as celery, cabbage, lettuce, etc., by as much as 90 to 93 per cent. The fact that the weight is so greatly reduced, coupled with the fact that the volume is not reduced in an equal ratio, makes it possible to pack dried vegetables in containers of very light material. Indeed, practically all of the dried vegetables sent from Holland to Germany are packed in large paper bags.

THE loss to California prunes by rains is estimated at $5,000,000.

SENATOR HALE, of Maine, has introduced a bill providing for the establishment of a national park on Mt. Desert Island, that state.

THE Maryland State College of Agriculture, College Park, has issued Bulletin No. 218, entitled, "Report of Nut Tree Investigations in Maryland."

Rhododendron Odoratum.

This rhododendron is both a delightful and an interesting variety. According to Loudon, it was raised about 1820, the parents being R. ponticum and one of the deciduous azaleas. By others its parentage has been given as R. maximum crossed with R. viscosum, and this seems to be the opinion of Mr. Bean in his work, and also in the Kew Hand List. As might be expected of a hybrid between an evergreen and a deciduous species, this rhododendron is usually sub-evergreen in character. There is a considerable amount of variation in the color of the blossoms, which are as a rule white, tinged, more or less, with purplish lilac. Though often met with as R. odoratum (a well-merited name), it is in the Kew Hand List referred to as Rhododendron azaleoides. These two names by no means exhaust the list, as the following synonyms will testify: Rhododendron hybridum, R. fragrans, R. ponticum deciduum, R. ponticum azaleoides, and R. maximum hybridum, this last being used in the Botanical Magazine, t. 3454.—H. P. in London Garden.

Some Good Shrubs.

A correspondent asks the Bulletin to name the 12 best shrubs of recent introduction. The task is not an easy one for two persons rarely agree in their opinion of the merits of any plant for any particular purpose. The best shrubs in the sense which our correspondent means are those which will be hardy over a large part of New England and the middle and middle western states, that is in those parts of eastern North America where gardening is most practiced. This means that rhododendrons, azaleas and other plants of the heath family must be excluded from the list, for plants of this family will not grow in soil impregnated with lime. The selection is more difficult now than it would have been a year ago, for the past winter has hurt some of the shrubs which might have been included in such a list but which have not been able to support the excessive cold to be expected occasionally in the northeastern states. As they were uninjured by the cold of last winter the following 12 shrubs may at least be considered hardy whether all our readers approve or not of our selection. In our opinion, four of the cotoneasters of western China must be included in any list of the 12 best shrubs of recent inroduction; they are C. hupehensis, C. multiflora var. calocarpa, C. racemiflora var. soongorica, and C. nitens. C. hupehensis is a broad, tall and shapely shrub with bright green leaves and white flowers which make the plant as conspicuous as any spiraea. The flowers are followed by small scarlet fruits, which are a good deal hidden by the leaves. C. multiflora var. calocarpa is a large shrub with slender, gracefully arching stems, and blue-green leaves. The flowers are borne in erect clusters on short lateral branchlets which rise above the arching stems, and few shrubs are more graceful in habit or more charming in the arrangement of their flowers; the fruit is scarlet and about a quarter of an inch in diameter. C. racemiflora var. soongorica is also a large and vigorous shrub with arching stems. The flowers are white and a little larger than those of C. hupehensis; the leaves are dull blue-green in color, and the fruit is large and showy. Many persons consider this the handsomest of the Chinese cotoneasters. C. nitens is also a large broad shrub; the leaves are dark green and very lustrous; the flowers are red, and the fruit is black. Of these, four cotoneasters, the last has the handsomest foliage but the smallest flowers and fruit.

Two roses can properly find a place in this list of 12 shrubs, the Chinese Rosa hugonis and the Korean R. Jackii. The former has pale yellow flowers and has often been described in these Bulletins; it is one of the handsomest of all single-flowering roses and one of the most important introductions of recent years. Rosa Jackii bears clusters of white flowers like those of R. multiflora, but the flowers are nearly twice as large and open two or three weeks later. This is one of the last of the roses to flower here and is now in bloom in the shrub collection.

Two lilacs recently described in these Bulletins, can be included in the list, Syringa Sweginzowii from northern China and S. reflexa from northern China. Diervilla florida var. venusta, introduced a few years ago from Korea, is perfectly hardy and the handsomest of all the species, varieties and hybrids of diervilla in the large Arboretum collection. It can fairly be considered one of the best shrubs introduced into this country by the Arboretum in recent years. Prinsepia sinensis from northern China properly finds a place in this list. It is perfectly hardy; the leaves unfold earlier in the spring than those of any other shrub in the Arboretum and are soon followed every year by innumerable yellow flowers. The hardiness, rapid growth, sturdiness and the abundant spines on the stems should make this a good hedge plant.

Of the numerous species of the genus corylopsis cultivated in the Arboretum only the Japanese C. Gotoana escaped serious injury last winter. Like all the species of this genus, it bears drooping clusters of yellow flowers, which appear before the leaves, which resemble those of the witch hazel to which corylopsis is related. This beautiful shrub has flowered here now for several years and has shown itself worthy of a place among the best plants of recent introduction.

The list can be completed with Aesculus georgiana and Spiraea Veitchii. The former is a dwarf buckeye from central Georgia, with compact clusters of large red and yellow flowers. This shrub was introduced into gardens by the Arboretum and has now flowered here for several years. As it was not injured by the cold of last winter it can probably be considered hardy in Massachusetts. Spiraea Veitchii is one of the plants discovered by Wilson in western China. It is a large shrub sometimes 10 or 12 feet high, with gracefully arching stems above which the wide clusters of white flowers stand at the ends of short lateral branchlets. It is one of the latest of the white-flowered spiraeas to bloom and is now in flower in the Arboretum where it has proved entirely hardy.

The fruits of Acer tataricum are already bright red and make this little tree a conspicuous and attractive object. The bright blue fruits of Lonicera coerulea and its numerous geographical varieties, and the scarlet, red and yellow fruits of the Tartarian honeysuckle and its varieties and hybrids are now ripe. And from now until March persons interested in the handsome fruits of trees and shrubs can find them in great variety in the Arboretum. Arnold Arboretum Bulletin, July 5, 1918.

CHRYSAEHEMUMS NOW STRONG FACTOR.

An unprecedented volume of funeral work, as a result of the influenza epidemic, is keeping florists going almost to the limit. Relief to the scarcity of stock has come within the past week by the maturing of seasonable flowers, which have been tardy. Chrysanthemums are now the chief mainstay. The cut of carnations, while still short of demand, is approaching a normal stage. The first pompons are being shown this week. Sweet peas are also a new arrival. The famine in pot plants which has prevailed for some time gives promise of easing up somewhat, with cyclamens, primroses and chrysanthemums reaching the market. The help problem remains acute, both at retail stores and at greenhouses. But for the big mortuary demand for flowers, the trade would feel keenly the loss resulting from the closing of churches and suspension of social functions.

NOTES.

Headquarters of the Columbus branch of the Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild have been opened at Fourth and State streets for the receipt of shrubs and hardy plants. All donations will go to Camp Sherman, at Chillicothe, O., 60 miles south of this city. This is one of the largest cantonments in the country, and the call from there is for 30,000 shrubs, 200 evergreens, 500 shade trees and 250 ornamental trees.

R. W. Munk, treasurer of the Munk Floral Co., is confined to his home by the Spanish influenza.

OCTOBER BUSINESS VERY GOOD.

The first three weeks of October have shown a volume of business unprecedented for this month—most of it funeral work. The influenza has not discriminated, and many shining marks have yielded to its attack, consequently the demand for funeral flowers has exceeded the supply, or the ability of the florists to meet it. At this season, under normal conditions, stock is none too plentiful; hence, under the present demand, there is a constant shortage. Much stock has been purchased at the wholesale markets, and the high prices there have resulted in retail figures averaging as high, or higher, than at Christmas. The weather continues mild, with no killing frost as yet, and practically no greenhouse firing, for which the florists are duly thankful. Most of the coal needed by the florists is piled up in their respective yards.

NOTES.

C. M. Newsins, of London, Ont., but more recently of Raton, N. M., is in charge at the greenhouses of W. H. Culp & Co. Miss Lotta Tomer, chief clerk of the store force, has just returned from an eight weeks' vacation spent in Portland, Oregon, and vicinity.

Chas. P. Mueller is a member of the board of directors for the International Wheat Show and Exposition held during the first two weeks of this month. This, and the hailstorm, caused Charlie to remark that he felt like a very busy man.

Roy Hanchett concluded not to replace the glass broken by hail in his greenhouses. He says he has a good job and his greenhouse business can wait awhile.

The Florists' Hail Association of America

Was originally incorporated under the laws of New Jersey on June 1, 1887. Since that date it has promptly paid nearly half a million dollars for glass broken by hail.

At the present time it has no liabilities, and, besides its emergency fund, it has a reserve fund of $45,000.

An insurance with the Florists' Hail Association means prompt payment in case of loss.

PRICES ADVANCE THREEFOLD.

Business has been one mad rush for the past few weeks, funeral work here as in other sections being unusually heavy. Stock of all kinds was in limited supply and is secured with difficulty. In roses, carnations and other stock prices are three times as high as normal. Chrysanthemums have now begun to arrive, the best being Oconto, Golden Glow and Chrysolora. Roses are not abundant, among the leaders being Scott Key, Ophelia, Columbia and White Killarney. Flowering plants, ferns and palms are finding ready sale.

NOTES.

John Campis, proprietor of the flower shop at State and Main streets, died of the Spanish influenza, October 12. His brother, Paul, owner of the Rosery Flower Shop on Clinton avenue, passed away, October 17.

Private Charles Hoyt, while home on a furlough a few weeks ago, was quietly married to Miss Helen Bishop. Friends are extending congratulations.

R. E. Horsey, foreman at Highland park, has returned from a trip through Ohio and Pennsylvania, where he collected 500 herbarium specimens.

H. E. Wilson has added another delivery car to take care of the unprecedented amount of funeral work resulting from the epidemic.

Hugo Teute is cutting some excellent chrysanthemums in Oconto and Chrysolora, which are bringing high prices.

George T. Boucher's force has been very busy with funeral work.

CHESTER.

Providence, R. I.

SUPPLY SHORT AND HIGH PRICED.

The past week has been a busy one. The epidemic of influenza has increased trade at a rapid rate, and stock of all kinds has advanced sharply in price, with sales at sight. Chrysanthemums are arriving slowly, and it will be two weeks before the supply will come in fast enough to be of any help in the rush of funeral work. Roses are selling at from 10 to 25 cents at the wholesalers' and carnations cannot be had under $10 per 100.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Roman Hyacinths.

The early Roman hyacinths should be well enough rooted to bring them into the houses. These early bulbs will require a little more heat than those that are forced later, when more time is given them to form good roots. A plan often adopted by growers of early bulbs is to place them under the benches on the heating pipes when first brought into the house. When hot water circulation is in use the boxes can be placed directly on the pipes, but with steam pipes it will be necessary to place pieces of wood or other material on the pipes, at least two inches thick, to protect the roots from the intense heat radiated by the steam pipes, and the boxes carefully watched to see that they do not dry out at the bottom. Make weekly plantings of Roman hyacinths in order to keep up the supply of flowers. Place some of the bulbs in bulb pans—a few of these will prove very satisfactory for house decoration, and if not used for this purpose the flowers can be cut the same as from boxes. It entails but little more labor to grow them in pots and at times they are very useful as a pot plant.

Poinsettias.

The crucial period in the growth of poinsettias is now at hand, and if the plants are in good condition there should be no difficulty in bringing them through all right. Steady firing can now be depended upon to maintain the proper temperature. Until the bracts are well formed, keep an even temperature and while these are forming avoid all draughts as much as possible. If the house is kept uniform at 60° at night with a rise of 10° during the day there will be but little trouble with the leaves dropping, but a fluctuating temperature will surely result in plants with bare stems. As soon as the bracts form tie the plants to stakes so as to support the flowers and have the plants erect. As many of the plants are used for home decoration a neat green painted stick adds to the attractiveness. The early struck plants and those that are grown in benches for cut blooms will be greatly benefited by a watering with liquid manure. Do not make it too strong at first. Begin with a weak liquid once a week and increase the strength, but after the bracts are fully out discontinue the watering with liquid manure or the color will be affected. The small plants should be placed in pans at once, if this has not already been done. They can be easily sized up now to make a fine appearance—a taller one in the center and shorter ones on the outside of the pan makes the best appearance.

Lilies.

The lily bulbs will soon be here and preparations should be made to handle them immediately upon their arrival. There is no time to waste in order to have this crop in the best of shape for Easter, especially with the bulbs that are imported from Japan. Whichever way the bulbs are to grow, whether in 4-inch or 6-inch pots, it is necessary to have pots enough on hand to pot them all up at once, and a pile of good, rich soil all ready, so that there will be no delay. The rapid potting of these bulbs by some growers is done as follows: The 6-inch pots are placed touching each other and then filled about half full of soil, the bulbs are then placed on the soil and the pot filled in nearly to the top and watered. This can be done in this manner very rapidly and there is but very little handling of either the pots or bulbs.

After the bulbs are in the pots they should be buried outside until good, strong root growth has taken place; the success or failure of the crop will mainly depend on having the bulbs make good roots early. A frame that can be covered during excessive wet weather is the best place for these plants until they are brought into the houses. If the weather becomes very cold and severe the frames should be covered with sash or the beds have straw or some other protection thrown over them. If kept cool the bulbs will make strong roots before the top starts to grow, yet the ground over them should not be allowed to freeze or damage will be done. The giganteums for Christmas should now be growing nicely and the buds should show about November 10. If they do not appear by that time a little extra heat will be necessary to have them in on time.

Outside Tulips.

The tulips should be planted in the beds as soon as possible from now on. It will do them no good to remain out of the soil, for they will lose some of their vitality. While we do not like to plant them out when the soil and weather are warm, yet October and early November is the proper time to get them in. There is danger now of the ground becoming frozen at any time and they should all be planted while the ground can be worked, for it is very difficult to set them even after a thin crust has formed on the soil. The covering can, however, be left until freezing weather sets in, and, in fact, is better, for if the ground becomes frozen the bulbs will not make any top growth, which is likely to occur if covered now and kept too warm. Do not cover too deeply. The object of the covering is not to prevent the soil from freezing, but to prevent the alternate thawing and freezing that often occurs and which will in some cases throw the bulbs out of the soil altogether. Leaves three or four inches thick make the best covering, with boughs or boards laid across to prevent the winter winds from blowing them away.

Stimulants for Plants in Frames.

Frequently in the spring of the year, when danger of frost is over, small bedding plants are potted up and placed in frames outside where they do much better than in the houses, also providing much needed room. One grower goes to the trouble of putting from two to three inches of manure in the bottom of the frame, which, when flattened down, is covered with an inch or two of sifted ashes. As the pots are placed in the frame, the ashes are thrown up against each row of pots to half plunge them, so that when some are removed the others are not knocked over in the watering. He finds the growth made by plants so treated to be very much better than when they are placed on the bare ground.

Wm. K. Harris, Philadelphia, Pa., who was, in the early days a large and very successful grower of bedding plants, raised Phlox Drummondii, sweet alyssum and other like stock in cold frames, plunging the pots in a bed of about three inches in depth of spent hops. The plants took kindly to this treatment and were always the first choice of the market.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Phila., Pa.

Next Week in the Flower Shop.

The past month has been so extraordinary in character and demand for flowers, due to the ravages of the epidemic of influenza, that the regular routine of the trade has been greatly changed, and while in some sections of the country, the worst appears to be over, yet the influence of so many deaths cannot help but be felt in the social activities of the future.

This is the period when the "buds" are generally introduced into society, 100 Per Cent Coal For Florists.

According to a telegram received October 30 from
Wm. F. Gude, Washington
Representative of the Society of American Florists:
"Under ruling of October 26, Florists Are Permitted to Use 100 Per Cent Coal,
If They Can Get It."

but with so many families in mourning, it is very likely that most of these interesting events will be postponed for the present, or the girls take their places without this formal function.

The passing of the dahlias, which were such a factor in helping out in the early October days, appears to have had little effect in raising prices, as the advent of the chrysanthemum, and increased crop of roses, seems to have been sufficient for all demands.

As long as the full force is engaged continuously from early morning until late at night, getting out orders, not much can be expected in window decorations, or orderly appearance of the store. The window should, however, always be presentable, as it will take but a few minutes to place some pots of ferns and one or two vases or vase baskets of choice chrysanthemums, which will be sufficient to make an attractive showing.

There is one feature of the Christmas holiday business that should be looked forward to and prepared for, as far as possible, and that is, wreaths for the cemetery. The many recent deaths, coming so close to Christmas, will mean that nearly all these fresh graves will be decorated, and because of this visit, others adjoining are likely to be included. Provision should be made for this great demand by additional help in the preparation of magnolia or oak leaf wreaths. These should be gotten together in such quantity as to leave the last weeks free for the boxwood and evergreen pieces, which cannot safely be commenced before the first of December. Well made and finished samples of such work should be on hand well in advance, to show prospective customers, as many orders can be secured at this time, all of which greatly relieves the pressure of the last few days. Have no fear about the demand; there will be a fine Christmas business. All the department stores are stocking up to the limit in different classes of holiday goods. One large establishment contracted in July last for 25,000 separate wreaths in various sizes. These are, for the most part, of decorated red chenille, suitable for windows, all expected to be sold by them over the counter.

It is not too early to arrange for and place orders for all kinds of stock that it is known will be required for this busy season. The chances are that many lines will be greatly reduced, owing to the shortage of labor and material. "First come—first served," is an old-time motto which should be kept in mind at all such times.

Pot chrysanthemums are good stock at this time, and as long as they last. They are in demand for the window or conservatory decoration, and often come in handy for cutting, bringing as much cut as when sold in the pot. When there is time, several put together in a tub or basket make a good showing, and prove to be just what is wanted for those who can afford to pay the price. As a show plant or basket, they attract attention and help sell the smaller stock.

How about the publicity campaign? The reports from the "other side" are very encouraging. Our gallant boys will soon put the game on ice, and then there will be some business. Chairman Penn and Secretary Young, all hats off to them, are hard at it all the time, driving home the truth to the slackers. Every man or woman in the business should be a helper in this campaign, as it is for their personal benefit. The closer they tie up to it, use the literature, display the advertisements that come to them as contributors, the more they will benefit. It is worth a dollar a day at the very least, to display in their window the slogan, "Say it with Flowers." It is bound to increase their business to more than this amount every day.

Convalescent Baskets.

While baskets of fruit, decorated with flowers, are not by any means a novelty, yet as a combination, artistically put together, using baskets most suitable for the purpose, they are very seldom seen in the flower shops. If properly featured, there is no reason why baskets of this character should not become a factor and open up a new avenue of profitable business. They do not have to be large or contain a quantity of fruit, such as are sent out by the fruit stores at the holidays, but are to be introduced as convalescent baskets, suitable to bring cheer and comfort to the sick, both at home and in hospitals.

There is at all times something seasonable and tempting in fruits, that when artistically arranged with cut flowers in baskets or hampers, and given prominence in store and window, will suggest itself to an observer as just the very thing for the friend in the hospital or for someone who has been confined to the house through indisposition or accident. The basket should be partially filled with moss of sufficient depth to hold upright one or two glass tubes or slender vases, into which the stems of the flowers used are placed. Growing ferns, with the soil washed from the roots, bound tightly with a little moss, will take up little room and last much longer than the cut fronds. It is not necessary to keep much, if any, of a stock of fruit on hand, as a sufficient quantity can be purchased as required. The accompanying illustrations show two examples, which if featured in window or store, would surely find purchasers.

COLD STORAGE LILIES FOR EASTER.

Practice of Leading Growers.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you kindly inform me as to the best method of handling cold-storage Liliun giganteum for the 1919 Easter crop, the date being late in April? Can they be grown well in a night temperature of 55 degrees and about how much time will be needed, also, when they should be planted to have them in on time?

Kansas.

W. H. C.

With regard to the above, we infer that reference is made to bulbs which were dug in August, 1917, and carried in cold storage since their arrival in this country in November and December of that year. It has been the experience of most lily growers that the vitality of cold storage bulbs deteriorates rapidly after their natural season of growth, the spring of the year, has passed, the average of flowers produced per hundred bulbs gradually decreasing from 250 to between 200 and 150 until, in the October cutting they scarcely produce more than 100 flowers. Some stalks will carry three flowers, but many come with only one, while others are blind, and a certain proportion make no growth at all.

Harry I. Faust, of Merion, Pa., who has been very successful with growing L. giganteum for the Easter market in pots, several years ago tried out a batch of about three thousand $\times 9$ cold storage giganteums, for cut flowers to make the Easter holiday. These were planted the last of November, close together on a table in a cool house, and covered with straw to keep them moist. They were fine, plump looking bulbs, of which much was expected. Occasional inspection showed that very little action was taking place—only a few feeble roots appeared. In the sunny days of late February and early March, the bulbs started here and there, but the shoots were very spindly, most of them blind and only a few showing one bud. Not a dozen flowers were cut from the whole lot. Mr. Faust attributed the failure to loss of vitality in the bulbs, due to their long period of storage.

A grower handling 400,000 cold storage giganteum, forcing for the New York market, said his October cut would not average more than $1\frac{1}{2}$ flowers to the bulb, and that there would be no profit whatever in holding over for Easter.

Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, Pa., believes that any grower who tried to carry cold storage lilies over until next Easter would have his trouble for his pains. The bulbs would by that time be 20 months old, many would not start, and those that did, would be very weak and without the vitality to produce satisfactory flowers. George Carpenter, also of Philadelphia, another lily expert, says it is hard enough to get the fresh giganteums in to good shape. He pots and puts the bulbs outside in frames as soon as they arrive in early November, so as to get good root action at once. The same stock kept in cold storage for a year will, in his opinion, have lost so much vitality that it would not pay to force it. These might, if planted in the cold frame, well protected from frost, and brought on slowly for the late Easter of 1919, be better than none at all, but he would not like to try it.

Alfred M. Campbell, who forces cold storage lilies for the Philadelphia market by the 100,000, claims it to be a very uncertain and precarious business. When several large growers get crops in at once, the price drops; the market demand varies, sometimes very good, and again, draggy. The first batches of the new stocks average up quite well, but as the season advances, the results diminish, until, even in October, the production gets down to an average of a little over one flower to a bulb. As to forcing or keeping cold storage stock over for Easter, he says, "nothing doing; it could not possibly be made to pay."

Manager Ross, of the Floracraft Gardens, at Moorestown, N. J., had an experience with cold storage lilies over 20 months old which he forced for a Christmas crop several years ago and found them to flower well, carrying a good percentage of buds. He handles large quantities of cold storage stock through the season up to about January 1, after which the bulbs are not profitable. He would not like to try to make Easter with cold storage bulbs kept from the summer before. The main trouble is, in addition to losing their vitality, they want to grow before there is sufficient root action. If they could be brought on cool, so as to encourage root growth, results would be better. All their bulbs are started in pots, kept on the cool ground under the tables, where it is dark, and moved up into the light after they have made roots. K.

Potash Needed.

Washington, D. C.—The war industries board October 18 began a survey of the potash situation with a view to stimulating domestic production to meet agricultural needs. There is no shortage of potash for military needs, officials of the board said, but the agricultural requirements are not being met. Cost of production is high, and an effort will be made to develop a new process or standardize the existing processes of manufacture to the point where the industry can operate on a normal cost basis and at the same time increase production.

Poinsettias.

As a blossoming plant and cut flower, the poinsettia occupies an important place in the mid-winter stock of the florist. The height of its season is the Christmas holidays, when its great scarlet bracts give the warmth and brilliancy that is so appropriate for this festive time. For some reason, many growers have great difficulty in propagating or rooting cuttings of this popular plant in the hot months of summer; batch after batch are put in the cutting bed, only to damp off over night, just when they were looking most promising.

Henry I. Faust, Merion, Pa., has for a number of years made a specialty of poinsettias and appears to have no trouble in working up stock. His plan at one time was to use bottom heat by means of a short section of hot water pipes, heated by a small boiler, under which he burned coal oil. A couple of years ago, this small apparatus sprung a leak and would not work. The first batch of cuttings were in, and there was delay in getting the boiler fixed, and before this was made good, one week had passed, and the stock looked so promising that the boiler was not started. In another week, 90 per cent of the cuttings were found rooted, and since that time there has been no bottom heat, and nearly every lot of cuttings root evenly in about two to three weeks' time. Mr. Faust's stock plants are grown in six-inch pots on tables inside. They are kept in pots under the table during the winter months after being dried off, then repotted in good compost. The early cuttings are taken about July 1. The plants are then given a mulch; Clay's fertilizer is good, or any other standard stimulant, to get an active growth. He thinks that many growers coddle their plants too much.

The propagating bench is the front table in an old house. He whitewashes the glass directly over the table, which is covered with clean, rather coarse sand. When the cuttings are in, he gives the bed a good soaking to settle the sand well about them and they are not watered again. They are covered with papers until they are over their wilting. On very hot days he sprays gently two or three times a day.

If fungus does start in the bed, it spreads very fast. He finds they root quicker in very hot weather. His last propagation is about September 1. The plants struck then will make very nice three-inch pot stock suitable for making up into pans for Christmas. The first of July rooted stock is fine for planting out in a bed for cutting. Some growers take their cuttings from plants grown outside, but he finds the wood from plants brought along inside to be the best. The old stock plants will make medium sized bracts, but hardly pay for the room they take up. Mr. Faust sells all his early struck cuttings to other growers and scarcely ever has enough for the demand.

Another grower who has had very good results with poinsettias, sets the cuttings at once into small pots of half soil and sand. They are shaded with papers and kept from drafts the first week. There is no bottom heat, yet he usually gets 90 per cent of them to grow.

The best temperature when the plants are setting buds or bracts is 60 degrees. Developed and brought on slowly, they make much the best flowers. They will stand up to 70 per cent, but the bracts are then soft and go back in a lower temperature. Care should be taken in repotting or making up pans to disturb the roots as little as possible.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

REPORT OF EXAMINING COMMITTEES.

Chicago, October 19.—Seedling No. 4-1916, yellow incurved, scored 91 points commercial, and Seeding No. 1-1916, pink incurved, scored 90 points commercial; exhibited by Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Association, Morgan Park, Chicago. Walda, white pompon, scored 90 points and Lulah, pink pompon, scored 91 points; exhibited by Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich.

SPECIAL EXHIBITION PRIZES.

A list of special prizes offered in connection with the annual meeting and exhibition of the above society in conjunction with the American Institute of the City of New York at the Engineering building, 25-33 West 39th street, New York, November 6-8, has been issued, and copies of same may be had upon application to the secretary. The prizes include cash and silver cups in Classes A to N inclusive.

EXAMINING COMMITTEES.

President Wm. W. Vert announces the committees to examine new chrysanthemums for the ensuing year as follows:

Boston, Mass.—William Nicholson, (chairman), James Wheeler, Alex. Montgomery. Ship flowers to chairman, care of W. J. Thurston, manager, Boston Flower Exchange, 1 Winthrop square and Otis street, Boston.

New York—Eugene Dailedouze (chairman), Wm. H. Duckham, A. Herrington. Ship flowers to New York Cut Flower Co., 35 Twenty-second street, New York, care of chairman.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A. B. Cartledge (chairman), John Westcott, S. S. Pennock. Ship flowers to A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

Cincinnati, O.—R. Wittertaetter (chairman), James Allen, J. C. Murphy. Ship flowers to chairman, Jabez Elliott Flower Market, care of janitor.

Chicago—N. J. Wietor (chairman), E. A. Kanst, Thomas W. Head. Ship flowers to chairman, 102 North Wabash avenue, Chicago.

Shipments should be made to arrive by 2 p. m. on examination days to receive attention from the committee. Muts be prepaid to destination and an entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week they are to be examined, or it may accompany the blooms.

Seedlings and sports are both eligible to be shown before these committees, provided the raiser has given them two years' trial to determine their true character. Special attention is called to the rule that sports, to receive a certificate, must pass at least three of the five committees.

The committees will be in session to examine such exhibits as may be submitted on each Saturday during November, the dates of which will be November 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30.

Unusual October Conditions.

The benches of chrysanthemums are now in their fullest glory; a large number of the varieties are now approaching maturity, and the pompons and singles are a blaze of colors. The extraordinary demand of the last few weeks has practically cleared up all of the early and second early varieties, and in many cases the mid-season sorts have been cut into before they were really ready, and while for a few weeks there will not be any shortage of good chrysanthemums, yet due to the fact of the big inroads that have been made on the cut, there ought not to be any great gilt unless we have a prolonged spell of the warm, soft weather of the last five weeks. The writer does not recall a season like the present, when so little steam heat has been used to develop the chrysanthemum crop; so far, scarcely any artificial heat has been used. This mild weather makes a great saving on the

At such times as these, without any steam heat being used in the houses, there is very little drying out of the soil in the trenches, neither do the plants require anywhere near as much water after the blooms are partly developed. The grower should bear in mind that everything that is given the plants at the roots goes mainly to the blooms, and act accordingly to guard against excessive moisture in the petals to cause damping.

Judgment can be exercised in cutting and disposing of the crop. It is best to clear off each batch as it matures, so that every bloom that goes out is fresh and will keep for a reasonable length of time, but at the same time, if there is a variety of color and type ready on hand, it is wise to work them along so that the whole product does not have the appearance of being limited to one color or variety. Another very important matter is to be sure that when a shipment is marked to contain a certain number of blooms, be sure the count is correct, better one over than short, and be sure the grade is up to the quality called for. Just at the present time there appears to be a surplus of yellow pompons on the market. Where this is the case, hold up a little on them. By running them cool, the crop can be stretched out a great deal. A light shade on the glass will also help to hold them back.

Watch out closely for the black aphid. They increase very rapidly during such weather as we are now having. The pompons and singles are especially susceptible to their attack. A few may be found on some buds and thought of little consequence, but in a few days these few will have increased to a large number and several of the plants will be smothered. The surest means of keeping them or any other insect in check, is to watch your plants closely, then when any insects are found, resort immediately to nicotine spray, or the application to the steam pipe for a vapor. Be particularly clean in the houses. After the blooms are cut, remove the old parts of stems and decayed leaves from the benches. Also, do not neglect the beds that have been cut out. Take care of the stock that is needed, and the balance disposed of if possible.

FOR THE BOYS "OVER THERE."

November 11-18 the people of the United States will be asked to raise $10,500,000 in the National War Work campaign conducted by the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, the National Catholic War Council, the Jewish Relief Board, the War Camp Community Service, the American Library Association, and the Salvation Army, to carry on the great work of supplying our fighting forces with entertainment, recreation, reading rooms, etc.—in fact, "a bit of home within the camp," and much appreciated comforts on the firing line.

THINK WHAT THEY GIVE.

coal pile, but it is not so good for the development of chrysanthemum blooms or plants. They need cooler, fresher conditions that will allow for a little steam heat to be used once in a while to dry up the dampness. The principal aim of the grower in charge should be to watch closely the temperature conditions and endeavor by careful ventilation to keep the general atmosphere of the inside of the houses as dry as possible. When watering has to be done, do not allow the walks to be made wet any more than is absolutely necessary; also, manure barrels that have been used for liquid manure, and have served their purpose, should not be allowed to remain full of water to create dampness in the house, but clear them out.

The degree of night temperature during periods of the present prevailing weather conditions often puzzles the new beginner in growing chrysanthemums, and while we cannot have the ideal cool night temperature of 46 to 48 degrees, at times when the outdoor temperature is at 55 degrees or more, yet by the careful regulation of the ventilations, the inside of the house can be held at almost the same degree as outside. Do not close the houses up tight at any time while the temperature out doors stands soil in the benches, neither do the above 40 degrees, neither should the ventilators be open wide enough to admit a great amount of dampness.

Extension of Credits.

Paper by E. B. Hamilton, London, Ont., read at the twenty-first annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, Ottawa, Ont., August 13-16, 1918.

Upon comparing the different systems of credit applicable to so many lines of trade, we find that the florist's business is in a class by itself, for two reasons:

First, because fully 90 per cent of the stock handled is most perishable, and must be turned over within a few days; whereas, in most other lines their stocks can be retained for weeks, yes months, without depreciation in value, and therefore form a much better asset. Second, because of the nature of the other assets, for if you analyze the assets of a majority of the retail florists you will find that fully 75 per cent of them are in cash and book accounts, the balance being in "supplies" and fixtures, refrigerators and showcases.

The cash asset is of very little value as a security if the customer is not reliable, and the book debts in most cases are not worth 50 per cent of their face value. And as for the supplies carried by many of them, they could not be turned into cash for half of their cost. Therefore, in my judgment, owing to the condition of the financial market, I think all goods should be sold for cash or shipped C. O. D., unless you are sure of your customers, and to these I would suggest that all drafts be made payable on the 15th day of each month. This would give the retailer time to get out his accounts, and to receive returns enough to meet his obligations on time. Should a customer make a practice of returning drafts without a reasonable excuse, I would place him on the same footing as the C. O. D. chance customer.

Now as to the person in the retail business. Owing to overhead expenses being fully double what they were four years ago, stock being higher, and the public being inclined to buy only in the most urgent cases, he is liable to suffer greater loss than under normal conditions. Therefore, he should try as far as possible to do a cash business, or, where credit is allowed, should collect promptly on the first of each month, so as to be in a position to meet his liabilities promptly without drawing on his reserves. I would also suggest that we exchange with each other a confidential list of poor-pay customers, thus avoiding getting many undesirable accounts on our books.

I beg to submit these suggestions for your earnest consideration, and as a basis for discussion of the various topics, and trust that they will prove of value to the association and its members.

splendid catch crop, as it takes up comparatively small space in the three-inch pot stage and rapidly matures when potted up, coming into the market in January and February at a time when there is great demand for medium-priced flowering plants.

Mark Mills, Philadelphia, Pa., who has had great experience as a grower of pot plants for market, advises for houses thrown cold after chrysanthemums or Christmas, a line of flowering shrubs such as Spireas Reevesii and Anthony Waterer, deutzias, double flowering almonds, and other nursery stock. Hydrangea paniculata is also a good shrub to be treated in this way. A line of garden perennials, pinks, etc., could all be potted or tubbed in the fall before the ground freezes up, which, if given a little care in the cold houses through the winter in the matter of watering and ventilation, would come along with the season and meet with good demand when in flower in the spring. The French hydrangeas would also be good stock for cold houses, as would pot roses, but care must be taken to see that the temperature is in a measure regular, as very hard freezing after the roots had started or frequent freezing and thawing, would be very injurious.

WINTER CROPS FOR HEATLESS HOUSES.

Problems Confronting Many Growers.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

Will you kindly tell me what can be planted on the benches and carried through the winter without heat in houses that have been closed due to fuel shortage? Aside from bulbs, could garden truck be started in such a house and grown for early market? How early in the spring can regular plantings be made without heat?

Michigan.

C. C.

Your correspondent is one of the thousands of growers in all parts of the country who have to solve the problem of getting as nearly as possible 100 per cent production out of their houses with only 50 per cent of coal. Where the handicap of decreased labor has been in a measure overcome, most houses are now running to full capacity, filled with chrysanthemums for cutting and in pots, stevia, and a variety of foliage and flowering plants, poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias, all Boston types of ferns, solanums, etc., for all of which there is a good fall demand that culminates and generally empties the houses at the Christmas holidays.

By careful manipulation of ventilators, and what can be called scientific handling of the fires, there has been effected a great conservation of fuel, many growers getting fully as good results the past winter as in former years, saving at least one-third the coal usually consumed. Reducing the temperature five to 10 degrees was another measure which resulted in much less strain on the coal pile. In many cases the plants produced even better results in quality and quantity of cut flowers, particularly in some varieties of roses and carnations.

With a full capacity from the houses up to Christmas, the problem is how best to make them productive until the danger from frost is over. Robert Craig, the well-known plant specialist of Philadelphia, Pa., finds a solution in pot roses, dormant stock which can be potted and stood in a shed or cold frame until the houses are ready, or the plants heeled in and potted later when the empty tables await them. These come along slowly and will not require any heat, except, that when white roots appear there should be a pipe or two turned on in the house to prevent the soil in pots from freezing. Sweet peas, sown in January or early February, will get along nicely without heat, and come into full crop between seasons when the winter forced flowers are done and before the outside stock is in. These will bloom profusely at this time, when they are generally in great demand. Another good stock for the cold house is the hydrangea. The newer French sorts with their variation of form and color, are in increasing demand for the garden, and if potted early and brought along gradually in cold houses, they can be flowered without heat, coming in about Memorial day, or in June, when other flowering plants are scarce.

The situation is not as bad as it would seem, as in many cases, small growers did not make use of their chrysanthemum houses after these were cut except for dormant stock until they were wanted for the spring bedding plants. It is planned by some growers to make as intensive use of their heated houses as possible, and be prepared with very full stocks of all kinds of bedding plants, that, about the first of March can be spread out, repotted and occupy all the available space in the empty houses, which can be kept above freezing should this necessity arise.

A number of growers have tried vegetables, such as radishes, lettuce and beets, but all these take a certain amount of heat, the radishes and lettuce least of all, but none of these crops have been found profitable. Even when grown successfully, the demand and prices obtained were very disappointing, and in most cases showed no return and even loss of the money and time invested.

A fine crop to follow chrysanthemums is Primula malacoides. It is one of the best flowering plants introduced for years, and yet comparatively few growers appear to have taken it up. A good stock of plants, well rooted in three-inch pots, ready for a shift into fours by the first of November, is placed on the chrysanthemum tables as the latter are cut out. This is a

Your Work and Our Work.

The members of the publicity and finance committees have given generously of their time toward the upbuilding of our publicity campaign, with the sole aim of trying to get the maximum results for all branches of the business. Now and then some members criticize or compliment the efforts given, which is always appreciated by the chairman of the respective committees, who, by the way, would welcome more of both kinds, be it complimentary or otherwise. As the committees are at all times trying to reflect the kind of publicity that would do the most good, suggestions are at all times most welcome.

Now, to those who cannot help in this direction may we not expect the financial interest in our campaign so necessary to carry on for 1919 which will soon be in operation, for without the financial needs your committees cannot properly plan for the ensuing year. The general layout of the new year's work will soon be ready for action, and the members who so generously gave will surely feel that they have started a movement that will have added results as time rolls on. Let every man in our business give his full limit and profit by the investment by keeping interested in all its workings.

Give, and you will receive full measure in return, so that your work and our work will merit its own.

HENRY PENNN,
Chairman, National Pub. Campaign.

National Publicity for Flowers.

The far reaching effect of our publicity campaign is becoming very noticeable. Among a number of our orders—perhaps we had better call them commissions, because we do not in our advertisements invite them—which have come into our promotion bureau recently was one from Palestine, sent by an officer in the Indian army, now with General Allenby, Egyptian bills enclosed with it, the only medium of money exchange open to him, directing the delivery of a birthday gift of flowers in a neighboring city. The officer was good enough to speak of our slogan in a manner highly commendatory, and there is not the slightest doubt that he was influenced by it to transmit the order. While the promotion bureau certainly did not expect actually to become a factor in the interchange of orders, still it has relayed scores of them received from persons who have either misunderstood the mission of our advertisements, or sought our services through our being considered a responsible head to the system suggested in them. Of course, we are pleased to be of such service.

But what must be the business effect of the "Say it with Flowers" slogan throughout our own vast country! The public has taken very kindly to the phrase, and it is commonly quoted. It should be the object of every florist to lend assistance in our efforts to plant this slogan still deeper in the public mind. It should be displayed in every flower store window, where its message can be made continuous. There is nothing better than the beautiful glass signs we provide for this purpose—glass mounted on brass, the slogan in gold on light blue ground, the background dark green, delivered anywhere at $2 each, the average cost. Every florist in the land should have one of these signs on display. It would pay for itself in a few hours, help the florist, and help in the publicity work.

Now, a word to those who have not subscribed to the publicity fund. You will notice from the statement concluding this letter that we are still short of our object—the attainment of a fund approximating $50,000 a year for four years. Our committees, for this reason, are not able to go as far in their work as they believe they should. The success of the campaign so far is beyond question, but the campaign stimulant should not be administered in homeopathic doses; they work too slow. The greater the concentration of effort, the more noticeable the results. The committees would like to close the year with the concentration they planned, but are dependent upon the florists who have not yet provided stimulant to furnish the amount required—many hundreds of their brother florists have nobly done their share and are satisfied that their contributions have proved to be good investments. If your hearts are in your business, you surely will want to subscribe to this fund. Send in to the secretary your cheques for whatever you feel you can give; or, if you prefer, ask for our regular printed forms and other particulars, and they will be promptly sent to you.

WITH THE GROWERS

Madsen & Christensen, Wood Ridge, N. J.

"Bright flowers, whose home is everywhere!

A Pilgrim bold in Nature's care,
And oft, the long year through, the heir

Of joy or sorrow."

Thus wrote William Wordsworth of the daisy, a century or more ago. The modern florist who rises early, works hard and, as in the past winter, is annoyed by the scarcity and high price of coal, may not find much poetry in his business, but he should take satisfaction in the thought that he is creating pleasure for others, and the enjoyment of flowers is one of the few pleasures that leave no sting. Begging pardon for moralizing, as we believe a horticultural writer is expected to pattern after Rev. Dr. Dryasdust's sermons, we will now tell something of Madsen & Christensen. They have a range of about 50,000 square feet of glass at Wood Ridge, N. J., which is near Rutherford, and easily reached from New York. Their specialty is daisies, and they grow them by the thousand. They have plants in from 4 to 14 inch pots and tubs. All the stock is well grown and the houses are a sea of bloom that even in these commercial days might inspire another Wordsworth to write another poem. They have also a particularly fine stock of bush and standard genistas in 6 to 10 inch pots. Pot roses and a variety of other plants in good condition were also noticed.

J. Wm. Colflesh Sons, Philadelphia, Pa.

The benefits to be obtained by devoting one's efforts to specialties, instead of a general line, is seen at the establishment of the above mentioned firm in Philadelphia. Here, for the past few years, they have gradually worked up a large stock of the common English ivy, for which there has developed a demand that steadily increases, keeping, if anything, ahead of their production. Last year their stock amounted to over 40,000 plants. These are sold in all sizes from 2½-inch pots up to the largest size in eight-inch pots. Many small plants are sold for filling ferns dishes. The smaller sizes of trellis boxes are filled in quantity. A popular seller is the plant in a six-inch pot, trained to a fan-shaped trellis, three feet high and 18 inches across the top. This is a good stock frame painted in white enamel.

Another design in good demand is trained to a pyramid-shaped frame, which, when well covered, resembles at a distance, a well-trimmed box tree. These range in height from 18 to 36 inches. Globes and umbrellas are fancy shapes for which there is a limited demand. Hanging baskets filled with ivy have also met with favor, the small sizes for the dwelling; the heavy, roomy patterns to hold a number of plants, with vines, from four to six feet in length, are especially useful for hotel windows and corridors.

They are dropping a number of varieties of plants that do not pay them, and going strong into the ivy. They expect to put in 100,000 cuttings this season, a third of which are now in the sand. Fifteen thousand plants for four, five and six-inch pots, are now being lifted from the field and potted.

Quite a stock of Cibotium Schiedei, in large sizes, are seen here. These were secured for the most part from the stores, after their youth and beauty had sadly waned. Under the kind treatment received, they soon revive, and from a financial standpoint, turn in one of the best cards on the place.

An interesting novelty is a frame full of Catalonia jessamine, in six-inch pots. These will soon be moved indoors; enough to fill one side table in a large house. The entire product goes to one retailer. Ferns are also a specialty. There is a house of Verona which looked good and some Teddy, Jr., and Scottii. Mr. Colflesh said: "These fancy kinds are all right, but give me Scottii. It is the best of the whole bunch; best for service and always saleable."

An outside, concrete manure pit, about 12 feet in length, by four in width, three feet in depth for nine feet and a well like depression five feet deep, occupied the balance of the space. Manure is dumped in the shallow end and water turned on the manure until the tank is filled. The water passes through three graduated wire screens a foot apart into the well, from which it is pumped as required through manure pipes to water the ground and table beds whenever required.

Pennsylvania's Carnation Belt of Old.

Some 25 years ago, the section of country along the central division of the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore railroad, extending through Delaware county, taking in the various stations from Brandywine Summit to Oxford, some 12 miles in extent, was styled "the carnation belt." One or two farmers had erected small houses in which to grow this flower. They were successful, and soon houses began to go up all along the line. Chas. T. Starr became famous with Buttercup, and Wm. Shelmire sent out Eldora, a very prolific yellow. At the carnation shows of that period the growers from this neighborhood always carried off a goodly number of prizes.

While there are still a number of carnation growers in this neighborhood, there are no raisers of new varieties, other centers having carried off the palm in this respect. Sweet peas or carnations for winter and tomatoes for a summer crop is the programme of many growers. Mushrooms are grown under the carnation benches, and many have erected sheds and gone into the raising of this crop on a large scale. As many as 5,000 pounds have been shipped from Kennett Square in one day during the busy season.

A visit to just a few of the growers as could be made in one day will be found interesting, showing the variety of stock now grown.

A Boomerang.

JOHN YOUNG, Secy.

Detroit.TRYING CONDITIONS RELIEVED.

This city, in common with most cities the past few weeks which have suffered by a shortage of flowers, is now slowly emerging from those trying conditions that made satisfactory handling of the trade an impossibility in most cases. The high death rate caused an unprecedented call for flowers for funeral purposes and added to this was the constant demand for flowers to send to the sick. Coming at a time that, even ordinarily, a shortage of flowers is usual, the situation was made doubly acute and florists were driven to the end of their resources to even partially care for their trade and render anything like their usual service. Now, however, while the demand is still great and showing no abatement, the supply is daily increasing. Chrysanthemums are coming in fast and their quality most excellent. The same is true of roses, and to some extent, the carnations. Tritomas, which were a factor all fall, are still in evidence, but move slowly as the chrysanthemums and roses make their use less desirable. Marigolds in good quality are coming in for some time, and have up to the present found a ready sale, but they, too, are now in little demand. Greens of all kinds are sharing the high prices being maintained for flowers, and hardy ferns are becoming scarcer as the season and demand advance. The price now is four dollars a thousand and prospects for this figure reaching five and perhaps six dollars by Christmas. Never before, at this season of the year, have prices of all kinds of flowers been as high as realized the past few weeks, and some items attained greater prices than ever reached even at Christmas, and the tendency is to maintain the same as the public is gradually but surely becoming accustomed to the enforced novel conditions in flowerdom.

NOTES.

Ed Moss, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange force, left October 29 to join the service ranks at Columbus, Ohio. John Berlin, long employed by the same firm, suffered by an auto accident a short time ago and is still carrying his arm in a sling, but able to do clerical duty. The Exchange is now the only wholesale house here handling great quantities of palms and ferns this fall.

The Marine City Floral Company is sending in what are by some considered the finest stock ever seen here at this season of the year.

The news of the sudden death of Ralph M. Ward was a shock to his friends here, by whom he was highly esteemed.

Wm. Dilger is in Chicago this week in the interest of the Breitmeyer Landscape & Nursery Company.

Cincinnati.MARKET IS EASIER.

The market is much easier than it has been for the past few weeks. The demand is holding up well while the supplies are much heavier than they had been for a time. Shipping business is very good. Roses are in a good supply. Chrysanthemum receipts are heavy and include the full range of sizes and colors as well as some pompons. The carnation supply is about the same as it was at the last writing. Easter lilies may be had again after being out of the market for a fortnight. Dahlias continue in a heavy supply. Cosmos, too, is plentiful. Other offerings are single violets, a few sweet peas and pansies.

NOTES.

A committee headed by C. J. Jones, as chairman, and Miss Laura Murphy, as secretary and treasurer, are soliciting contributions from the florists of Cincinnati and vicinity, for a fund to be used in sending Christmas presents to the florists from this city and vicinity who are now in the service of the country. The plan is to divide the total fund raised equally among all the boys; send each one a money order for his respective share and let him get what-ever he wants at the nearest canteen to his camp. Remittances should be sent to the treasurer at 329 Main street, and should be in her hands not later than November 20.

Peter Weiland has re-opened his store and salesroom in this city. It is at his old location on Third street.

The South Park Floral Co. of New Castle, Ind., is shipping some excellent roses to C. E. Critchell.

OBITUARY.Adolph Hartung.

Adolph Hartung, well known in the florist and nursery trade, and father of George Hartung, also a prominent grower of Chicago, died at his home in that city, October 28, aged 80 years. The deceased was born in Magdeburg, Germany, but came to this country in 1866, and has resided in the Lake View district of Chicago since that date. Mr. Hartung at one time had large fruit growing interests in Michigan, and had a wide acquaintance in that state, as well as in Illinois. He was married in 1870 to Miss Emma Preuss, who died in 1900. Surviving are five sons and one daughter.

John Mackie.

John Mackie, of the retail firm of Armstrong & Mackie, Eighth avenue and 45th street, New York, and brother to William Mackie, the wholesaler of 105 West 28th street, died, October 27, after a short illness of pneumonia, age 30 years. Since leaving school, he had been in the florist business, first in the Butler store, now out of business, and later with Ralph Armstrong. About six years ago the business of Armstrong & Mackie (not Ralph Armstrong) was established at the above location, and has been successful. He is survived by his mother, four brothers and one sister.

Simon T. Pontrich.

Simon T. Pontrich, son of Simon and Susie Pontrich, of Louisville, Ky., died at the base hospital, Camp Taylor, that city, October 12, after an illness of five days. The deceased was a member of the 31th Cavalry at Fort Riley, Kan., later being transferred to the 6th Field Artillery at West Point, Ky., at which camp he was taken ill. Another brother is with the same battery and another is at Camp Taylor. Of the three remaining brothers, Ray is in Cincinnati, and James and Theodore are identified with the business in Louisville.

William R. Lee.

William R. Lee, oldest son of William S. Lee, the retail florist of the Hippodrome building, 770 Sixth avenue, New York, died, October 21, after a four days' illness of pneumonia, aged 25 years. He was in the fur trade, but frequently visited his father's store, where he was well known to many customers and others in the trade. He was a fine young man, and there is much sympathy for the suddenly bereaved family. He is survived by his wife, Helen, and one child, his father, mother and one brother, Walter T. Lee.

Angelo Dentale.

Angelo Dentale, well known in the wholesale district of New York, died at his home in Jersey City, N. J., October 27, after a week's illness of pneumonia, age 42 years. He was a native of Italy, but came to this country when young. He was for 15 years with Young & Nugent, retailers of 42 West 28th street. Two years ago, he went into the retail business for himself, in Jersey City. He is survived by a widow and three small children.

Mrs. Anders Rasmussen.

Anders Rasmussen, the well-known grower of New Albany, Ind., has the sympathy of a wide circle of friends, in the death of Mrs. Rasmussen, which occurred October 20. She had attended a number of the conventions of the Society of American Florists, was a woman of many accomplishments, and her lovable disposition won for her a host of friends. The funeral offerings were many and beautiful.

William Weber.

There is heartfelt sympathy for Charles Weber and family, of Lynbrook, N. Y., in the death of their only son and brother, William Weber, which occurred, October 28, after 10 days' illness of pneumonia. He was about 18 years old and an efficient assistant to his father in his growing and retail business. He is survived by his father, mother and three sisters.

Miss Abbie Walker.

Miss Abbie Walker of New Albany, Ind., daughter of the late F. Walker, died October 27, following an operation at St. Edward's hospital. She is survived by her mother, a sister, who is now operating the New Albany Greenhouses, H. G. Walker of the F. Walker Co., Louisville, Ky., the Rev. John M. Walker, Clarence, Ferdinand and Earl Walker, brothers.

Mrs. Jessie M. Jansen.

Mrs. Jessie M. Jansen, nee McLeod, wife of Walter Jansen, and daughter-in-law of Ed Jansen, of New York City, the well-known dealer in florists' baskets, died suddenly of pneumonia, October 27, aged 29 years. She is survived by her husband and one child, three months old, and by a number of other relatives.

S. J. Stamos.

S. J. Stamos, a retail florist, who for several years has conducted a business at 370 East Fordham road, New York, died on October 21, aged 28 years. He was a native of Greece, but had been in this country since boyhood.

Mrs. Carl O. Glessler.

Mrs. Carl O. Glessler, wife of the manager of Max Schling's Seed Store, 22 West 59th street, New York, died, October 25, of pneumonia. She is survived by her husband and two children.

Garden Villages in Belgium After War.

The Holland-American homes for Belgian widows and orphans planned for erection at Deurne, near Antwerp, after the conclusion of the war and the restoration of the Belgians to their native land, will be model garden villages of brick cottages surrounded by individual flower and vegetable gardens, with a church, hospital, schools, playgrounds, public baths, etc.

TOLEDO, O.—Frank Kaminski has disposed of his florist business and will retire.

WILLIAMSVILLE, N. Y.—The Elmwood Floral Co. is moving its range from Buffalo to this place.

Coal Needs Met.

There will be no coal famine the coming winter or even an approach to the hardships of last winter. Fuel Administrator Garfield announced October 28, but the public must continue to co-operate with the fuel administration in conservation measures as far as possible. Dr. Garfield said the nation's fuel supplies, assembled in preparation for an unusually severe winter are adequate and well distributed, and that more domestic coal is now in the hands of consumers and dealers than at the corresponding period in normal years.

Two million members of the National Federation of Women's Clubs will endeavor to have Congress pass a resolution naming the mountain laurel as the national flower.

Canna Crop.

From reports received from a number of the principal canna growing districts, the outlook for the bulbs is very encouraging as a whole, although some crops have been affected by the extremely dry conditions of the past summer.

J. H. Groves & Son, Magnolia, N. C., who are growing 20 acres, about the same as last year, say that the crop seems to average up to that of 1917, possibly a little better.

John F. Croom & Bro., also of Magnolia, report that all indications point to a crop of very fine quality in that section. The outlook could not be better, and unless something unusual happens, there will be some beautiful stock.

From Roseacres, Miss., the United States Nursery Co., call attention to the fact that in spite of the driest summer they have ever known, the early spring and fall growth is all right. The one-year stock has suffered materially, but two-year offerings will be up to the usual grades. The estimated crop at this time is about 70 per cent of normal.

At West Grove, Pa., the canna acreage of the Conard & Jones Co., is only 60 per cent of that of last year, affected by the very dry summer. The stock is now looking fine, is making excellent growth, and the firm expects to be able to fill all orders most satisfactorily.

Insecticide Laws Announcement.

In connection with the enforcement of the Insecticide Act of 1910, the insecticide and fungicide board of the United States department of agriculture, under date of October 18, has issued "Service and Regulatory Announcements Nos. 21," relative to the various state laws in respect to the manufacture and sale of insecticides and fungicides. New laws which have been passed and amendments to old laws since the issuance of Announcement No. 13, September 16, 1916, are published therein. Copies may be had at five cents each from the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.

Fourth Liberty Loan.

From the reports of the principal cities where the florist trade and allied interests have been given a quota, results have been more than satisfactory. The trade generally, from the smallest concerns upwards, together with their employees, bought until it hurt, nearly, if not all, exceeding their quota, and by their patriotic action, demonstrated that the allied horticultural trades, particularly the florists' section, is worthy of a dignified trade classification above that of peanut vendors and barber shops.

Flowers Replace Candy at Army Camps.

The demand for flowers seems likely to continue good; many patriotic people substitute flowers for candy in making gifts, as one means of saving sugar. After seeing the soldiers at a big rest camp begging every flower in sight, with the assertion that "Mother has that kind of flower in the front yard back home," one is hardly prepared to view flower growing as a non-essential industry.—Rural New Yorker.

INFLUENZA-PNEUMONIA DECREASES.

The influenza-pneumonia epidemic decreased over 20 per cent October 27 compared to the day before and 50 per cent over a week ago. The pneumonia situation is less encouraging, but the death rate is considerably smaller than it has been. The mortality last week from all causes was 63 per 1,000 population, while the week before it was 77.6. The normal rate is 14. The city demand has not been anywhere near as brisk as it was the early part of the month, owing to the orders issued by the health department which were fully covered in these columns last week. The rainy weather the greater part of last week also had something to do with the falling off in the city demand, which was extremely light. Trade showed a great improvement in the city buying the latter part of the week and is much better at this writing. The out-of-town demand continues to be exceedingly brisk, but the market conditions are such that no orders are being left unfilled. Stock in general is in large supply, particularly chrysanthemums, which are arriving in exceptionally large quantities of fine quality and in many varieties. Pompoms are also more plentiful, but are cleaning up nicely at good prices, especially pink. Carnations are none too plentiful and are holding their own at surprisingly good October figures. American Beauty roses are in good demand and the same holds true for Mrs. Chas. Russell and Columbia, but returns are not anywhere near what they have been during the great scarcity. Roses in general are in fairly large supply and are selling at considerably lower figures which have had a tendency to fluctuate all week. Orchids, gardenias, lilies, callas, sweet peas, single and double violets, daisies, calendulas and snapdragons are included in the daily offerings and are having a good call. Green goods are in larger supply and some particularly fine leucothoe is now being offered. Ferns continue to sell at high prices and promise to be exceptionally scarce this winter from all reports and the number placed in storage will be considerably less than any other year. Boxwood is good property. Smilax is selling well, which holds good for all other items in the green line. Magnolia leaves are in brisk demand, and there has been a good call for artificial flowers of all kinds. The total October sales will show a great increase over the same period of 1917. While stock is in large supply this week there is every probability that a change may occur at any moment, and a sudden shortage would not be at all surprising.

According to the latest newspaper reports, Wednesday, October 30, the city will be released this week from the ban on theaters, music and entertainment in restaurants and political meetings.

but with restrictions, if conditions of the epidemic continue to improve. The influenza-pneumonia commission approved of Health Commissioner Robertson's schedule for a gradual re-opening of all amusement places and meeting places.

NOTES.

Peter Reinberg, president of the county board, who is a candidate for re-election on the Democratic ticket, has won the indorsement of practically all charitable organizations as a result of his efficient management of the charity service of the county. Mr. Reinberg has many friends in the local trade who will gladly support him in the coming election and sincerely hope that he will be re-elected.

The Florists' Club will meet at the Hotel Randolph, 175 West Randolph street, next Thursday evening, November 7, at 8 p. m., when the officers for the ensuing year will be nominated.

Fred Krauss, formerly with the E. F. Winterson Co., has arrived safely overseas.

of the best possible quality in quantity to meet any demand. This stock is the cream of the Chicago market and will please the most exacting buyer.

Wietor Bros. are cutting a new pompon, which originated with them, that is attracting a great deal of attention, and has been called Liberty Loan. It is a beautiful bronze pink, along the order of Golden Climax, and is making a big hit with the city buyers, who grab it at every opportunity. Chrysanthemums and pompons, which are a leader with this firm, are in heavy supply with them right now.

Percy Jones, Inc., is well fixed in green goods of all kinds, including ferns, notwithstanding the reported scarcity of almost every other item in this line. Manager Van Gelder saw the handwriting on the wall, as far as greens were concerned, early in the season, and it is needless to add that he acted immediately and arranged for more than his regular supply to carry him all through the season.

Raymond D. Gottry, formerly on the staff of THE AMERICAN FLORIST, who enlisted when the United States entered the war, writes from "somewhere in France," that he is feeling fine and is after the Kaiser.

H. B. Kennicott, of Kennicott Bros. Co., is still in Florida on business. J. E. Pollworth is doing extra duty in the office nowadays, because practically the entire clerical force is laid up with the Spanish influenza.

Julius Kline, of the Peter Reinberg store force, is suffering from a severe case of blood poisoning in the right hand as a result of a scratch from a rose thorn.

James Kidwell, son of W. H. Kidwell, is with the American troops in France. He is a lieutenant in the aviation corps.

Zech & Mann are more than pleased with the way their shipping trade is holding up and increasing right along, and have no complaint whatever to make in regard to their sales for the past year, which show a wonderful increase over any other in the history of the firm. October has been a record-breaker with them and from present indications it appears as if the total sales will exceed those of the best month they have ever experienced.

Charles Drissler, of Wietor Bros., received a letter this week from Charles Kohn, who formerly made his business headquarters in the local market, and is at present recovering at an eastern hospital from a wound received in the front-line trenches in France on July 23. He has promised to visit his friends here as soon as his health permits.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is having a strong demand for chrysanthemum plants, of which it has an unusually fine supply this season. A sample of the stock may be seen at the store, where it is on exhibition for the benefit of the local buyers who are too busy to visit the greenhouses at Morton Grove.

The many friends of George Hartung, well-known florist, and proprietor of the Kensington Greenhouses, will regret to hear of the death of his father, Adolph Hartung, himself well-known as a florist and nurseryman. Further particulars will be found in our obituary column this week.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are well pleased with business, especially in the shipping line, which is exceptionally brisk and shows every sign of continuing so. This house is handling a complete line of stock and is at present long on chrysanthemums and pompons.

George Perdikas has opened another store on South Washburn avenue a little north of his present place, which is just north of Van Buren street. He is never happy unless he is busy as a bee and is capable of looking after two stores as successfully as he is after one.

George Ball, of Glen Ellyn, is shipping a good supply of his Giant calendar to the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, where they are having a good call. Mr. Ball has had wonderful success with this strain, which always brings top market prices.

At A. T. Pyfer & Co.'s store chrysanthemums and pompons are seen in large supply. Among the offerings of pompons, Fairy Queen appears to be

J. A. Budlong has had an exceedingly good October, which is away ahead of the same month of last year. This firm had a large fine cut of roses all during the recent heavy shortage, which brought exceptionally high prices.

O. A. & L. A. Tonner are featuring a good steady supply of pompons in addition to their regular assortment of other seasonable stock. Leucothoe of fine quality is seen in quantity here.

Bassett & Washburn's office and store force was inoculated this week with Mayo Brothers' preventive for Spanish influenza at the expense of the firm.

Vaughan's Seed Store unpacked this week and have ready for distribution, one carload of French and two carloads of Dutch bulbs.

George Kaspar, of the Batavia Greenhouse Co., is back on the job after recovering from a severe attack of Spanish influenza.

Kyle & Foerster are featuring their usual fine supply of stock, particularly pompons, which are a leader this week. A. C. Kohlbrand and Al Lehman, of the E. C. Amling Co., are on the sick list with Spanish influenza.

A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., is expected home from New York this week.

Robert Emmett Caufield, proprietor of the Woodlawn Floral Shop, 811 East Sixty-third street, was killed October 27, when the touring car in which he and three companions were riding was struck by a Rock Island train at Ninety-fifth street and Vincennes avenue crossing. The train, making 35 miles an hour, caught the car broadside and rolled it for a hundred yards along the track. He was 26 years old and was the son of John T. and Frances M. Caufield and brother of Esther, Frances and Marshall. Mr. Caufield had a host of friends in the trade here, who will be surprised to hear of his untimely death, owing to the fact that they did not connect him with the accident until later in the week, owing to the absence of his initials in the daily newspaper reports. The funeral was held the following Tuesday at Oakwoods cemetery at 3:30 p. m.

A number of the local retail florists met recently with the intention of forming a retail florists' club. Several of the representative men in the retail trade were present when plans were made to take up the subject more fully at a meeting to be held in the near future further notice of which will be made later. George Asmus acted as temporary chairman and F. S. Webb as secretary. The question of collections and credits was considered as well as other vital subjects that everyone is interested in.

The Washington Flower Market has been incorporated for $2,500.

FUNERAL WORK DEPENDED ON.

The influenza epidemic again caused the death rate to increase instead of decrease over that of the week previous, and with the "lid on tight" for just two weeks, commencing October 12, there is absolutely no demand for flowers outside of funeral work and for the sick. Consequently the fancy grades of roses, chrysanthemums and violets, the latter as used for corsage bouquets, do not enjoy the brisk demand that carnations, Easter lilies, the smaller chrysanthemums and shorter stemmed roses did. In regard to the supply of the latter, it can be stated that lilies are a good proposition with good receipts. While carnations are still short, in chrysanthemums the yellow predominate, while the white and pink ones are all sold at sight. In greens, the supply is about equal to the demand. Most retailers are a little better natured these days, as they do not have to worry as much about obtaining stock as they did a fortnight ago.

NOTES.

A card announcing his safe arrival "over there" was received by Fred Holton of the Holton & Hunkel Co., October 27, from Henry Benz, at one time designer for this firm. He is not lonesome as Harold Baumgarten, local, and Louis Turner, Jr., of Kenosha, Wis., also left Camp Grant with him.

Conditions permitting, the regular florists' club meeting will be held November 7, but should it be deemed advisable, President Kennedy says he may postpone it to November 14. It will be chrysanthemum night and undoubtedly bring out a strong attendance.

The Wauwatosa Floral Co. was fortunate in coming in crop with a lot of early chrysanthemums, namely Smith's Advance and Golden Glow during the time when the market was exceedingly short, and consequently got theirs as to returns.

All the rain due during the summer and fall was delivered October 27, between the hours of 2 to 5. Now that the dust is thoroughly settled, we are inclined to hope, according to health officials, that the influenza will shortly be on a rapid decrease.

The Greenwood Carnation Co., at North Milwaukee, has now cutting a nice lot of carnations daily. The stock is in prime condition. Foreman Leo Thorpe was confined to his bed during the week of October 14 with the "flu." All over it by this time.

Hummel & Co., who a short time ago sold their greenhouses, have now also disposed of their supplies at their Third street store, consequently being out of the florists' business entirely.

J. M. Fox & Son, Inc., made a handsome casket cover of violets, lily of the valley, orchids, and adiantum, the fore part of last week, for the late Mrs. Fred Vogel.

According to Superintendent Kennedy, of the C. C. Pollworth Co.'s greenhouses, they again have water in abundance, due to heavy rains.

We are pleased to report that Gust Rusch and family, who have been on the sick list, are again O. K.

M. A. McKenney & Co., had an exceptionally busy time executing funeral orders last week.

Herman Arndt, Jr., of Wauwatosa, cut his first sweet peas this season, last week.

OCTOBER BEST IN MANY YEARS.

The past week started off with heavy business, but the demand weakened during the middle, recovering again toward the end. The principal factor has been funeral work with a generous sprinkling of bouquets for sick rooms. October should go on record as one of the best months in many years. The chrysanthemum receipts have increased materially and but for the heavy call there would have been a glut. Poms are also in heavy supply but move well. Dahlias continue to come in, but the quality as well as the quantity is weakening. Cosmos are about done for. The supply of roses is fair and they move at good figures. Snapdragons of good quality are seen in limited numbers and the first indoor sweet peas have made their appearance. Violets still show the effects of warm weather. As to greens, the market is fairly well supplied.

NOTES.

Oscar May and W. A. Rowe have been out hunting squirrels a number of times and have been promising some of the regulars some of their game. We are beginning to wonder if they really saw a squirrel and what their "game" really is.

A. Senger, the Bourdet Floral Co., G. B. Windler, Carl Beyer, John Held and Emil Schray are marketing very fine pot chrysanthemums. The average price, as it should be, is slightly better than last year.

The local retailers have made some very attractive displays calling attention to Halloween, some of the combinations including fruit and pumpkins.

GREATEST DEMAND IN YEARS.

Never before in the history of the local trade have the florists been so busy as they are at the present time. The high death rate, owing to the epidemic of Spanish influenza, is the chief cause of this. There is practically nothing else doing but funeral work, as the authorities have suspended all social activities. The large supply of flowers coming in cleans up in a satisfactory manner every morning. Roses are in heavy demand, particularly short and medium grade stock. There is no over-supply of any variety. No American Beauties are to be had, and very few Russell. Ophelia is the most prominent and most popular of all the varieties. The supply of chrysanthemums is very heavy, but the shipping and funeral work cleans up the market. Some grand Turner and yellow Turner are coming in. Chieftain is very fine and White Chieftain is one of the favorite sorts. Pompons are very plentiful and are about the only thing that drags. Carnations are in large supply, but of rather poor quality as yet. Gardenias are in moderate supply, with prices firm. Orchids are showing a little variety these days. Oncidium varicosum Rodgersii is very popular. Labiate is the best cattleya offered. Violets are in heavy supply, the recent rains proving of great benefit to this flower. Very few dahlias are seen now. Gladioli are still to be had and are largely used in funeral work. Zinnias are over for the season, and so are asters. Nearly all outdoor flowers are out of the market also. Cut cyclamens are coming in freely and sell well. The pot stock is being offered and meets with good sale. Ferns and asparagus are in short supply. All other greens are plentiful. Some very good Boston ferns are to be had. Kentias are plentiful in the smaller sizes. The Japanese umbrella pine is being largely featured by many of the stores in place of clipped boxwoods.

NOTES.

It is with the sincerest regret that we announce the sudden death of John De Baldi, for the past 20 years associated with Podesta & Baldocci. Johnny was one of the best-liked men in the retail trade in this city, and was only ill three days with Spanish influenza. He was a native of Italy, but had spent practically his whole life in this city, coming here when very young. A host of friends will miss him and the deepest sympathy goes out to his family.

Among the new chrysanthemums which have made a place for themselves commercially this season, Wm. H. Waite and Nagiroc stand out prominently. The beautiful coloring and stout neck of these varieties appealed to the buying public, and those who had these kinds to offer had no trouble of disposing of their stock at figures that were very remunerative.

At the E. W. McLellan Co.'s shipping headquarters on Bush street, heavy shipments of violets, chrysanthemums and roses are going forward every day. Manager J. A. Axell says business is very brisk and the enormous cut from the firm's greenhouses at Burlingame are cleaned up every day. Their violet shipments are particularly heavy just now.

George C. Roeding, president of the California Nursery Co., and also of the Fanches Creek Nurseries, is spending a few days here on business. Mr. Roeding is also president of the state board of agriculture. He reports prospects for the coming season's nursery trade as very encouraging.

The MacFarlane-McLaren Co.'s store is showing extremely well-grown Oncidium varicosum Rodgersii. These long sprays make a wonderful window display and are very effectively arranged. Business has never been so good at this period of the year, is their report.

Owing to the ravages of the influenza, the forces of the Art Floral Co. have been working day and night for the last week. They are so rushed in every department that they are having great difficulty in securing adequate help to take care of the increased business.

Ferri Bros. are sending in some excellent gardenias and Cattleya labiata. Both of these items are in great demand and are selling splendidly. They are also cutting heavily of roses. All their houses appear to be in fine shape for the coming season.

John Sievers, son of the late John H. Sievers, is now the traveling representative of H. Kooyman Co., of Bush street. Mr. Sievers was for many years a member of the retail trade in this city and will prove a valuable acquisition to the Kooyman Co.

Daniel and John O'Neill, two of our best-known nurserymen, have accepted positions with the Lynch Nursery Company at Menlo Park. John Birole, who has had charge of the firm's carnation houses, is in the army, and is training at Camp Lewis.

M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, was a caller last week. He reports trade as being rather quiet in the capital city. He visited all his growers before going back home. He was one of the leaders in the Sacramento Liberty Loan drive.

NO BREAK IN HEAVY DEMAND.

With the continued high death rate there does not seem to be any relief in the demand for flowers and all dealers have to work overtime and often refuse orders. The wholesale houses have a brisk call day and night, and so far have only been able to meet one-fourth of the requirements. Ordinarily the same amount of stock would have resulted in a glut. Prices still remain high, although American Beauties showed signs of weakening when the large chrysanthemums came in. The shorter grades, however, held fairly well. Carnations are now more plentiful and a great help. A light frost injured some of the dahlias, but shipments are expected in a few days. The growers of this flower both local and at outside points have had a very successful season, with prices higher than ever before. Special roses are not in very great demand but shorts move well and a daily cleanup is the general report. Ferns and all greens are short of actual needs. Some very good lily of the valley is now offered.

SUPPLY AND DEMAND NEAR BALANCE.

The great and unusual demand for funeral work, which has taxed to the utmost the facilities of the business, for the past month, has fallen considerably during the week just closed. While there is still a demand for flowers, mostly for victims of the influenza, and the business is considerably above normal for the season, yet the contrast with that of two or three weeks ago is very marked. The trade as a rule seems glad of the change, as so much work of this character was very depressing and many said it was getting on their nerves. The recent frosts finished most of the dahlias, and while the summer-like weather of the last few days is opening out some of the protected buds, and a few are still seen, they are over for the season. Chrysanthemums are now the dominating flower. They are coming in quantities from inside and outside and some of the bunch stock of the garden sorts is very good and finds a fair market. The greenhouse stock is fine, quite up to the standard of former years, and so far, has brought from a half to a third more than last year. The mid-season varieties are now in full assortment, all colors seeming to find a ready sale. The pompons and single sorts are selling well and quite a number appear to be well stocked with the newer kinds. The new crop orchid sweet peas are also making a bid for public favor. The quality is fine for the first of the season. The shipments are of good size and the market promises to be filled with them soon. Roses are also hurrying up to get in the good money that has been flying around so freely. All the varieties are in splendid form, very little mildew being seen. Double White Killarney, with 15 to 18 inch stems, are seen in some of the stocks, while special Ophelia, Hadley, Mock, Scott Key, Russell and Columbia are up to 24 inches, and some longer. Prices have softened considerably, particularly the specials. Shorts that were low at $6 last week are now selling for $4 per hundred, while $20 is top for the specials, except possibly a few Russells. American Beauties are quite plentiful and $40 is about the top. Carnations are not much in evidence, and hold their own at $6 for extras, while a few specials bring $8. Easter lilies are in fair supply and clean up at from 20 to 25 cents. If they paid when grown at 15 cents, which was the former high mark, bank accounts should surely fatten at 25 cents. Indoor calendulas of high grade are seen, but will not be in much demand until the chrysanthemums go out. Plenty of single violets are seen, which appear to sell quite well. Cattleyas are now in crop with all the orchid growers, yet there are none too many. There are still a few gladioli. Double cosmos, which is the latest addition to the list, is exceptionally fine. It will be largely grown next season. It is said to flower as freely as the singles, and easily brings double the price. It is really anemone-flowered, having a full-tufted center with but one outer row of petals. Hardy and dagger ferns are in great demand; they are $4 instead of $2 per thousand, the price a year ago. There are plenty of asparagus and autumn leaves.

October 28.—The day opened with a summer temperature of nearly 70 degrees. Shipments from the growers in all lines were full and plenty, roses and chrysanthemums being particularly noticeable. Carnations were also seen in larger quantities. Some of the growers, whose dahlia fields were in a measure protected, are still cutting some good flowers, which are, however, not now so welcome. Prices have dropped fully 20 per cent below those of last week. The stores say the extra funeral demand is now almost over, there being comparatively little work on for the first of the week.

the subscriptions of the previous loans looked almost impossible, as only florists, seedsmen and supply men were included. Chairman Arthur A. Niessen, however, said that while it was a big job, it could be put over, if the various committeemen did their part. Unfortunately, just at this time the epidemic of influenza struck the city and almost immediately every florist in town was engaged almost every minute of his time, day and night, in getting out orders for funeral work. Despite this handicap, however, a number of the workers did yeoman service. Chairman Nielsen was always on the job, encouraging the committeemen and helping out those who were unable to get about. Much of the success of the amount raised was due to his personal efforts. There were many surprises, both ways; several at $10,000, one of over $20,000, then eight, five, three, two, and a lot of one thousand dollar subscriptions kept coming in the last few days, which together with the great bulk of those below $500, finally took the amount over the top to the grand total of $420,000.

A MODEL PLACE.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons, 22nd and Diamond streets, is a model establishment. The alterations, raking and putting on new roofs at the home of Diamond street, made during the past summer, brought them up-to-date in every respect. They are ideal for the quick handling of decorative plants, and their gable ends, with the large glass, make fine show windows, through which the contents and whole interior of the houses can be seen. Several of the houses are filled with large decorative azaleas, which have made a splendid growth the past summer, and are well set with buds. This stock is planted outside out of pots in deep beds of peat in bright sunshine. Watering is by the overhead pipe system, which has been found very satisfactory. When lifted and potted in the fall, the plants appear to suffer little if any check and look as vigorous as the best of imported stock. Edward Habermehl, in charge of the houses and store here, in speaking of the recent great demand for funeral work, said he was glad it was on the wane; if it had kept up much longer, he felt he would hardly be equal to the task, not so much from the work involved, but that it was getting onto his nerves. A fac-simile spray, made on a mossed board about 8 by 15 inches, the boards used being taken from broken-up glass boxes, had made a great hit. This was first edged with sprays of foliage and green, and then filled with flowers quickly stuck in and finished with a ribbon in the center, on which can be placed an inscription. This has the advantage of the damp moss, which keeps the flowers fresher than the spray, while the plateau, or double spray effect, is very showy with comparatively few flowers.

NOTES.

John Welsh Young, Joseph Callahan and Charles H. Grakelow, who were all dangerously ill from the influenza, are getting along nicely and able to go about the house. James Hencock was taken ill with the disease while in New York, October 21, but managed to get home, and has since been confined to his bed. He was reported to be better October 26 and progressing nicely.
